She had thrown over her a loose cloak, and a bit of soft, clinging lace showed between its dark edges. Her brilliant hair was loosely gathered in a single braid, and in the moonlight it shone like beaten copper against the vivid pallor of her face. He sat stirless, smitten with confusion, conscious that a movement must betray him. A painful embarrassment enveloped him, a fastidious sense of shrinking from her sight of him. He felt a dull wave of resentment that an antic irony of circumstance should have brought them beneath the same roof, to make him seem the moody pursuer, the unwelcome trespasser on her reserve, and that now thrust him into a position which at any hazard he would have shunned. But all thought of himself, all feeling save one, vanished when, with sudden piteous abandon, she threw herself on her knees by the bench and broke into slow sobs, shuddering and tearless.

In that outbreak of emotion were not alone the pent up pain and humiliation she had suffered or the desperate joy of that evening's knowledge. There were in it, too, grief and compunction, dismay and doubt of the future. She was engaged to Austen Ware. Would Daunt ever forgive? Would he want her now? In the first realization of her error, wound with the knowledge that he was so near her, she had felt only joy, but in the silence of her room shock on shock had come the incredulous question, the burning revulsion. Awhile she had lain wide eyed, but at length, sleepless, she had stolen out to the balmy, fragrant night, craving its peace, longing passionately for its soft shadows and the hovering touch of the mountain's breath on her hair. And in its friendly shadows the gust of feeling had swept her from her feet.

The action took Daunt wholly by surprise. The sound tore his heart like a ruthless talon and drew a hoarse word from his lips:

"Barbara!" It was little more than a whisper, but she sprang erect with a gasp, her breath labored and terror stricken.

"I—I beg pardon," he said, with a dry catch in his throat. "Don't be frightened. I will go at once. I should not have stayed. But you came so suddenly, and I did not dream—I"—

A Word to the Mothers on Christmas

At a recent meeting of the Parent-Teachers Association, a strong protest was presented against the lavish expenditure of money on expensive and useless gifts for children and a plea made for the practical present.

A bank book enclosed in an attractive Christmas envelope will make a gift that is not only practical, but is wise and educational as well.

PLAINFIELD HIGH EASY FOR YONKERS HIGH

The Plainfield High School basketball team was defeated yesterday afternoon in the first game of the season by the Yonkers High School five at Yonkers by a score of 35 to 10. The defeat of the local players was largely due to poor team work. The Yonkers boys took a long lead in the first half by fast team work and accurate shooting. They found the basket in quick succession in this period and scored twenty points, while Peacock made the only score for P. H. S. by shooting one goal.

In the second half Plainfield played a faster game, being more accustomed to the court. The locals held Yonkers to only six goals and two foul goals in this period, while MacNamee, Ricketts and VanZandt each threw one goal from play. Ricketts who played a hard game in this half, also took advantage of two fouls. Woodhull took the place of Nash in the second half at guard and held his man to no score.

The lineup:

Plainfield—Forwards, Ricketts, MacNamee; center, Peacock; guards, Nash, Woodhull, VanZandt.

Yonkers—Forwards, John, Engles; center, Wallace; guards, Williams, Barnes.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

Hats off to Hank O'Day, the umpire manager. Herrmann created a big surprise when he appointed O'Day. Some say that there may be more truth than fiction in a report that O'Day was selected because anyone who can stand the gibes of 20,000 rooters should be able to suffer the prods of Cincinnati and live through them.

Sailor Burke, of Brooklyn, had so much the better of Billy Uvick, the "Nebraska Thunderbolt," last night, in a scheduled ten-round bout at the Royale Atheltic Club, Brooklyn, that the Western fighter quit at the end of the ninth round. Uvick started out strongly and forced the pace until the fifth, when a blow closed his left eye. There were no knockdowns.

Ban Johnson says that he is not going to let out Umpires Egan or Westervelt, and that he is likely to keep all of the men that he had on the staff last year. The report that he was going to cut off one of the men has been troubling the umpires quite a little since the close of the season.

The six-day riders are stil behind the record. At 10 o'clock last night they were seven miles and one lap in the rear. At that hour they had traveled 1,157 miles and 2 laps, against the old record, made by Rutt and Stol in 1909, of 1,165 and 1 lap.

Thomas J. Lynch Re-elected.

Reward, and not extinction, is the portion of President Lynch for the courageous fight he has made for clean baseball. Mr. Lynch was yesterday re-elected president of the National League, in spite of the threats of those whose players had fallen under the lash of his discipline during the playing season. Only two votes could be mustered against Mr. Lynch, Presidents Fogel and Ebbets, of the Philadelphia and Brooklyn clubs, remaining unshaken in their opposition.

Borough High Boys Defeated.

The North Plainfield High School basketball team was overwhelmingly defeated yesterday by the Rahway High School five. The final score was 57 to 7. The borough boys failed to have even a "look-in" and were outplayed in every department. Rahway had the ball in its possession almost all the time and shot at will. W. Taylor and Townley, two members of the borough team, were put out of the game early in the first half by injuries.

"WHY PICK THE GIANTS FOR THE GOAT?" ASKS BRUSH.

The baseball war which exists on paper between the American and National Leagues went merrily on yesterday, but indications were plentiful that it was to be a war of words only.

Unofficially, both major leagues laughed at the prospect of a real encounter between the millions of dollars invested in each.

The world's series ticket scandal continued to hold the spotlight. President Brush, of the New York Giants, who made public his report to the national commission on the scandal, addressed a letter to Ban Johnson, asking him to explain a few things alleged to have happened to the pasteboards in Philadelphia.

"Why pick the Giants for the goat?" Mr. Brush asks, among other things. "While dilating upon the outrage perpetrated upon the New York public through misdirection and collusion with ticket speculators, why do you not explain how in Philadelphia ten persons absorbed over 5,000 tickets, an average of 500 each, and sixty-three others absorbed 3,000 tickets, an average of fifty each."

Incidentally, Mr. Brush's letter says that there were no street speculators in New York during the world's series—"it being unlawful."

Providence Club Sold.

It was reliably reported that Frank Navin, owner of the Detroit American League club, has purchased the Providence club, of the International League, for the sum of $65,000. The papers, it is said, will be signed shortly.

EQUAL SUFFRAGISTS HAVE BUSY SESSION

An executive board meeting of the Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield was held at the headquarters in the Babcock building yesterday afternoon, when among other matters discussed was a change of hour for the study class in connection with the civics class held under the auspices of the Equal Suffrage League and conducted by Miss Mary Philbrook, the first woman lawyer to be admitted to the bar of New Jersey. The study class, which in future is to be held at 3:30 p. m. on the Friday preceding Miss Philbrook's lecture, is conducted by a member of the civics class, and is open to all interested in the good government of our city and State. Matters of interest to Plainfield at present before the Legislature will be fully taken up by Miss Philbrook at her next lecture and questions concerning such legislation may be prepared and discussed at the next study class.

A lecture by Mrs. Florence Howe Hall on her mother, Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, will be given under the auspices of the league in January. This lecture should be of very special interest to all for the life of such a woman as Julia Ward Howe must be an inspiration to everyone whether interested in woman's suffrage or otherwise.

The recent activities of the Suffrage party in England came up for discussion and in explanation of what seems to many as rather extreme measures the following letter addressed to the Editor of the Sun was read:

"It may interest those who care for the enfranchisement of women to hear from an American woman who was present at the meeting held in London on November 21 to protest against the action of the Government in introducing a manhood suffrage bill which destroys all hope of passing the conciliation bill, which would have given a limited franchise to women.

"After the entirely unsatisfactory reply given by Mrs. Asquith to the deputations of the suffrage societies when he received them on Friday, November 17, the leaders of the Women's Social and Political Union decided that they must make a public protest against the shameful way in which they were being treated.

"A meeting was called at Caxton Hall for the evening of the next Tuesday, and it was announced that a deputation of women would attempt to go from that meeting to the House of Commons to lay their grievances before the members of Parliament. The assembling of the delegation, the spirit of high resolve and absolute forgetfulness of self which animated the women, the order and despatch with which the separate deputations were sent forth were all very remarkable; but the kind of women who went and the temper of the crowd which watched them all the evening as they struggled to reach their goal were the most wonderful things. Such a splendid set of women, some poor and plain, some high bred and richly dressed, some ignorant, and some the most learned of the land, all forgetting class distinctions and stupid conventionalities, and ready to sacrifice themselves in any way to help the cause to which they are devoted.

"The English women with whom I followed the deputation to Parliament Square were both doctors, full of zeal but unable to give up their practice and risk going to prison just at this time. The great crowd in Parliament Square and all the surrounding streets was full of sympathy, and we heard no jeers or taunts, only exclamations from men, 'We're here to see fair play!' 'Which way do you want to go, lydies? We'll see you through' and when one girl cried out, 'What do you mean? Call yourselves lydies, and throw stones. You must be mad!' a man in the crowd called back, 'Keep quiet; don't judge them by their actions, they mean right.' That seemed to me to express the whole temper of the crowd. They all felt we meant right, and with a little urging a great mob of men could have been stirred to action.

"The restraint and order with which the groups of women one after another tried to get through the cordons of police who surrounded the Houses of Parliament, the quiet firmness with which the police arrested them and took them off until the police station overflowed and the streets near were blocked with these gentle women under arrest, the speed and skill with which the force of women appointed to break windows went forth and smashed the glass not only in the Government buildings but in the shop windows of the electors who are responsible for keeping the present Government in office, all this was a revelation, and the wonder of it all was more than continued by the proceedings in the police court during the next days.

"It was extraordinary to stand in that dingy little court room and see woman after woman refuse to pay her trifling fire and submit to the hardship and suffering of confinement in an English prison in winter, and hear these beautiful, refined voices saying, 'We must do this as a protest against the way women in England are treated by the Government.' A workman near me exclaimed: 'I had to pinch my leg hard not to applaud when Mrs. Lawrence said that.' This feeling af admiration and respect was general.

"I long to make Americans realize a little of the spirit their English sisters are showing and the way the English public is meeting them.

FIGHT ON FOR HEAD OF COMMON COUNCIL.

The announcement yesterday that Councilman George H. Schlotterer, president of the Elizabeth Democratic Club, would be a candidate for president of the Elizabeth City Council to succeed Edward Nugent, who is a candidate for re-election, has created a stir. There is a well-defined rumor that Mr. Schlotterer's candidacy is a part of a movement to retain in office Street Commissioner N. K. Thompson, whom Mayor Stein and Mr. Nugent have planned to replace.

It is said that Mr. Schlotterer believes that he controls six votes in Council and that he can get two more, which would be enough to cause a deadlock. Mr. Nugent and his friends say they are not disturbed over the opposition.

There is a possibility that some of the members of the majority in Council may refuse to go into a caucus. If such proves the case there promises to be a lively fight on the floor and perhaps a combining of forces by one faction with the two Socialist members and some of the Republicans.

Martin Going to Rochester.

Jack Martin, formerly of the Plainfield team, who played in the Virginia League, last season, and who has been held under reserve by the Highlanders, has been turned over to the Rochester Eastern League club for next season. Martin made good in the south last season, his batting and fielding average being unusually good.

GARBAGE DISPOSAL

Charles S. Powell Points Out Need of Sanitary Municipal [System Here.

Following is a communication received from Charles S. Powell, of North Plainfield, a consulting engineer, regarding the necessity of a municipal garbage disposal plant for Plainfield:

Editor, The Daily Press:

As a resident of Plainfield, and one who has the best interests of the city at heart, I am moved to call your attention to the necessity for some definite action to be taken by the city authorities to improve the condition of Plainfield with reference to the collection and disposal of garbage and refuse.

At present there is no definite system provided. Licenses are issued to individuals who apply for permission to collect and cart away garbage, ashes and refuse. These collectors then apply to the householders for contracts for removing the refuse; obtaining what they can from each householder for the service performed.

As might naturally be expected, this system results in unsatisfactory conditions, both from the standpoint of the householder and from the standpoint of the city. The collections are very irregular and cannot be depended upon. Many citizens feel unable to go to the expense of having the material carted away, and are obliged to carry the garbage and ashes to the nearest vacant lot. It would seem that it is time this question was taken under consideration, and a suitable method adopted for the regular collection and disposal of all classes of municipal refuse.

Plainfield has a population of 25,000 and its financial condition is strong. There should be no question as to the city's ability to spend the necessary money to make the conditions in this respect second to none in the land.

I have been investigating the methods adopted by other cities, and find most of the cities of Europe have adopted a method in incineration of all classes of municipal refuse at high temperature in furnaces which are called "destructors." We have personally inspected some of the plants.

About six years ago New York city started in to investigate this question, and sent one of its engineers to all the principal cities in the United States and then to a number of cities in Europe to secure information to enable it to decide upon the best method of refuse disposal. As a result of this investigation the city decided that the high temperature destructor was the only sanitary method, and was at the same time the most economical.

Under this system the householder maintains but one refuse can, into which is deposited household ashes, kitchen garbage, paper, rags, bottles, tins, etc., in fact everything that must be disposed of. It is found that the ashes in the can, on account of the lye and potash in them, retard the decomposition of the garbage in hot weather and prevent its freezing in the cans in winter. While in the can the ashes and light refuse become thoroughly moistened, so that when the can is dumped into the collecting cart no dust arises. The mixed refuse is burned in the destructor without the use of any additional fuel and without creating any smoke, odor or dust. Such a plant can therefore be located at any point in a city, which will minimize the length of haul. This is of great advantage, as the cost of collection is the largest item connected with the disposal of the refuse.

Not only is the mixed refuse burned without additional fuel, but it is made to take the place of fuel, for the heat of combustion is utilized to generate steam power, and, judging from the practice in Europe and elsewhere, I am confident that the power so derived would be sufficient to light the greater portion, if not all, of our streets.

If it is not deemed advisable to use the power for this purpose steam mains could be laid through the streets, and heat and power could be supplied to factories, stores and residences. The cities who are using this system have found that the revenue from the power produced by a disposal plant is sufficient to pay not only the operating expenses of the plant, but also to take care of the sinking fund, bond interest and maintenance charges.

The plant also produces another valuable by-product called "clinker." This is used for making artificial stone, sidewalk slabs, curbs, etc., also for street and elevator foundations and all concrete work.

New York city after having used one of these plants for four years is now installing a second large plant. Buffalo has also put in a second plant after a successful experience of several years with the first plant.

MEN'S CLUB HEARS OF 'BIG BROTHER' IDEA

A discussion of the "Big Brother" movement occupied the attention of the Seventh-Day Baptist church men's club at the regular monthly meeting, last night. A large attendance was noted, despite the inclement weather, as an invitation had been extended to similar organizations throughout the city.

The speaker of the evening was Clyde Oswald, of Brooklyn, president of the American Printer Company. He referred principally to the "Big Brother" idea as it is applied to the work among reformatories and children's institutions. He presented many interesting facts, helped out by a set of specially secured stereopticon slides. The talk was followed by an informal discussion.

Musical features for the evening were provided by Arthur L. Titsworth, who gave two selections on the organ and Charles P. Titsworth, who sang two solos. The regular entertainment committee of the club was in charge.

SCHOOL PUPILS TO GIVE CHRISTMAS CORONATION

The children of the seventh grade of the Irving School, assisted by other members of the school, will give an entertainment and play, entitled "A Christmas Coronation," at the school, Tuesday afternoon and evening, December 19. The proceeds will be used for the purchase of a stereopticon for the school. The admission is ten and fifteen cents, children being charged ten cents. The program is under the direction of Miss Genevieve Petrie, principal. Miss Elsie Knowlton will be the pianist and Charles L. Lewis conductor of singing. The program follows:

Part 1—Song, Happy Christmas, pupils of sixth grade; exercise, Christmas Greetings, pupils of 2-a grade; recitation, The Christmas Saint, Warner Neff; song, Star of the Orient, pupils of fifth grade; exercise, To Make Christmas, pupils of 1-a grade; exercise, The Happiest Time, pupils of 3-a grade; folk dance, We're a Merry Party, twelve girls of sixth and seventh grade.

GIVES TRAVELOGUE

J. Dunbar Wright's Talk on Algeria and Tunisia Superbly Illustrated.

Those who were privileged to attend the illustrated lecture given by J. Dunbar Wright at the Plainfield High School last night enjoyed a rare treat. It described a trip taken by Mr. Wright in an automobile through Algeria and Tunisia, including the country of "The Garden of Allah" made famous by the story of that name written by Robert Hichens and which has since been presented in dramatized form with such remarkable success.

The views, more than one hundred, were all taken by Mr. Wright, and then with his artistic hand transformed into the natural colors of the country shown. The first part of the trip took the audience over the magnificent roads, through the gorges of the Atlas Mountains, showing the bridges built by the Romans 600 years after Christ. Leaving the mountains the tourists went directly south, passing through many picturesque villages to Biskra, the home of the scenes of "The Garden of Allah."

This garden, an artificial one, was shown in all its rare beauty by sunlight and moonlight. The pictures included street scenes of Biskra, caravans coming in from the desert. Leaving Biskra the party visited other oasis villages of more or less interest to an artist and tourist as the various phases of life on the desert were seen.

Among the pictures shown were some taken of Mohammedan priests, exceedingly difficult to obtain, because of the sacredness of the men. Mr. Wright made a feature of individual and family groups of children, being particularly attracted to them because of their natural charm. Pictures were then shown of ancient Tunis, which has a population of about 150,000, some of the people still living in houses built thousands of years ago. Modern Tunis with its very much larger population has beautiful hotels, a large school conducted by the French government and modern shops, all of which were depicted among the beautiful views.

Mr. Wright said that a small coin would usually secure the permission of the father to photograph the beautiful daughter. The wonderful lights and shadows that would penetrate dark interiors made charming pictures which Mr. Wright reproduced with remarkable accuracy as to detail. Perhaps, the most admired of the views were those of the gorges and the scenes of the caravans crossing the desert in the twilight. The coloring, so true to nature, was a revelation to those not familiar with the intense sun and moonlight in desert countries.

Accompanying Mr. Wright on his journey were native guides. The party had two large touring cars, but light runabout cars were used for short trips about the oasis villages, thus meaning a great saving on tires on the larger cars.

Mr. Wright said that the tourist appreciates the progress made in irrigation throughout that country. The automobilist, he said, in his travels was exceedingly glad to meet women carrying water and accept the opportunity to get a drink as well as use the water to cool off their automobile tires. Frequently throughout the lecture Mr. Wright was interrupted with outbursts of applause.

The lecture was given for the benefit of Muhlenberg Hospital and a considerable sum will be realized for that institution, as the high school auditorium was filled with patrons, who appreciated the treat given them by Mr. Wright.

GOOD FELLOWS NOW NUMBER NEARLY 250

The army of Good Fellows has more than doubled in number since yesterday. Then there were 113 and today the army is composed of exactly 242. Among the recruits today is another Sunday school class. Still another is a mother, who recently lost her little child and wishes to make some child of about the same age happy on Christmas morn. One of the charter members of the order writes again that he will provide for twelve poor little tots. And so it goes.

STUDENTS INSPECTED LOCAL POULTRY FARM

Ninety students of the State Agriculture College, New Brunswick, who are pursuing a course in poultry culture, came to Plainfield yesterday afternoon in two special trolley cars and visited the Onalake Poultry Farm on Rahway road. This farm is considered a model one, and was selected out of a number as offering the best advantages for practical work. Sigfried Arens has about 3,000 White Leghorns on his place. The students were in charge of Profs. Lewis, Davis and Clark.

After the visitors had made an inspection of the farm, Mr. Arens gave an interesting and practical talk on "The Feeding of Poultry," explaining the best methods for obtaining results. The students remained here about two hours.

EDESON IN 'THE ARAB' TO BE HERE TOMORROW

With Edgar Selwyn's play of the Orient, "The Arab," as his starring vehicle, Robert Edeson appears at the Plainfield theatre Saturday, December 16, matinee and evening. Mr. Edeson comes surrounded by a cast of superior merit, including the more important members of the original company, and the Syrians and Armenians who supply the oriental atmosphere with their native dress, conversation and chants. Additions to the original cast are Mary Ryan and Sydney Ainsworth. The "Arab" is brimful of action, of the stirring, red-blooded kind, and Mr. Selwyn's hero, Jamil Abdallah Azam, has been made an admirable son of the desert by the capable handling of Mr. Edeson. It has remained for Mr. Edeson to give the role just the touch of humanism required to make a great play of "The Arab," and reports from cities in which he has appeared in the part indicate that Mr. Edeson has given the character the proper turn. There is also a pretty love story worked out during the exciting times attendant upon a proposed massacre of Christians planned by the Turkish governor of the Syrian province in which the action has been located by the author. This is worked out in Mr. Edeson's own style and in harmony with the role portrayed. The wonderful stage pictures not only enhance the interest in the story but are a treat in themselves to those unable to travel to distant countries, for they give a true and adequate idea of that quaint country in which Christ lived in Biblical days.

POST OFFICE RUSH

Christmas Mail Keeps the Clerks and Carriers Stepping Lively These Days.

The annual Christmas activity at the postoffice is daily increasing as the glad day draws near. In fact its approach has been felt for some weeks, particularly in the money order and registry departments, but after today a falling off in these branches is looked for as today is the last on which money and gifts can be sent to foreign countries and reach their destination by Monday, December 25. The domestic orders and registry business, however, will keep the clerks busy, the volume of matter to be handled increasing as each day passes.

The new registry stamp put on sale the first of this month is proving to be a source of annoyance to the clerks because the public does not yet fully understand its purpose. The general impression seems to be that when one of these stamps is placed on an envelope, it is just the same as registering the letter. This is not so. The same formality has to be gone through, such as giving the name and address of the sender and putting on stamps to cover the postage, just the same as before the special stamp was issued. In fact it is not necessary to purchase this stamp to register a letter, the regular stamps being acceptable as in the past.

That currency sent to foreign countries by money orders this year exceeds by several hundreds of dollars the amount transmitted last year. During the past ten days more than $15,000 worth of these drafts were issued by William B. Sharp in charge of this department. In addition to this a great many registered letters containing money was forwarded. These wealth laden letters were addressed to all parts of the world, one of them even to Egypt, but for the most part they will gladden the homes in Ireland, Germany, England, Scotland, France an Italy.

In addition to the fund that will be distributed over the last named country through the postoffice, Michael Colucci, of Richmond street, told a reporter for The Daily Press this morning that the amount he has forwarded for his countrymen to that land is larger than last year. This is because of a larger number of drafts he has written and for larger amounts than formerly.

The New York postoffice, up to yesterday, accepted to carry through the mails $4,250,000 destined for the Christmas stockings of 258,931 persons who live on the other side of the Atlantic, and this amount promised to be doubled before the last big liner to reach the other shore on time sails from that port tomorrow.

MR. AND MRS. GOW ENTERTAIN AT "500."

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gow, of West Fifth street, entertained forty friends at their home last night, the occasion being his birthday anniversary. The evening was spent in playing "500" and many excellent scores were made. At the conclusion of play the honors for the women were presented to Mrs. W. W. Warnock, Mrs. Elizabeth Woodhard, Mrs. Walter Apgar and Mrs. Arthur McVoy. The honors for the men went to William R. Causebrook, William Cochran, W. W. Warnock and Walter Apgar.

During the social hour which followed Mr. Gow was presented with a handsome set of dishes. This feature was a complete surprise, but Mr. Gow was equal to the occasion and made a happy response. Mr. Gow received the congratulations of the guests and the guests in departing wished him many returns of the day. Refreshments were served during the evening.

Miss Emma Brokaw, who has been a resident of this city for the past fifteen years, passed away at an early hour this morning at her home, 104 East Ninth street, following an illness of ten weeks, which was serious from the first. It is the belief, nowever, that nothing definite was decided on as Mr. Clark stated today that he had no information to give out and must at this time decline to answer all questions. All the councilmen were present and they referred all who made inquiries regarding the caucus to Mr. Clark.

Her share will be approximately $7,000 in addition to a residential property, the deed to which she received some time ago. The other heirs reside in New York city and Germany.

Both Miss Runkle and Mr. Brooks have been prominent in the younger society set in this city, attending the numerous social functions. They are also members of the Plainfield Country Club.

WATER CO. SAYS NO

City's Offer to Purchase Plant For Approximately Half Million Declined.

The Plainfield-Union Water Company has communicated with the special water committee of the Common Council declining the offer of an approximate half million dollars for its plant and equipment on behalf of the city. It was not unexpected. Councilman F. E. Mygatt, chairman of the committee, announced this fact at the adjourned meeting of the Council last night, adding that a report would be prepared and presented at another meeting.

A communication was received from the State Board of Health relative to the proposed improvements of the sewage beds and extension of the sewage system in this city, the plans of the city having been filed with that body. It was stated that the State Board of Health would grant a public hearing on the same in Trenton Wednesday morning, December 27, at 11 o'clock as already told in this paper. The city will be represented at the hearing.

The bill of William A. Coddington for $888.50 for legal services rendered during the time that the city was without a corporation counsel and which had been disapproved by Mayor G. W. V. Moy, was again presented last night and after a recess, it was ordered paid on motion of Councilman Herbert Buxton. Councilman F. L. Holt was excused from voting when the bill was first presented on the ground that he was not fully acquainted with it. It was then laid over for a time and considered in recess.

Another bill disapproved by the Mayor on the ground it was for services which he thought should be rendered by Building Inspector T. O. Doane, was that of Frank A. Neal for $49.50 for making an inspection of the public school buildings of the city. Councilman Duncan W. Taylor, chairman of the fire and building committee, explained that he had had a talk with the Mayor and did not think that the latter fully understood the matter.

Mr. Taylor said that this particular inspection was required by the State Board of Education, and it was made by Mr. Neal upon the suggestion of Dr. Henry M. Maxson, superintendent of schools. Mr. Taylor further explained that because of his other duties, Chief Doane did not have time to make the inspection. Mr. Neal's bill represented ninety nine hours work at 50 cents an hour. It was paid on motion of Mr. Taylor.

Winfield S. Angleman in a letter explained his bill for $150 previously rendered, explaining that the services were performed for the poor department upon the authority of Councilman F. L. Montgomery, and represented only work performed in court. The bill was referred to the finance committee, but no further report was made last night.

Councilman W. L. Gloak, chairman of the sewer committee, presented a report and preliminary plans prepared by George W. Fuller, engineer, for the improvement of the sewage system here. They were accepted and filed, and official action was taken referring the plans to the State Board of Health for approval.

The Plainfield Board of Health again communicated with the Council relative to the city water supply, stating that in its opinion its is absolutely necessary that steps be taken to prevent the pumping of South Plainfield water into this city without permission, and urging that analysis of the water be made from time to time. The board expressed satisfaction over the announcement that the water company is to install filters at the plant. The communication was referred to the proper committee.

Mayor Moy in a communication informed the Council that the Public Service Corporation had offered $139.15 to the city covering damages to Chief Doane's automobile caused by a collision with a trolley car on West Front street, and if it met with the Council's approval he suggested it be accepted. This was done on motion of Councilman Taylor.

Mr. Buxton offered a resolution authorizing the transfer of a deed to the property at 901-937 Sherman avenue to the Misses Sarah T. and Harriet T. Manning, who purchased it under the terms of the Martin Act. Several appeals from tax assessments were presented and referred to the finance committee. Thy will take the usual course.

The contract between the city and Charles A. Peterson for sewer extension work was presented and filed. The bond of George R. Rockefeller as constable was presented and recorded. The Council adjourned to meet again on December 31.

NO PHTHISIS HOSPITAL FOR MORRIS COUNTY.

The proposition for a hospital for tuberculosis patients in Morris county was killed, for the present at least, by the Morris county Board of Freeholders Wednesday afternoon, when a majority of a special committee on the question reported against the project. A minority report was also offered.

The majority who declared against such an institution were Edward D. Neighbour, C. R. DeHart and Frank C. Carle. On the minority side were Dr. Livingston Farrand and Robert D. Foots.

In declaring against a tubercular hospital the majority of the committee said that the situation was in no way alarming. On the other hand the two members of the committee in the minority stated that there were 400 or 500 tubercular patients in the county with practically no place to be cared for. Both reports were referred to the finance committee without comment.

By a margin of one pin the Newark bowlers escaped a triple defeat in an Elks' League match on their own alleys with the champion New Brunswick quintet. In the last game the Newark five rolled 866, New Brunswick getting 865. New Brunswick accounted for 1,026 in the first game, Newark rolling 932. In the second affair the visitors, with 913, were well to the fore. Hirsch accounted for 245 in the first game. Burton rolled 221 and Greenewald got in 205. Harkins in the second game had 201. George Blum tallied 234 for the Newarks. Weingarth had 205 and Leis 201. Here are all the scores:

The record for ninety-six hours in a six-day race is 1871 miles 3 laps, made by Walthour and Collins in 1909.

Thirteen teams were still in the six-day cycle race on the Madison Square Garden track in Manhattan when the fourth day's riding closed at midnight.

The leading teams were exactly one mile behind the world's record. The fast riding early yesterday morning and the steady pace set most of the day resulted in the field getting ahead of former best figures at 8 o'clock last night, and they were still ahead. At 10 o'clock they had fallen back again.

The Van Houwaert-Lapize team dropped another lap shortly after 11 o'clock and thus fell to even terms with Galvin and Wiley, who are two laps behind the leaders. The Lorenz-Saldow team is now the only foreign pair on even terms with the seven American teams.

Tenney to Be Let Out.

President John M. Ward, of the Boston Nationals has decided to take his time in selecting a team manager for next year. It is believed that Fred Tenney, who already has signed a contract, will receive his release and a year's salary, $5,000. At present it looks as if John Kling, Bill Sweeney or Mike Donlin would be Ward's final selection unless he can induce Edward Hanlon to assume the task. Ward said yesterday that he would make Boston his home and would practise law there, in addition to conducting the affairs of the club. Owner James E. Gaffney and Ward will visit Boston next week to look over the South End plant, which, it is said, will receive a greater seating capacity. Later on the club will build a new ball park or make terms with the Boston American League club by which the new Red Sox park, now building, can be used for the home games.

—Rev. Dr. W. H. Nillson, of East Ninth street, will preach at the church of the Heavenly Rest Sunday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock.

Montgomery, Ala., has a plant taking care of all the refuse of the city, and Milwaukee, Wis., has operated for two years a plant of this description, destroying 300 tons of refuse per day. The power from this latter plant is used to operate two large city pumping stations. Westmount, Can., has two of these plants, the power from which is used to light the streets. Ottawa, Calgary, Moosejaw and Vancouver, all in Canada, have these plants, also Seattle, Washington. San Francisco has just adopted this system, and is installing two very large plants, and Havana, Cuba, is installing a plant to burn all the refuse of the city amounting to 500 tons per day. All of the power produced is bought by the local electric company, which will in consequence burn no coal in the future. Paterson, N. J., officials have been investigating this subject for the past year, and as a result have just awarded a contract for a plant of sixty tons daily capacity.

This subject is one that deserves the earnest attention of all seriously minded citizens, and in our opinion the question of a garbage disposal plant is more important to the community than the purchase of the local water company system.

In closing I wish to summarize the advantages of a garbage disposal installation:

First, but one collection of garbage and refuse is necessary.

Second, property holders need supply but one receptacle for holding all refuse.

Third, the regularity of service and convenience of same are insured prompt collections.

Fourth, the sanitary condition of the city is improved by the abolishment of garbage and refuse dumps.

Fifth, change in method of colection does away with the multiplicity of garbage carts and avoids the dust nuisance and scattering of garbage and ashes through the streets.

Sixth, the self-supporting feature of such a plant is one of great importance.

Yours truly,
CHARLES S. POWELL.

TAX BOARD HEARS ASSESSMENT APPEALS.

The Union County Board for the Equalization of Taxes met in the Common Council rooms yesterday and listened to several appeals in the matter of tax assessments. The Columbus Club claimed exemption under an act exempting churches, charitable and educational properties. Its appeal was dismissed. T. H. Cuming was granted a reduction of $225 on his property at 1012 Putnam avenue, assessed for $5,550, it was claimed was the value of the property.

Benjamin Wood's assessment of $18.50 for personal property was cancelled because it was shown that he has no property in the city. Geo. B. Zimmer, of 443 East Fifth street, was denied a reduction on his assessment of $200. An assessment of $3,000 on the property of the Plainfield Cement Company was not changed and W. G. Hockridge's appeal from an assessment of $2,400 was denied. Decision was reserved in the appeal of Eliza E. Kenyon on an assessment of $26,000 on her property. The Salvation Army filed an appeal, but it was shown that no assessment had been made.

Neuman Bros. the Purchasers.

The valuable property at Watchung avenue and East Fifth street, owned by the Estate of Joseph Wright, which was purchased yesterday at public auction by Charles H. Lyman for $19,150, was bought for Neuman Bros., the grocers, who now occupy the opposite corner. It is the proposed plan of the firm to remove its business to its newly-acquired property in the near future.

Will Visit New Brunswick.

Members of Miantonomo Tribe, No. 118, Improved Order Red Men, will leave on the 6:45 trolley for New Brunswick, tonight, where the crack degree teams of Onas Tribe, of Trenton, and Pamrapaugh Tribe, of Bayonne, will work the adoption degree at a special meeting of Awaga and Onomoo Tribes, of New Brunswick.

like everything else, is cheapest when you get the best, for your garments are cleaned and pressed better—and therefore the work lasts longer and is better for your clothing or household furnishings.

Besides a saving, good cleaning is sanitary. Since this is so, get the best, for handwork in small tubs is sure to carry some dirt along from other clothing belonging to other people.

You don't experience anything of that nature in a first-class place.

PASTORS IN SUBURBS TO JOIN LOCAL ASS'N

The Plainfield Ministers' Association at the December meeting in the Y. M. C. A., yesterday amended the constitution so that ministers residing in the vicinity of Plainfield may become members. Heretofore only clergymen of Plainfield and North Plainfield were eligible, and now those residing at Scotch Plains, New Market, Dunellen and South Plainfield will be privileged to join the association.

An incomplete report was received from a committee appointed to investigate the work of the Rescue Mission and it was decided that more definite information be obtained. A plan has been proposed for putting the mission in a position to receive the united support of the Protestant churches.

The question of the Union Good Friday service for next year was discussed briefly and Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson and Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire were appointed a committee to arrange for it. Herbert E. Parker, general secretary of the Y. M. C. A. presented a brief report of the progress of the "Men and Religion Movement."

OFFER FIFTY DOLLARS FOR NAME FOR HOTEL

Fifty dollars in gold has been offered as a prize to the person who shall first suggest the most suitable name that shall be selected for the new half-million dollar hotel, now in course of construction on the ocean front block bounded by Kingsley street, Sixth, Seventh and Ocean avenues, Asbury Park, for the Asbury Park Hotel and Realty Company.

According to the announcement of the company's prize offer, all names suggested for the hotel should be in writing, and should be mailed to the Asbury Park Hotel and Realty Company, Asbury Park, New Jersey, where they will be filed by the secretary in the order received, with date and hour of receipt marked thereon; where a name is suggested by more than one person, preference will be given the person who first suggested it.

Under the conditions of the prize offer, the contest will close at 12 o'clock noon, January 15, and after due consideration of all names submitted, a selection will be made by a majority vote of the directors, the company reserving the right, however, to reject all names suggested if they should be deemed unsuitable.

The new hotel, with its courts and gardens, will occupy the entire block, which is about three hundred and fifty feet by two hundred and fifty feet in size. It will be built of brick, seven stories high, somewhat on the Spanish mission style of architecture, having white stucco finish, with red brick trimmings and a red tile roof.

The hotel will be equipped with steam heat, hot and cold fresh and sea water baths, and will contain in addition to other public rooms, sun parlors (steam heated in winter), palm room, lounging rooms, stock brokers' office, telegraph office, and local and long distance telephones connecting with all sleeping rooms, of which there will be over four hundred. There will also be a large a la carte dining room seventy feet by forty-five feet in size; in fact, it is intended that the hotel shall have every modern convenience.

Feature Acts at Proctor's.

Several fine acts are being featured at Proctor's theatre this week, including the Knickerbocker Quartet, return engagement, which is one of the best ever heard here. You should hear them sing "That Mysterious Rag," and "That Fussy Rag." Hugh Lloyd & Co., bounding wire artists, are wonders. Lloyd's feats of doing a somersault while playing a violin and jumping through a hoop are marvelous. The Teiches, comedy magicians, in their burlesque on the magical art is funny; Marion Kay, charming impersonator of characters, and Whittier, Ince & Co., in a sketch, "The Doctor's Dilemma," one big laugh, comprise a fine bill. The wonderful biograph picture, "The Battle," shown yesterday, has been held over for today.

Conroy; prelate, George Egel; sergeant at arms, William Anderson; inner guard, David Kelly; outer guard, William Lafferty; secretary, Charles L. Kling; treasurer, Charles L. HIS PALATE WAS FIREPROOF.

Assemblyman Brennan, author of the cold storage law, said the other day in Albany to a reporter:

"A recent examination of the cold storage plants in New York city showed that in twelve storage houses alone there were stored 7,300,000 pounds of poultry and meat, 4,500,000 pounds of fish, 2,000,000 pounds of cheese, 6,000,000 pounds of butter and 300,000 cases of eggs. This food should be labeled as what it is. It shouldn't be sold to the public as fresh food at the price of fresh food; for it isn't fresh food, and, though it looks all right, its taste is all wrong—except to such people as are blessed with the palate of Jim Jimison.

"Jim Jimison," Mr. Brennan explained, "was a hard drinker up Ithaca way. One evening Jim stopped at the tavern for a dram, tossed it off and departed calmly. But, after he was gone, the tavern-keeper discovered that in place of applejack he had given Jim a drink out of the sulphuric acid bottle that was kept to clean the verdigris off the brass taps.

"The tavern-keeper couldn't sleep that night, but the next morning, to his unspeakable relief, Jim dropped in for another dram before breakfast, apparently none the worse for his dose of poison.

"'Jim,' said the tavern-keeper, 'what did you think of that applejack I sold you last night?'

"'Oh, it was fine stuff, said Jim; 'good, warmin' stuff. It had only one fault. Every time I coughed it set my whiskers afire.'"

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

Wilton Lackaye will begin his New York engagement at the Bijou theatre Monday night, December 22, in "The Stranger," a comedy drama in three acts which has won the endorsement of every city in which it has played and has proven another popular success for Mr. Lackaye. In the character of "John Marshall" of the piece, he has given new and convincing proof of his versatility, playing with apparent ease and fine art the powerful and dramatic scenes of the play equally as well as the light comedy siations. It is planned to make the organization a stock company for the Bijou, and after the run of "The Stranger," several plays by foreign authors will be produced, the American rights to which Mr. Lackaye acquired while abroad last summer. L. S. Sire, the producer of the play, has furnished exceptionally fine stage settings for the piece, and surrounded the star with a cast of unusual merit. Surrounding Mr. Lackaye is a cast containing the names of Frank Sheridan, A. S. Byron, Malcolm Williams, Howard Hall, Louis Thomas, William Frederic, Henry Hall, Harriet Brent, Ouida Bergere, and Muriel Starr.

REV. DR. P. T. POCKMAN TO LEAVE NEW BRUNSWICK.

Dr. P. Theodore Pockman, pastor of the First Reformed church, New Brunswick, has accepted a call to become the pastor of the Presbyterian church at Alden, N. Y., a pretty suburb of Buffalo, N. Y. It was at first understood that the call was to supply the pulpit for a year, but instead it is a permanent one, and the Doctor will take up his duties in the New York town on January 1.

At a recent meeting of the Parent-Teachers Association, a strong protest was presented against the lavish expenditure of money on expensive and useless gifts for children and a plea made for the practical present.

A bank book enclosed in an attractive Christmas envelope will make a gift that is not only practical, but is wise and educational as well.

Store Open Eve'gs Until Xmas

The Store That Has Always Helped You Make a Merry Xmas

What more fitting remembrance could be offered father and mother, husband and wife, brother and sister than a warm, comfort-giving pair of slippers. We have made it particularly easy for you this year to secure the prettiest and daintiest patterns and designs at unusually little prices, and there is such an abundance of styles and materials that you cannot fail of finding a pair of slippers which will meet the hearty approval of the recipient.

There are a lot of things in our line that you wouldn't think of unless you came in and looked around—for instance, Bath Slippers, the finest collection we have even shown; Traveling Slippers, Slumber Slippers, Carriage Boots, Infants' Carriage Boots, and scores of other things, and the prices are lower than New York prices on same quality—and that's worth thinking about.

Harry Wolverton's Plans.

In releasing Catcher Walter Blair to Rochester Manager Wolverton, of the Highlanders, makes it plain that he intends to use Ed Sweeney behind the bat as much as possible next year. Williams, the big backstop who showed some ability last fall, will be retained, and Wolverton will try to develop him in the spring. Wolverton has not discussed his plans for publication, but it seems certain that he will depend largely upon these men in 1912: Pitchers Ford, Caldwell, Fisher and Warhop; Catchers Sweeney and Williams; Infielders Chase, Gardner, Dolan and Hartzell, and Outfielders Daniels, Cree and Wolter. If a trade for Jack Knight can be effected a first-class infielder will be obtained, otherwise Knignt will continue to wear a New York uniform. Wolverton says he has first-class material and is very hopeful. He will live permanently in New York after the holidays.

O'Day As Manager.

"When Hank O'Day sits on the bench with his Cincinnati Reds next year and National League umpires make decisions against him will be find fault?" asked a baseball magnate at yesterday's league meeting. "O'Day has been umpiring for twenty years and has always tried to suppress kickers. When Tim Hurst left the umpire staff years ago to manage the St. Louis Cardinals he soon discovered that it was impossible to accept adverse rulings with a pleasant smile. How will O'Day get along with Business Manager Frank Bancroft, of the Reds, who sent a telegram to McGraw, of the Giants, last season warning him against O'Day, who had been assigned to umpire the New York's games with the Cubs in Chicago? Can O'Day listen to the famous anvil chorus in Redland without a feeling of resentment?"

Stallings Praises Bud Sharpe.

George Stallings, the manager of the Buffalo club, says that the Oakland club has obtained a jewel in Bud Sharpe, who will succeed Harry Wolverton as manager. "Sharpe is a graduate of State College, Pennsylvania," said Stallings yesterday, "and for one year he was a sub-professor of mathematics there. He first played professional baseball in the Tri-State League, and later made his mark in Newark. This year, with my team, Sharpe led the Eastern League first basemen in fielding, had a batting average of .281 and stole twenty-seven bases. He is managing my cotton plantation in Georgia this winter and is a first-class business man. I sold him to Oakland for $750 in order to advance him in baseball, and I feel sure that he will prove a success in his new berth."

Wallace to Lead Browns.

"Bobby Wallace will manage the St. Louis Browns again next year and I will not sell the club," said President Robert L. Hedges yesterday. "The Browns showed some class when they defeated the Cardinals in the post-season series this fall, and also uncovered several fine young players. We have others just as good to be used next spring, and Wallace is entitled to another chance. The club made money last season, even though the Browns were tailenders, and it would be poor policy to sell out with such excellent prospects unless, of course, I could get my own price—$500,000."

Ebbetts on the Level.

"There's one thing for which President Ebbetts of the Brooklyn club must receive credit," said Treasurer John Whalen of the New York club yesterday. "He isn't afraid to say what he thinks, and always fights in the open. He may be on the losing side now and then, but he can't be accused of double dealing."

Roger Hands Out Boost.

"I can't understand why the Highlanders let Laporte and Austin get away," says Roger Bresnahan. "They played great ball this year, and were good enough for any team. By the way, I wish I could secure Earl Gardner from the Highlanders. He is a star second baseman and would be a big help to any team."

—The Women's Guild of the Church of the Heavenly Rest will give a Christmas social and sale of useful articles in the parish house Monday night. There will be music and refreshments.

The Kingdom Of Slender Swords

By HALLIE ERMINIE RIVES

Copyright, 1910, by the Bobbs-Merrill Company

"How strange that you should have been here!" She thought he must hear the loud drumming of her pulse.

He laughed, a hard, colorless little laugh. "Yes," he answered, "it seems so."

A mist blinded her eyes, for his tone carried to her even more sharply than had the look she had seen from the balcony a sense of the pain he had undergone. In what words could she tell him?

"You have been suffering," she said in a low voice. "I see that. And it was my fault."

He gathered himself together with an effort of will to still the tingle that flashed along his nerves. "It was quite sane and right, no doubt," he said. "When I have learned to be honest enough with myself I shall see it so. My mistake was in ever dreaming that I was worth one of your thoughts or a single second's memory."

She turned her head abruptly. "Do you hear some one talking? I thought I heard it as I came up the path, like some one muttering to himself."

He listened, but there was no sound.

"I must have imagined it," she said. There was a moment's pause, and presently she went on:

"You have been thinking hard things of me. It is natural that you should. And yet I, whatever you think, whatever you do, that day in the cave I was not—was not"—

"You were nothing you should not have been," he replied rapidly. Her voice had sent a tremor over him. He felt it with a new wave of the morning's contempt. "I understand. There is nothing for you to justify, nothing to regret."

She shook her head. "'We have left undone those things which we ought to have done,'" she quoted in a low voice, "'and have done those things which we ought not to have done, and there is no health in us.' We all recite that every Sunday. I have something now to confess to you. Won't you stand there in the light? I—I want to see your face."

He stepped slowly into a bar of moonlight.

"Why," she said, "you have hurt your hand!" She made a quick step toward him, her eyes on the stained bandage.

"It is nothing," he said hastily. "I struck it a little while ago. What"—

He turned, suddenly alert. A sharp whistle had sounded below them and bright points here and there pricked the gloom. "They have turned on the tree lights," he said. There was a sound of voices on the path. Some one ran across the footbridge.

"Something has happened," she said. "What can it be?"

He made no reply. There had flashed to him a quick realization of the position in which unwittingly they had placed themselves. She must not be seen at such an hour in that lonely spot with him. He knew the canons of the world he lived in. With a hushed word he drew her back into the shadow.

The voices were speaking in Japanese, and now he heard them clearly. "Some one is injured," he told her. "He fell down the hillside, they think." A hurried step crossed the bridge and a voice, sharp and peremptory, asked a question in nervous English. Daunt chilled at the answer, turning to her, every unselfish instinct alive to spare her.

BY IT BARBARA WAS KNEELING.

But she had heard a name. "It is Mr. Ware who is hurt!"

He grasped her wrist. "Wait!" he said hurriedly. "I beg you to go by the upper path to the side door." But she caught away her arm and ran quickly down the path.

Daunt sprang up the hill, skirted the building, gained its upper corridor, now simmering with excitement, and crossed the bridge. Near its farther end a small group stood about a figure prostrate beside the photograph whose cylinder gleamed in the lantern light by it Barbara was kneeling.

But something came between her gaze and the pallid face—something which she saw with the distinctness of a black paper silhouette on a white ground—a glimmering object, unnoted by the rest, which had lain half concealed by a bush—something that one day a thousand years ago had glittered against Daunt's brown hair as he saluted her from his horse. It was a riding crop whose Damascene handle bore the device of a fox's head.

Two hours later the corridors were silent, and the bishop and Daunt sat together in the darkened office saying few words, both thinking of a man lying straight and alone, and of a girl in an upper room whose promise he had taken with him out of the world. Daunt was to leave for Tokyo on the early morning train. Half the night through he sat there listening to the moan of the rising weather.

But a little while before the sky whitened to a rainy dawn a gray wraith glided along the upper piazza of the hotel. It crossed the footbridge to the hillside.

Barbara groped and found the crop. Across the night she seemed to see an endless procession of stolid, sulphur colored figures linked with thin, rattling chains filing into the humid, black mouth of a mine. Shuddering, she swung the stick with all her strength and threw it from her down the steep into the water that roared and tumbled far below.

BEST BANKNOTES.

They Are Produced by American Talent and Methods.

HARDEST TO COUNTERFEIT.

From the Time of Paul Revere, the First American Banknote Artist, Ours Have Been More Difficult to Imitate Than Those of the Old World.

To say that Americans make the best banknotes in the world may sound at first rather boastful, and yet any history of the art and industry of note engraving which failed to record that fact would be incomplete. Paul Revere was the first American banknote artist, and from the time of the chartering of the Bank of North America under the direction of Robert Morris, in 1781, up to the present American engravers have excelled not only in the artistic quality of their designs, but in their provisions against counterfeiting.

Marco Polo found banknotes in China ages ago, printed on paper made from the bark of the mulberry tree. One of the notes upon which the great Venetian traveler himself may have gazed is on exhibition at this day in the office of an American company. It is one of a series issued by the Ming dynasty about 1339 A. D.—"current anywhere under heaven"—and seems to have been printed from wooden blocks on a sheet of paper nine by thirteen inches, a bigger surface than any man could cover with both hands outstretched. It is good for "one string of cash." The provision against forgery is simple to the point of severity: "Counterfeiters hereof will be executed. Persons giving information of counterfeiters will be rewarded with taels 250 and in addition will receive the property belonging to the criminal."

Another great government has placed much dependence upon death as a deterrent to imitators of its promises to pay. When Jacob Perkins of Newburyport, Mass., invented the method of transferring designs from hardened steel plates to steel cylinders and retransferring to flat plates, thus enabling the engraver to devote the time necessary to accomplish his best work in the original and reproduce it at will, the new process aroused international interest. Mr. Perkins and his associates went to London in 1819 at the instance of the British minister at Washington to help the Bank of England to issue notes not easily counterfeited. But the conservative old bank refused to adopt the new method, preferring, as one of the Americans said, to rely upon the hangman rather than the engraver. Nevertheless the English began in time to follow American methods after the geometric lathe had been invented by Asa Spencer of New London, Conn., and improved by Cyrus Durand.

The governments of continental Europe depend exclusively upon color work to protect their paper currency, and several of the large banks of issue have civil engineers in charge of their bureau of engraving and printing, though what connection there may be between engineering and engraving is a mystery. Many Italian banknotes are easy to counterfeit. The Bank of Spain has of late abandoned its own plant because its notes were imitated so successfully that counterfeits were accepted by the bank without question. A private concern now does the work. The Bank of Greece now uses the American method, having had sad experiences with notes of Austrian, German and English fashioning.

A myth that probably will never die tells us that the notes of the Bank of England cannot be counterfeited. As a matter of fact, they can be imitated readily enough, for little attempt is made to protect the notes beyond the use of a watermark paper. The watermark can be easily copied.

One practical safeguard of great effectiveness is the custom of the Bank of England to cancel every note that is returned to the bank and issue another in its place. This and the practice of keeping a record of the numbers of all bank notes used in every business establishment keep alive a keen sense of responsibility which adds to security. The custom of circulating soiled banknotes, of course, gives the counterfeiter his best opportunity. Forgery is much more readily detected in a crisp, stiff, new bill than in a rumpled and dirty one.

The American style of banknote has become the standard in the countries of Central and South America. The experience of the Brazilian government led the way in this after various disappointments. First the much vaunted Austrian system was tried, the notes being engraved and printed in England under that system. They proved a complete failure. Counterfeiters flourished. The Brazilians tried banknotes made in France, and these were promptly and extensively imitated as soon as the counterfeiters could get their plates and paper ready. Brazil tried German and English establishments, but still without securing protection to the banknote circulation, and at last turned to the United States and found a type of bills practically impossible to counterfeit. So it is no boast, but a mere record of fact, to state that Americans make the best banknotes in the world.—Detroit News.

The most efficient heat producer

The Square Pot Furnace will greatly lessen the amount of coal you use, as it is impossible for the square firepot to become clogged or congested with clinkers. Therefore it gives more heat per unit of space. The square firepot is patented and used exclusively by the French Matches.

What is the explanation of the French match? Well, on every box there is printed the legend, "Manufactures of State; Contributions Indirect." While you are struggling with the French match you are paying taxes. I do not know the exact amount of the revenue raised by the French match, but a French friend assures me that the atrocious badness of French matches is due to the determination of the government to compel smokers to use ten matches instead of one. There was once a contractor who secured the contract for making the state matches. He was a conscientious contractor. He made good matches. He made matches that struck on the box. In consequence the revenue fell off. The government was enraged. They warned the contractor that his contract would be canceled unless he forthwith lowered the quality of his matches. According to my friend, the object of the contractor now is to make matches so vile that the whole population of France is forced to spend half its time trying to make them burn.—London Opinion.

Bear Lake's Black Bass.

"The only black bass water I know of where the black bass are really black," said a man who makes fishing tackle and tries it out on waters almost everywhere, "is Bear lake, in the western corner of New York. It lies high among the hills of Chautauqua county, near the Pennsylvania line. It has no inlet and no visible outlet. A peculiarity of Bear lake is that it has no shallows. There is no gradual slope from its shores into deep water, but they pitch off at angles so acute as to be almost perpendicular, giving the impression that the water of the lake fills an immense pit of great depth. The lake is almost round and only a mile in diameter. Owing to its odd formation and unusual depth, Bear lake has the appearance of a vast pool of black ink. In those depths are black bass which are said to be natural to that water, plentiful, large and full of fight. Black bass elsewhere are not black at all, but of a dark olive green, but these Bear lake black bass are black."—New York Sun.

When Bathtubs Were Curiosities.

The British Medical Journal asserts that a century back the English were a dirty people. England can hardly have been worse than the French. In 1713 Jean Baptiste de la Salle published "Les Regles de la Bienseance et de la Civilite Chretiennes," a manual for the guidance of youth which has run into over fifty editions and is still in print. We are told that "for the sake of cleanliness it is well to rub the face every morning with a white towel in order to remove the dirt. It is not advisable to wash with water, for this exposes the face to the chills of winter and the heats of summer." This precept continued to appear in the manual until the edition of 1782. A similar work, "La Civilite Nouvelle," published in 1667, warns children that "to wash the face in water injures the eyesight, brings on toothaches and colds and engenders pallor."—London Chronicle.

Initials as Pen Names.

Greatness has sometimes disguised itself under initials. About the middle of the eighteenth century there was published a book entitled "The Miscellaneous Works, Comical and Diverting, by T. R. D. J. S. D. O. S. P. I. I." This pompous array of initials hardly succeeded in concealing the personality of the Rev. Dr. Jonathan Swift, dean of St. Patrick's, in Ireland. A more effective disguise was adopted by Arthur Sykes, the author of an "Inquiry into the Meaning of Demoniacks In the New Testament." The author takes refuge in initials, styling himself "T. P. A. P. O. A. B. I. T. C. O. S." And this is the interpretation: "The Precentor and Prebendary of Alton Borealis, in the Church of Salisbury."—London Standard.

Willing, but Not Anxious.

Ministers sometimes observe some curious phases of human nature among persons soliciting their services in the performance of a marriage ceremony.

"Will you take this woman for your wedded wife?" asked a clergyman of a would be bridegroom.

"Yes; I'll take her," remarked the man in a half dejected tone, "but," he added, with surprising frankness, "I'd rather it were her sister."

The Woman Question.

"Yes, I have just finished a treatise on the single tax. Next I shall grapple with the woman question."

"Consult me, old fellow. I grapple with a fresh one every hour."

"How is that?"

"I am married."—Satire.

Expensive Instruction.

"Experience," said the ready made philosopher, "is the best teacher."

"Yes," replied the man who has had troubles with Wall street, "but you're so liable to go broke paying the first installment on tuition."—Washington Star.

Dunellen Board of Trade Begins Agitation to Abolish Grade Crossings.

THE PLAN OF ACTION MAPPED.

Other Matters of Importance Discussed At Annual Meeting of the Civic Organization—Officers Elected.

The Dunellen Board of Trade at its annual meeting last night, took the first step in what is to be a determined fight to bring about the abolition of the three dangerous grade crossings in that borough. Traffic on both the railroad and the affected streets has become such as to make the proposition a very serious matter and citizens have frequently asked that they be afforded relief. The feeling came to a head when the Board of Trade pledged itself last night to devote its influence from now on to have the objectionable crossings removed. Arthur Cockburn, one of Dunellen's most progressive citizens, was appointed to attend the meeting today at East Orange, called by the mayor to discuss the grade problem. He will be accompanied by several fellow-townsmen.

Dunellen's growth in the past ten years has been almost seventy-five per cent. A large portion of the new population is located on the south side of the Jersey Central tracks, compeling them to cross over in order to get to the business places or depot. On the other hand, most of the school children have to cross in the opposite direction to reach the Whittier building. Washington avenue, Prospect avenue and Grove street, are the thoroughfares travelled, each of which is crossed at grade by the Central's tracks. They are protected by gates but while they reduce the possibility of accidents, the menace still remains. A "fire" to remove them would also do away with the deadly Rock avenue crossing, the only one in the Plainfield limits. It has claimed many victims while narrow escapes are common.

The trade board took up a number of other matters, last night, among them being improved sanitation methods for Dunellen and the telephone franchise dispute, which has engaged the attention of the citizens for the past year. The latter has been carried to the State Utilities Commission, which is to have a public hearing at Newark next week.

Frank R. Wynkoop, who has been president of the board for the past year, refused re-election and H. J. Swackhamer was named to succeed him. The other officers elected were the folowing: Vice-president, G. Sumner Smith; secretary, W. P. Deering; treasurer, John Fedderman.

THREE SPECIAL MASTERS IN CHANCERY APPOINTED.

Assistant Prosecutor Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., Judge Isaac P. Runyon and Recorder Charles M. Dolliver, counselors at law in this city, received notice today from Samuel K. Robbins, clerk of the Court of Chancery, that Chancellor Pitney had appointed them special masters in chancery, a high honor. A person to be eligible for the appointment must be a counselor at law and a master in chancery.

The above named lawyers will succeed William A. McClure and C. A. Reed both of whom have removed from the city, and the late Craig A. Marsh. The appointees will appear in the Court of Chancery next week to take the oath of office.

K. of P. Confer Degrees.

Unity lodge, No. 102, Knights of Pythias, conferred the first rank on one candidate and the second rank on two candidates Thursday night. Next Thursday the third rank team of Henry Clay lodge, Newark, will be present by invitation to confer on seven candidates the rank of "Knighthood." This team is considered the best in the order in the State. Bound Brook, Somerville and Perseverance lodges have also been invited.

Hyde—Jackson.

Miss Lavinia Hyde and Albert Steward Jackson, both residing at 525 West Fourth street, were married Tuesday night by Rev. Littleton Sturges, pastor of the Mt. Zion A. M. E. church, at the parsonage. The couple was accompanied by Charles Selby and Mrs. Mary J. Henry, other witnesses being Mrs. Littleton Sturges and Miss Sturges. The couple will reside at 525 West Fourth street. The groom is employed as a porter in a local pharmacy.

BOROUGH HIGH GIRLS WIN AT BASKETBALL

The North Plainfield High School girls' basketball five added another victory to its string yesterday when they defeated the New Brunswick High School team by a score of 28 to 2. A hard fight was anticipated, but instead the visitors proved easy for the borough girls. Miss Helen Hummel played the star game for the local team, shooting all but two goals. Miss Clara Barton Smith and Miss Marion Mair supported their team in clever fashion. The game was played without a single foul on N. P. H. S. The first half was played with lines and the second without. The lineup:

N. P. H. S.—Forwards, Helen Hummel, Marion Mair, Margaret Eaton; center, Mildred McAuliffe, Bessie Carson; guards, Clara Barton Smith, Elsie Debele.

New Brunswick—Forwards, Travers, Worle; center, Connors, Stahly; guards, Shield, Volkert.

Scorer, F. O. Duning; timekeeper, George Townley; referee and umpire, the Misses Stahlberger and VanDeventer.

BOROUGH HIGH SENIORS XMAS ENTERTAINMENT

The senior class of the North Plainfield High School is completing arrangements for the annual Christmas entertainment to be held in Debele Hall, Wednesday, December 20. The cast for the play follows: Edmund J. Kenney, Carroll C. Taylor, Lawrence H. French, Miss Florence Daly, Miss Ella Miller and Miss Elsie Schmidt. The affair is in charge of the following committees: "Knocks" Edmund J. Kenney, chairman; Henry V. Kinney, Louis Bennett, Guy Peck, the Misses Helen Hummel, Miller, Daly and Wheeler; play, Louis Bennett, chairman; Edmund J. Settle Their Dispute.

A dispute between Louis Kadish, of Somerset street, and Frank Sekri, of Terrill road, over the sale of a sove, was settled in the city court yesterday morning by Judge William G. DeMeza. The cause of the trouble was Sekri's objections to a combination lifter and shaker. He had bargained for the stove before he knew the sort of fixture that went with it and when Kadish declined to make a change the argument began. The case was settled by Sekri agreeing to pay the balance due on his purchase providing Kadish gave the kind of lifter and shaker wanted. Robert Newton Crane appeared for Kadish.

264 IN THE ARMY

Good Fellow Recruiting Office is Being Kept Busy as Xmas Approaches.

MANY MORE ARE NEEDED.

In Addition to Toys For the Poor Little Tots Dinners Are Wanted Now For Unfortunate Families.

The Plainfield Army of Good Fellows now numbers 264 recruits, twenty-two having been mustered in since yesterday. As there are over 600 poor little children, according to investigations made by the Charity Organization Society, who would not know the joys of Christmas morning were it not for Good Fellows many more enlistments are necessary. Picture the poor little tot who wakes up on Christmas morn to find a toy in his stocking. Wouldn't it make you happy to know that thus you had made him happy? Read the letter of Good Fellow in this issue. Read it now and act now.

The central picture in Life this week represents Santa Claus in a dual respect. On one side of the double page is the cheerful saint people are all used to. He is sorrunded by a troop of admiring happy youngsters all waiting, but confident that they will each and all be remembered from that bulging pack. On the opposite page is another Santa. He also is surrounded by a throng of children. But they are not happy and smiling. They are cold and hungry and sad.

It is not strange that to them the Christmas myth is a mockery and old Santa Claus himself looks at them with scorn and hate. Are there two Santa Clauses in Plainfield? Not if the Good Fellows can help it. It takes so little to make a child happy. But in spite of fine fellows who have stepped up so far, fully four hundred children may look upon Santa Claus as a delusion and a snare unless some more good folks get busy.

If you cannot join the army, you can send a substitute that talks, you know and The Daily Press will know where to send the talker where it will be spent to the best advantage. The Charity Organization Society has forty more families too, in need of Christmas dinners. There must be many Good Fellows who know enough about good living to order a good dinner. Just send a line to Santa for the address.

HELD AS BURGLARS

Albert Vail and Pals Arraigned Before Justice Snape Plead Not Guilty.

POLICE COLLECT EVIDENCE.

Albert Vail to Be Sent to Somerset County Jail While Edward Hamilton and Murphy are Released on Bail.

Albert Vail, of East Second street, was held to await the action of the Somerset County Grand Jury by Justice Snape in the North Plainfield court yesterday afternoon on the charge of burglarizing the tailoring shop of Benjamin Estrin, of Somerset street, last Friday night. Edward Murphy, of Arlington avenue, and Edward Hamilton, of Watchung avenue, were held in $100 bail each, as accessories after the fact, having helped to dispose of the stolen goods and having received a part of the money. Murphy and Hamilton secured bondsmen and were released. Vail will be taken to Somerville Monday.

The court room was crowded with friends of the young men, none of whom is yet out of his 'teens. The testimony adduced showed that Murphy and Hamilton knew of the offense and accompanied to New York, Vail and Coleman, the colored youths the police are still looking for, and who with Vail had perpetrated the theft. Coleman carried the stolen clothing in a suit case and after reaching that city pawned the clothing. The lads then started out to have a good time and succeeded, returning to their homes in this city on a late train.

Since the crime was fastened on the quartet, the city police have been investigating the stories they told. Yesterday Chief Kiely learned enough to satisfy him that Hamilton, Vail and Coleman were the three boys who held up William Gardner at the point of a revolver in his store on Church street, Tuesday, November 28. This is in addition to the information elicited earlier in the week which indicated that Coleman engineered the burglary of Mrs. Robert Gardner's tailor shop on Watchung avenue several weeks ago. All of the clothing taken from that place was recovered by Sergeant Overbaugh while searching Coleman's home last Wednesday.

COUNCIL HEARS FROM SEWAGE COMMISSION

The North Plainfield Sewage Commission, at the call of the chairman, W. J. Buttfield, assembled in the Council chamber, last night with Mayor N. B. Smalley, Mayor-elect Clark and the members of the outgoing and incoming councils. The purpose of the gathering was to fully acquaint all the officials with the present status of the municipal problem.

Mr. Buttfield stated that the commission has continued its activities and that everything possible is being done to bring about the desired result. Numerous difficulties have been encountered, he said, which had interfered with the commission's work, but things were now in such shape that a full and concise report could be submitted in about a month.

The explanation by Mr. Buttfield was highly satisfactory to all present and was followed by a general discussion. It was the consensus of opinion that everything possible is being done to pave the way for the much needed improvement.

The sewage commission is composed of W. J. Buttfield, chairman; S. St. John McCutchen, Joseph O. Osgood, George T. Rogers and John P. Emmons.

TO THE "GOOD FELLOWS" OF PLAINFIELD

TO THE GOOD FELLOWS AND THE GOOD GIRLS TOO:

Just about this time last year I told you my story. You listened to it—you did more—you followed its spirit out in a bang-up style. Bless your hearts, you made over 600 poor little tots know the real meaning of a joyous Christmas. I'm not claiming any credit for my story; I'm claiming credit for knowing that there are many Good Fellows in this fine old town of ours—royal chaps who don't do much preaching but when it comes to doing a good turn, well, they're there with the goods. This is no sermon that I'm handing you, it's a heart-to-heart talk with men with red blood in their veins, and here it is off last year's reel:

On Christmas and New Year's eve you and I went out for a good time and spent from $10 to $200. Christmas morning hundreds of children awoke to an empty stocking—the bitter pain of disappointment that Santa Claus had forgotten them. That's the way it used to be. Perhaps it wasn't our fault. We had provided for our own; we had also reflected in a passing way on those less fortunate than our own, but they seemed far off and we didn't know where to find them. Perhaps in the hundred and one things we had to do some of us didn't think of that heart sorrow of the child over the empty stocking.

Now, old man, here's a chance. Just send your name and address to The Daily Press—address Santa Claus—state about how many children you are willing to protect against grief over that empty stocking, inclose a two-cent stamp and you will be furnished with the names, addresses, sex, and age of that many children. It is then up to you, you do the rest. Select your own present, spend 50 cents or $50, and send or take your gifts to those children on Christmas eve. You pay not a cent more than you want to pay—every cent goes just where you want it to go. You gain neither notoriety nor advertising; no record will be kept; your letter will be returned to you with its answer. The whole plan is just as anonymous as old Santa Claus himself.

This is not a newspaper scheme. The Daily Press will preserve the anonymous character of this work. The responsibility of finding the children and sending you their names will be assumed by this paper and it guarantees that whatever you bestow will be deserved.

Neither you nor I get anything out of this, except the feeling that you have saved some child from sorrow on Christmas morning. If that is not enough for you then you have wasted time in reading this—it is not intended for you, but for the good fellows of Plainfield.

Perhaps a twenty-five cent doll or a ten cent tin toy wouldn't mean much to the children you know, but to the child who would find them in the otherwise empty stocking they mean much—the difference between utter disappointment and the joy that Santa Claus did not forget them. Here is where you and I get in. The charitable organizations attend to the bread and meat; the clothes; the necessaries; you and the rest of the good fellows furnish the toys, the nuts, the candies; the child's real Christmas.

GOOD FELLOW.

"Good Fellow" is not a professional philanthropist, he takes a drink, and even goes out at night with the boys for a mild good time—but he has taken care of some poor little ones each year in Plainfield. He says he wishes he had always curtailed his holiday joy-making with the good fellows even more than he did, so that he might have had more money to gladden childish hearts.

The Worthy Grand Master of the lodge of Good Fellows has laid his plans for securing names through the Charity Organization Society.

This is how you can join the lodge of Good Fellows. Write a letter to "Santa Claus," care of The Daily Press, something like this:

I live at No.———— Street. I will be Santa Claus to 6 children.
John Jones.

The letter will go to Santa Claus. He will indorse on your letter the names and addresses of six children. That letter will be remailed to you. Then you get busy. That's all. Come on in, good fellows.

MAYOR "HITS BACK"

Smalley Considers Rumored Appointments Justified His Filling Council Vacancy,

WHY APPOINT DEMOCRATS?

Hint That Council May Not Confirm Reported Nominations of Mayor-elect Clark—Republicans Available.

Taking the position that the reported appointments to be made by Mayor-elect Robert Clark, Jr., when he assumes his office as chief executive of North Plainfield on January 1, 1912, justified his action in filling a vacancy in the Borough Council on the eve of his retirement as mayor, Newton B. Smalley this afternoon sent the following communication to this paper and the publicity he craves for it is cheerfully given:

Editor, The Daily Press:

After learning of the proposed appointments about to be offered to the people of North Plainfield, do you wonder that I refused to accept your advice in the filling of a vacancy in the Council?

Do you know why a Republican Mayor and Council should confirm a list of Democrats for important places when scores of Republicans are available?

Do you wonder that many of the borough's best citizens refused to support Mr. Clark during the campaign of their memories of the past?

Are you as willing now to ask me questions about who is who and why, as you were to advise me in your editorial of last week about the new member of the Council?

You are a Republican journal. Are you ready to assist in having the public know the truth?

Please give this communication all the publicity it deserves and call on me when you want more.

Your friend,
N. B. SMALLEY.

According to a well defined report, as stated in these columns a week ago, Mayor-elect Clark will make a general shake-up in the offices when he assumes control of the borough government. Charles M. Dolliver, who has served as recorder for five years, has accepted Mr. Clark's offer of an appointment to the office of borough clerk to succed Fred Martin. Rumor has it that M. F. Gano is to take Dolliver's place as recorder. Gano is a Democrat. Fred Becker's position as overseer-of-the-poor is to be given Frank Neidig. Neidig is a Democrat. Report also has it that Frank Schuck, who has charge of the fire department steamer is booked to go and that James Walker, a Democrat, is slated for his job. All these appointments, if made, will be subject to the approval of the Council, the majority of whose members are friends of Mr. Smalley.

Mayor-elect Clark is ill with grip at his home and could not be seen this afternoon by a reporter for this paper.

Each person brought something for the tree and in the distribution there was lots of fun for every one received something different from what they brought and then they had the privilege of exchanging it if did not suit them.

There was also a program of music, vocal and instrumental, after which refreshments were served by the social committee. Although Miss Ethel Pryor is chairman of the social committee, last night's affair was in charge of Miss Helen Whitney.

SAFEGUARDING SUPPLY OF WATER AT ASYLUM

Precautions are being taken to guard against the possible pollution of the water supply of the State Hospital for the Insane, at Morris Plains. Dr. Britton D. Evans, medical director of the institution, wrote to the State Board of Health concerning the water supply system several weeks ago.

In response to Dr. Evans' letter, the division of sewage and water supplies of the board makes suggestions for changes and improvements in conditions affecting the watershed from where the supply is drawn. There is a suggestion that more economical methods might be employed. Steps have been taken by the hospital authorities to follow out these suggestions.

The report prepared by H. P. Letton, field assistant, in addition to treating the question of the pollution of the water supply, also suggests it would be well from an economic standpoint to have a competent engineer make a report on the water supply with respect to its design and operation. At present about 750,000 gallons per day are being pumped, and the greater portion of this goes to what is known as the Klondike reservoir.

"Considering the fact," the report says, "that both the high and low-pressure reservoirs receive considerable spring water without pumping, and the population suppied is not over 2,500, I have come to the conclusion that at least 500,000 gallons is being pumped in excess of what is actually needed, this amount being lost through leakage in the reservoir."

Following an examination of the water supply by some of the doctors at the hospital, Mr. Letton went over the situation and submitted a report to his department of existing conditions. From his report it was shown that there were several sources of possible pollution of the hospital water supply. These will be removed and corrected.

The water system of the hospital and its method of operation are complex. On account of the difference in elevation of the two main buildings, high and low pressure systems are maintained. The two systems are so connected that in case of a shortage or fire, water from the high pressure can be turned into the low-pressure system. Most of the water is obtained from springs, although in time of rain a large amount of surface water enters the reservoirs. There are six reservoirs.

The report suggests that an inspection be made of the watershed each year.

FIGHT PRISON BLAZE; CONVICTS GUARDED.

Trenton, Dec. 16.—With 1,400 prisoners under close guard the Trenton fire department fought a blaze in the mat shop of the New Jersey State Prison here yesterday afternoon. The fire started in a rubbish box and its origin is unknown. There were about sixty convicts working in the shop at the time and they were allowed to fight the flames until the arrival of the Trenton department. It took but a short time to get the blaze under control, but it was necessary to keep a vigilant watch over the prisoners throughout the institution.

An amusing incident in connection with the fire was that two negro convicts took advantage of the excitement to settle a personal grudge. The men had been bench mates and through a misunderstanding had become bad friends. When the attention of the deputies and other econvicts was directed to the flames the two negroes began to beat and kick each other. One was beaten almost into unconsciousness when the fight was discovered. The men were taken to the centre and kept under close guard until the fire was put out.

WOMEN MUST NOT SIGN LICENSES, COURT RULES.

Trenton, Dec. 16.—In view of the present agitation on the question of woman suffrage, much interest has been aroused by the decision of Judge Peter F. Daly, of the Middlesex County Court of Common Pleas, that women will no longer be recognized as signers of license applications in that county. Judge Daly's decision was made in connection with the consideration of license matters.

In making the ruling, Judge Daly said that a man who cannot secure twelve men of his locality to sign his license application presents good evidence to the court that the community does not want the license. The law provides that every application for license must be signed by twelve freeholders. Judge Daly said further: "While I recognize that a woman can lawfully be a freeholder, still I think that if an applicant cannot get twelve men to sign his application to certify that he is a satisfactory person, then he should not be entitled to a license."

The Papszts were married May 16, 1909, and separated four days afterward, following a quarrel.

SPORTS
News and Notes

BASEBALL.

A report was circulated at the baseball meeting in New York that Manager Griffith, of the Washington club, was going to trade Pitcher Walter Johnson to the Highlanders for Firstbaseman Hal Chase. The rumor gained weight simply through Griffith's unconquerable passion to swap players, no matter what stars were involved, but Harry Walverton, the Highlander's new boss, quickly smothered the yarn. He said that under no circumstances would he consider an offer for the elastic first baseman.

Norman Elberfield has been sold by the Washington Club to Chattanooga for $1,500. All the major league clubs waived claim on the former Highlander.

The Chicago Cubs made a deal with the Montreal Club by which they secure First Baseman Gandil in exchange for Pitcher Slapnicka, another player yet to be named and a cash bonus.

The Pittsburgh Club is trying to secure First Baseman Tim Jordan, of the Toronto Club.

The Rochester Club has purchased Pitcher Bumpus Jones from Detroit. It is possible that Detroit will trade Drake and Moriarity to Cleveland for Stovall and Graney. President Frank J. Navin, of Detroit, went to Providence today and closed a deal for the purchase of the Eastern League club of that city. The price paid was $70,000.

Andy Coakley has not made up his mind whether to accept the post of manager of the Wilmington team, of the Tri-State League. Pete Cassidy had a talk with him again yesterday, and thinks he will land the slender youth who helped Mack to win a championship in 1905.

N. P. H. S. FRESHMEN OUTPLAY THE JUNIORS.

The N. P. H. S. freshmen class basketball team ran circles around the junior class five Thursday afternoon in Debele's auditorium court and piled up a total score of 16 to 2. The victor's team work was responsible for the victory just as the lack of it was the cause of the Juniors defeat, although having held their opponents to two baskets in the first half. The lone basket was made by Captain Cline. At the outset in the second period the lower classmen took the lead at a tremendously fast pace and maintained it throughout the time of play.

The lineup was as follows:

Juniors—Forwards, Cline, Spenser; centre, Schmidt; guards, Underhill, Herrman.

Freshmen—Forwards, Day, Tomlinson; centre, VanMater; guards, Abrams, Franch.

ATHLETICS REFUTE CHARGES OF BRUSH.

John Shibe, who had charge of the sale of world's series tickets in Philadelphia, said that the insinuations of President Brush, of the Giants, that ticket speculating in Philadelphia was worse than in New York, were unfair to the club.

"Brush says that more than 4,000 tickets were given to seventy-three persons," declared Mr. Shibe, "a charge which is not borne out by the facts. No such a thing took place, and books can prove it.

"The Athletic club distribution of the tickets was fair and there absolutely was no collusion with speculators. The men who received tickets from us were regular fans, who were enttiled to them. We sent the national commission a list of our ticket purchasers, and at no time did we attempt to, and gave the investigators every help."

SOPHOMORE DEFEAT JUNIORS IN LIVELY BASKETBALL GAME.

The sophomore class team of the North Plainfield High School defeated the juniors in a hotly contested game of basketball at Debele's Hall, yesterday afternoon. The score was 18 to 14. Diman starred throughout the game for the second classmen, while Kline played the best game for the juniors. The lineup:

Sophomores—Forwards, Beckman, Diman; center, Love; guards, Ketcham, Koechlein.

Juniors—Forwards, Kline, Spencer; center, Schmidt; guards, Underhill, Fetherstone.

Time of halves, twenty minutes; referee, B. J. Phelps; scorer, F. O. Dunning, Jr.

If Colonel Roosevelt were only President now we should know exactly where the administration stood on paper-bag cooking.—Columbus State Journal.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS.

Why the New Jersey Schools?

There is something, after all, in the psychological moment. Else why did Mr. Roosevelt's "square deal" editorial excite such general interest, when he had said the same things over and again on previous occasions? Else why should recent criticisms of New Jersey's schools cause such widespread sensation when they were old in point of time and not applicable to New Jersey's schools alone?

More than a year ago it was found that a large number of the Wellesley girls did not know how to spell, and about the same time Dr. Green, principal of the State Normal School, complained that a lack of drill in English was the most pronounced of all the defects noticed in pupils coming from the high schools in all parts of this State. But Dr. Green was then kind enough to add that "constant improvement is found in the equipment of students coming to the Normal School;" so that conditions are not as bad as they were.

The Philadelphia papers have editorialized on the High School conditions reported by Messrs. Murray and Rice, some of them with more fairness to our schools than has been shown by New Jersey papers. This may be accounted for by the fact that the Quaker City Board of Education, the superintendent of schools and the High School Committee are even now involved in a hot controversy over some system which shall bring into closer relation and articulation the high schools and the elementary and grammar grades. It is the identical problem we have in this State.

The New York papers are commenting with much less courtesy on the "direct, explicit and convincing evidence" of the "neglect of fundamental studies" in our public schools apparently quite forgetful of the fact that about the same time that Messrs. Murray and Rice published their report, the English Teachers' Association was severely criticizing the New York high schools, declaring that "English is taught today with worse results than ten years ago, and the teaching is worse." And Mayor Gaynor has said he would "like to meet one child that has come out of the schools knowing a language from being taught it in our schools." Possibly this includes English as well as foreign tongues.

The report made by the members of the new State Board of Education chanced to be issued at just that psychological moment which gave the New Jersey schools rather unenviable and undeserved prominence over those of other States in exactly the same conditions from the same causes. But if thoughtful inquiry here and valuable suggestions from neighboring States show us how to improve our schools to meet modern requirements, the mischievous psychological moment will be excused for making an undue example of the New Jersey schools.—Newark News.

Compared with the Congressional Record of the new Chinese republic our own will seem almost as attractive as one of the six best sellers.—Cleveland Leader.

SHE DIDN'T LIKE HIS FACE.

"She told me she didn't like my face," said Victor Papszt, of Elizabethport to Vice-Chancellor Emery Thursday morning in a suit for divorce from Mary Papszt, who is now residing in Roseville avenue, Newark.

This remark was made on the day of the marriage, May 16, 1909, and four days afterward the husband says his wife left him. She never came back, he said, although he had written to her to return.

Papszt said he had known his wife but three months before the marriage, and that she began quarreling with him the minute she left the home of the clergyman in Elizabethport who married them.

On cross examination the witness denied that he had threatened his wife with a knife or that he wanted her to deed him a piece of property she had purchased in Newark on the installment plant.

A Delusion.

A man who does not claim to be a judge of swine, says: "Last spring I bought a little pig out of a drove, and he was good for eating, but wouldn't grow much. He got so, after a week or two, that he would eat a large bucket of dough, and after he had swallowed it all, I picked up the pig and put him in the bucket I had fed him from, and the little cuss didn't half fill it."

GRACE M. E. MEMBERS ORGANIZE A BIBLE CLASS.

Rev. and Mrs. C. C. Caine tendered an informal "at home" to the members of the Grace M. E. men's Bible class at the parsonage, last night. An hour was spent in a social way after which it was decided to organize the class according to the regulations of the International Sunday-school Association. These officers were elected: President, D. W. Winckler; vice president, C. E. Miller; secretary, Charles R. Harden; treasurer, George C. Nelson; chairman of membership committee, V. P. Heath; chairman social committee, Peter Mauger; chairman devotional committee, J. S. Lunger. The class starts off with twenty-two members.

Following the organization a plan for the winter's work was talked over and refreshments were served in conclusion.

A False Alarm.

The antics of the fire whistle this morning at 5 o'clock was caused by a high power P. S. C. wire on Washington street between East Second and East Third streets. The offending cable had been in position for a long time and had become stretched so that it hangs lower than it should. The rain soaked the insulation and caused the wire to sag still more, or until it came in contact with the feed wire controlling the fire alarm system. It was some time before the trouble was located, hence the cause for few persons asleep within the radius of the gong's sound. Aside from disturbing the residents and routing out all regular firemen as well as the callmen who raced through the downpour to Watchung avenue and East Third street, to what they thought was the scene of the fire, the short circuiting burned out the marker apparatus at the East End fire house.

Wilton Lackaye Coming.

Wilton Lackaye, who is well know to local audiences, will appear at the Plainfield theatre next Wednesday night in his new play, "The Stranger." The production was seen here last spring and since then has been presented in all the leading cities of the country. He will have the support of a specially selected company.

A REAL DELICACY.

A New York clubman who prides himself on his knowledge of things epicurean was much interested in an item he discovered in the menu laid before him on the occasion of his visit to a town of the Middle West. The item was "green bluefish."

"Waiter," demanded the New Yorker, "what sort of bluefish are green bluefish?"

"Fresh, sir," quickly responded the servitor. "Right from the water."

"How dare you try to impose upon me?" continued the clubman. "You know well enough that bluefish are not taken at this season."

Whereupon the waiter picked up the menu and gave it a careful scrutiny, as if by that action he would solve the mystery. Then, with an air of one suddenly enlightened, he added:

"Oh, that, sir? That's hothouse bluefish."—Lippincott's.

ROBT. EDESON TONIGHT APPEARS IN THE ARAB

Robert Edeson's appearance at the Plainfield theatre, this afternoon and tonight, in the play of the Orient, is of unusual interest because of the history attached to the play. Mr. Edeson is said to have made a big success of the piece and to have proved that Mr. Selwyn was correct in anticipating "The Arab" would prove an acceptable vehicle for this popular star. "The Arab" tells a story of a country more or less in the public eye at all times because of continued disturbance there, but more so at present by reason of the war between Italy and Turkey. The play throws a new light upon the massacre of Christians, so frequent in that district. The unravelling of the story would indicate that the government of Turkey encourages such outrages, if not directly, in a negative manner. It is in thwarting the planned desolation of a mission near Damascus, that Jamil Abdallah Azam, the role in the care of Mr. Edeson, the hero of "The Arab," finds the opportunity to display his newly acquired sense of honor, born of pure love. In pursuit of one of his former slave girls Jamil encounters the inhabitants of the mission and falls under the softening influence of the missionary's daughter. It is in the tender scenes with this young woman who is attracted to the self-exiled Sheik also, that Mr. Edeson is at his best. "The Arab" boasts of a production that made even base New York take notice when it was presented at the Lyceum and Astor theatres. The bazaar scene is one of exceptional beauty and of equal splendid is the picturing in and about the mission. Syria is a country of gorgeous colors and quaint architecture and the country has been faithfully presented in a scenic way. Supporting Mr. Edeson is Mary Ryan, of "The Fortune Hunter" fame, Edward R. Mawson, Ethel von Waldron, Eeville Alderson, Sydney Ainsworth, and others who participated in the first presentation of this notable play, including the Syrians and Armenians who add to the local color and aid in giving realism to all the scenes.

A subsequent investigation showed that some of those who ate at the bounty of the lodge were well to do.

SPEED OF A SHOT

Finding the Velocity of a Missile a Simple Matter.

MEASURED BY A PAPER DRUM.

The Whirling Cylinder Registers the Projectile's Flight With Minute Accuracy at Any Desired Distance. Wing Shots and Shot Charges.

Persons at all interested in gun firing of any kind, whether of the revolver or rifle or of heavy ordnance of any kind, occasionally come upon the term "muzzle velocity" and velocities of the missile at stated distances.

"How can anybody tell how fast a bullet is traveling when it leaves the muzzle of a weapon?" is a likely comment on the part of the layman.

As a matter of fact this approximate velocity of the missile may be one of the easiest of determinations to make.

In the first place, a drumlike cylinder is made of fixed diameter and of sufficiently stiff paper to allow of its revolving rapidly on a spindle. Using a cylinder of small circumference, it is necessary that the speed approach 2,000 revolutions a minute. These revolutions are produced by electric power, and the count is made by an exact mechanical register.

The gun is placed securely at the required distance from the drum and is sighted directly at the center of the cylinder, which is spinning at so many rods, even miles, a minute, as its circumference determines. With the drum's speed adjusted an electric current discharges the weapon, the bullet striking the center of the drum as measured from top to bottom.

The reader understands that with the drum stationary the bullet would pass directly through it on the line of its diameter, coming out on the other side with scarcely a shade of impediment. With the drum's periphery whirling at the rate of 2,000 revolutions a minute and its diameter only a fraction more than a foot this would mean a rate of 2,000 yards in sixty seconds. Thus in the fragment of a second necessary for the bullet to enter one side of the paper drum, cross it and out at the other side the opposite side of the drum would show considerable deviation from an exact diameter of line of passage.

It is this space of deflection shown inside the further rim of the drum that is used for the computation of velocity of the missile. The speed of the cylinder may be computed to the ten thousandth part of a second if necessary and the lineal distance run in that time be charted in perpendicular lines on the inner side of the paper. At whatever line the bullet penetrates outward it registers its time in crossing the diameter of the cylinder. If it has required the ten-thousandth part of a second for the bullet to fly one foot its muzzle velocity to the mile may be computed by any schoolboy. By the same process, too, the bullet's velocity at 100 yards or 500 yards may be determined.

Years ago before wing shooting had become an art the farmer with his muzzle-loading shotgun and charge of black powder would shoot directly at a wild goose or duck in full flight. He evolved a theory of his own as to the oncoming bird, holding that the heavy breast feathers "turned" the shot. He waited until the bird had passed him when, firing directly at it, he could bring down his quarry.

But it was not because the bird was not vulnerable, coming breast on. The fact was that it efw over his charge of shot. Before he could pull the trigger and the hammer fell on the percussion cap and the comparatively slow black powder could be ignited and exploded, sending the shot twenty-five or thirty yards, the bird had flown yards perhaps beyond its position when the fowler first touched the trigger. But firing directly at the bird after it had passed the shot charge had a strong tendency to drop as it flew, and the bird flying on a level line "got in the way" of the charge.

Today the modern nitro powders are immensely quicker than was the old black gunpowder, yet it has been an engineering problem to determine just how fast and in what line a charge of shot will travel. In this determination the revolving drum device has shown several important facts which have been taken in connection with the speed of individual game birds and the effects of windage on a shot charge.

That most important fact as to the flight of shot from a modern shotgun is that at forty yards the shot are "strung out" for approximately fifteen feet. While the leading pellets in the string have greatest velocity and killing power, at this distance even the trailing pellets are of sufficient force to kill.

All this has led to the modern practice of the fowler to reckon with the speed of his shot, the speed of the bird, the influence of the wind in "drifting" the charge, and out of these established facts to "lead" the bird sufficiently to kill it rather than maim and cripple it.—Marvin Holton in Chicago Tribune.

SAYS SECRETARY WILL BE MONMOUTH MAN

Confidentially stating that he expects the appointment of a Secretary of State to be made from Monmouth county, Attorney Charles E. Cook, of Asbury Park, was the guest of friends in Elizabeth Wednesday. Mr. Cook was scheduled to speak before the Downtown Democratic Club during the last campaign, while an effort was being made to have him disbarred from the practice of law.

Mr. Cook said he believed David Crater will be the choice for Secretary of State, although there is some belief in Monmouth that Samuel Terhune, of Long Branch, is being considered. That it will be either one of them, however, Mr. Cook seemed to have strong reason for stating.

With the same apparent assurance, Mr. Cook said that Senator George S. Silzer will be appointed clerk of the Supreme Court.

Mr. Cook had nothing to say on the chances of the third candidate who has been considered throughout the State as an aspirant for Secretary of State, General Dennis F. Collins.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

The word "fascinating" has been earned by Madame Alla Nazimova for the performance of "The Marionettes" as much by the avoidance of false as by the display of an amazingly true and varied technique in acting. For example, Madame Nazimova never ends a scene by approaching an exit, stopping before the door, turning and delivering the last words of a speech. Her invariable rule is to speak what has been given her by the author as "an exit speech" and then go out at once. Only once is this rule partially departed from in "The Marionettes;" and then eloquently. Knowing herself a timid, awkward, fearful country mouse, she would leave the resplendant city drawing room unnoticed. Noiselessly she turns the knob of the door, so noiselessly that to prevent it from snapping she holds it in place a moment until with her other hand she has gripped in silence the knob on the opposite side of the door. The last glimpse of her is the white hand gradually releasing this brazen knob. In that simple, swift piece of pantomime the whole character is struck off. It is a nice illustration that one does not always need lines for eloquent acting.

Berber braves engaged in coloring the scenes of "The Garden of Allah" at the Century theatre, declared themselves yesterday as unalterably opposed to certain unquestioned customs of our country. The stand taken resulted from a request made by Miss Dressler, an artist, of the Sargent Studios, for a subject. She applied to Sie Hassan Ben Ali, who deals in these commodities, and Mr. Hassan said he thought he would be able to get one of the "Allah" Arabs to give an hour of posing for the sum suggested by the artist, $1.50. The remainder of the story is furnished by a letter written Liebler & Co., by Mr. Hassan: "I mislaid the address of the party who wants the Arab to pose for picture in studio and I am glad too I lost this address, for when I told the Arab that a party wanted him to pose he immediately threw up his hands and said, 'It is forbidden in the Koran to even be in the presence of any one who tries to make the Image of Allah, as no human being has the right to play with the work of his Maker.'"

NIMBLE FINGERS CAN'T BE REFORMED IN JAIL.

Unable to overcome a theft mania, Raymond Bennett, a prisoner at the Mt. Holly jail, committed a robbery within the walls of the prison, his cellmate, Orian Pippitt, of Bordentown, being relieved of his secreted savings.

Two weeks ago Bennett was sentenced by Judge Horner to serve ninety days for stealing goods from the house of his employer, C. C. B. Stiles, near Smithville, but as a plan of reformation this sentence has had not the slightest effect.

Last night Bennett discovered that Pippitt had some money and was hiding it in a small hole in the cell wall. He refused to retire with the rest of the prisoners, and today when Pippitt looked for his money he could not find it. The matter was reported to the warden and a search revealed the money hidden in Bennett's tobacco bag that had been concealed behind the bathtub.

After the money had been returned to the owner, Bennett was placed in a separate cell in another part of the jail, and there he will remain until the expiration of his term. It was only a short time ago that he was released after serving eighteen months in the State prison for a robbery at Columbus.

To Abolish Trenton Health Board.

It has been decided by Commissioner of Public Safety La Barre that the Trenton Board of Health is to be abolished. The members were so notified Thursday. The Walsh act provides for the centralization of all the controlling bodies of the city government in the City Commission. There has been more or less dissatisfaction with the slow-moving methods of the Board of Health, and the commissioner's action has met with general approval.

SHOW HOW BUFFALO IS 12 MILES NEARER

New York, Dec. 16.—President W. H. Truesdale, of the Lackawanna, had his touring Pullman, the Lake Forest, and a regular parlor car and diner hitched to a fast locomotive yesterday morning and took a lot of folks to the Delaware Water Gap, to see where his railroad has spent $11,000,000 to save twelve miles on the road to Buffalo. The train stopped wherever there was a world's record fill of aqueduct to examine and it paused for luncheon right in the centre of the decorative new concrete bridge over the Delaware, half way between New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

The new railroad is the top of an equilatral triangle, of which the old road supplies the two legs. Washington, N. J., is at the apex of the old line. It took 6,000 pounds of dynamite and a whole lot of black powder to shoulder this new way through the Jersey Mountains. There is not a grade crossing on the line. The only tunnel of the new strip of track was passed soon after Lake Hopatcong station had been left behind. Here the shifting shale of the side walls made an open cut too dangerous to consider. The darkness lasts for just 1,000 feet and then presently the line approaches what the officials said today was the largest railroad embankment in the world. The Pequest Fill is the biggest one. It is three miles long and has an average height of 115 feet.

They have used concrete everywhere on the new line. There are seventy-three bridges and culverts of this material and even the fence posts along the right of way are made of it.

On Christmas eve the first passenger train will be run over the new cut-off. In all it makes the run to Buffalo exactly 400 miles.

JEWS ARE CELEBRATING DEFEAT OF GREEK KING.

The Fast of Hannukah in commemoration of the victory of the Maccabees over Antiochus Epiphanes began yesterday. In many of the Jewish homes the eight-branched Menora, or Hannukah lamp, was brought out, and a solitary lighted candle placed in it. The feast lasts eight days, and for each day a lighted candle will be placed in this lamp.

This period is one of joyous celebration by the Jews in commemoration of their victory, when, as a nation, they defeated Antiochus Epiphanes, the Greek King of Syria, when he attempted to destroy the Hebrew faith. This festival is also held to commemorate the rededication of the Temple at Jerusalem.

PASTOR IS INDORSED.

Three men have been indorsed by different organizations for membership on the new Elizabeth Board of Education of nine members that will be appointed by Mayor Stein next month.

The Rev. William B. Hamilton, pastor of Westminster Hope chapel and assistant probation officer, has been indorsed by Washington Camp, No. 78, P. O. S. of A.; Alexander Kaufman, a former member of the board, has been indorsed by the Downtown Hebrew Association, and the Central Labor Union has indorsed John T. Cosgrove.

There are many other candidates for seats on the new board, among them several members of the present body.

Putting It Mildly.

"That man seems to be proud of his stupidity," said the impetuous person.

"I wouldn't put it that way," replied the conservative friend. "I'd merely suggest that when it comes to a thirst for wisdom he's a prohibitionist."—Washington Star.

HEED THE WARNING.

Many Plainfield People Have Done So.

When the kidneys are sick they give unmistakable warnings that should not be ignored. By examining the urine and treating the kidneys upon the first sign of disorder, many days of suffering may be saved. Sick kidneys expel a dark, ill-smelling urine, full of "brickdust" sediment and painful in passage. Sluggish kidneys cause a dull pain in the small of the back, headaches, dizzy spells, tired, languid feelings and frequent rheumatic twinges.

Doan's Kidney Pills are for the kidneys only; they help sick kidneys, and rid the blood of uric poison. If you suffer from any of the above symptoms you can use no better remedy.

Plainfield people recommend Doan's Kidney Pills.

Albert Naylor, musician, 256 East Second street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "Several years ago I suffered from an ache in the small of my back and sharp pains when stooping or lifting. I took Doan's Kidney Pills, as I was told that they were good for such troubles and by the time I had finished the contents of two boxes, I was feeling better in every way. I have often recommended this remedy to people I have heard complaining of kidney trouble."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Paint that Stays Painted
That has been my slogan for years. I aim to do the best possible painting—using only the best materials that the manufacturers can furnish, and employing the most skilled mechanics that can be procured. I stand back of every job I do, and when I am allowed to use my own judgment in regard to the best method of doing it, I will gladly make good any work that by any chance proves defective.

A GAME OF BRIDGE.

John W. Gates Sprung a Surprise on His Young Friend.

John W. Gates' last office was in the Trinity building. He called his firm Charles G. Gates & Co. Others termed it "the house of the twelve apostles," as a dozen partners were in it. Gates was considered a good bridge whist player. Often after 3 p. m. bridge was played in the office. One day there were only three to play. A young man of good family, but not wealthy, came in.

"Sit down," said Gates agreeably. "I hate to play with a dummy."

"How much a point do you play?" asked the newcomer.

"Fifty," said Gates.

"I can't afford it," was the rejoinder. "Twenty-five is a big game for me."

"Well, make up the rubber," said Gates disappointedly. "We'll play for twenty-five."

The young man played well, had luck and won.

"We have a sort of clearing house here," said Gates when the game ended. "I'll send you your check in the morning."

The young man got a check for $13,000. Astounded, he took it to the signer.

"What does this mean?" he asked. "I circulated that I won $130. We were playing for 25 cents a point, weren't we?"

"We were playing for $25 a point," returned Gates.

"Wha-at! Why, if I'd lost I couldn't have paid."

"If you hadn't paid we'd have run you out of the city," said Gates coldly. "But you won. Cash that check." It was cashed.—New York Tribune.

YOUR MORNING MAIL.

It May Be Dangerous to Open It at the Breakfast Table.

Did you ever hear that it is dangerous to open your morning mail at the breakfast table? According to a Berlin scientist, Professor Kron, and the London Lancet, it is dangerous—very, Professor Kron has succeeded in tracing several cases of contagion to the old custom of waiting until you sit down at the breakfast table before opening and going through your morning mail. He calls attention to the fact that the average man or woman goes down to breakfast with hands and face scrupulously clean, teeth scrubbed and throat gargled. In that condition he is prepared to eat without danger of swallowing more disease germs than may have possibly escaped the watchful attentions of the cook.

But instead of doing that he handles letters and papers which have passed through many hands before reaching his own. Between bites he opens envelopes and wrappers and in doing so unthinkingly paves the way for the absorption of all kinds of germs which may or may not do him a great deal of harm.

It has long been the custom in many well regulated households where the breakfast hour is fixed somewhat late and where the mail carrier gets around before breakfast is served to place each person's morning letters by his or her plate in the dining room. This, says the Lancet, is a custom which should be abolished at once. Letters should be opened and read either before or after breakfast, but never at the table during the handling of food.

To Restore Leather Bindings.

To restore the leather bindings of books wash them first very lightly and carefully with clean warm water in which a tiny piece of soda has been dissolved, in order to free the leather from grease; then wash with clear water to remove the soda and dry. Dissolve a bit of gum arabic the size of a small bean in a teaspoonful of water and beat it up with a teaspoonful of the white of an egg. With a bit of sponge go lightly over the leather with this glair and let it dry. Should the glair froth up on the leather, as it is very likely to do if there is much tool work on the book, dab it until it subsides with the palm of the hand or with the sponge squeezed as dry as possible.

Her Dear Husband.

"Why," exclaimed a newly married woman to a bunch of friends, "for three months after our marriage my dear husband made me bake hot biscuits for him every meal."

"And yet your husband is a strong, healthy looking fellow," answered her friend, in astonishment. "Doctors say that such a diet is terrible, and"—

"Oh, yes, this husband is healthy. I was referring to my first husband!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

She Understood.

Mr. Misfit—It's no use trying to explain things to a woman. She can't understand scientific terms. No; there is— Mrs. Misfit—Oh, yes, I can, Charles! Heredity is what a man blames his father and mother for, and environment is what he blames his wife and children for.—Exchange.

The Logical Lunatic.

A lunatic was in the habit of catching imaginary flies. When asked to explain her strange action she pointed under her cloak and replied, "The flies are to feed this mongoose."

"But there is no mongoose."

"Well, there are no flies."

"Odd thing about flattery."

"What?"

"It makes everybody sick except those who swallow it."—Exchange.

CHAPTER XXIV.

THE LAYING OF THE MINE.

DR. BERSONIN lunched at the Tokyo club. The upstairs dining room was full of talk as the expert arrived and chose a small table by himself.

While he waited the boy brought him one of the English printed newspapers, and he cast his eyes over the headlines. He read:

SQUADRON'S SAILING ORDERS.

To Leave Tomorrow Morning—An Answer to the Alarmists.

All Differences Between the Two Governments to Yield to Diplomacy.

On the other side was the caption in smaller type:

BEAR RAID ON MARKETS.

Mysterious Selling Movement Causes Uneasiness.

He read the latter dispatch, an Associated Press wire, under a New York date line:

At noon today the bear movement, heretofore regarded as a natural reaction following an overadvancement and hence of purely academic interest, suddenly assumed such proportions as to make the outlook one of anxiety. It seems significant that before the Wall street opening this morning the London market responded to an attack of the same nature. In an era of industrial prosperity and general peace such a phenomenon is alarming, and a serious decline is anticipated in some quarters. The short sales which were such a factor in today's market were so distributed that it seems impossible to trace them to any single interest.

Bersonin's face expressed nothing. He folded the crackling sheet and laid it to one side.

Most of the comment about him turned on the departure of the squadron. Since the royal death, whose announcement had so abruptly ended the festivities, the black battleships had lain motionless in the bay. The appointment of a regent of confessedly more positive policy had given rise to many speculations, and the apostles of calamity had seized the opportunity to sow the seeds of disquiet. The great world, however, had as yet given little thought to their prognostications. The bourses had gone higher and higher. Only in diplomatic circles, where the mercury is habitually unquiet, had there been perceptible effect. Today the comment showed a subtone of relief.

The doctor ate little. He left the petit verre with his coffee untouched, signed his chit and went down to his automobile.

"Bersonin must be under the weather," one of the men at another table observed as he passed them. "He looks like a putty image."

"Curious chap," remarked the other. "Got a lot in his head no doubt. Some queer stories afloat about him, but I don't suppose there's anything in them."

The other lit his cigar reflectively. "I can't somehow 'go' him myself," he said.

Bersonin was whirled to his house and presently was in his laboratory with its glass shelves, its books and his wall safe. A cheerful fire burned in the grate against the dampness.

He began to walk restlessly up and down the floor. Today his government contract expired and Japan had not asked its renewal. He thought of this with a sudden recrudescence of the hatred he had nurtured for the empire. This had been based on fancied slights, on his failure to receive a decoration, on the surveillance he had lately imagined had been kept on his movements. Well, tomorrow would repay all with interest. There was no hitch in the plan which chance had aided so well. The Roost was the one house on the Yokohama bluff that could have served his purpose, planted on the cliff edge and, in line with the anchorage. And it had happened to be in the hands of this weak fool for his cat's paw.

His great, cunning brain turned to the future—to that vast career which his stupendous egotism had painted for himself. His discovery was so epoch making, so terrifying in its possibilities to civilization, that it had [illegible] him. It was too big to handle. He had made the greatest dynamic engine the world had seen—possibly the greatest it would ever see—and yet he knew that the ambassador had laid his finger on the truth when he had said: "Humanity would refuse. The man who knew the secret would be too dangerous to be at large."

But with wealth—wealth enough to buy men and privilege—what might be [illegible] it would take time and scheming and secrecy, but he had them all. [illegible] the great secret was always his, and his alone. It would make him more powerful than emperors, for he [illegible] possessed it with the means to [illegible] could laugh at fleets and fortifications. Before the machines that he [illegible] build the greatest steel clad that [illegible] ever floated would vanish like [illegible]. He clinched his great hands [illegible] massive frame quivered.

"The future, the future!" he said in [illegible] voice. "I shall be greater [illegible] greater than Napoleon.

For I shall hold the force that can make and unmake kings. So surely as force rules the world, so surely shall I, Bersonin, rule the world!"

A knock came at the door, and Phil entered. He was as pale as the doctor, and his clothing was soaked with the rain. Without a word Bersonin locked the door, wheeled an armchair before the blaze, pushed him into it and mixed him a glass of spirits. Then he stood looking at him.

"It's all right," said Phil. "The tripod fitted to a hair. It can't be seen from either side, and I've sent the boy away and locked the house."

"Good," said Bersonin. "All is ready, then. The mechanism is set for the moment of daybreak. Our gains will be enormous, for in spite of the selling the market is up. There has been a little distrust of the situation here and there, though the optimists have had their way. And this latent distrust will add to the debacle when it comes. We are just in time, for the squadron has its sailing orders for tomorrow. Strange how near we were to failure! Who could have foreseen the death of the king? And the rains too. They say it is doubtful if the trains will run tomorrow."

Phil's hand, holding the drink, shook and wavered.

"The cursed clockwork in the thing!" he said. "I could hear it all the way. I thought every one would hear it. I can't get the ticking out of my brain!" He set down the glass and turned a glittering gaze on the other.

"It's worth all that comes from it," he said. "You play me fair! Do you understand? You'll play me fair or I'll settle with you!"

The doctor smiled, a smile of horrible cunning.

"As you settled with your brother?" he said.

Phil shrank into the chair speechless, looking at him with trepidation in his eyes. The shot had gone home.

"Pshaw!" said Bersonin. "Do you take me for a fool not to guess? Come, we needn't quarrel. Our interests are the same. Go home, now, to your Japanese butterfly and wait!"

* * * * * * *

The chapel was but sparsely filled. From where she sat Barbara through the open door could see the willows along the disconsolate roadway whipping in the fleering dashes of wind. She had reached a point in these few tragical days where her mind, overwrought with its own pain, had acquired a kind of benumbing lassitude that was not apathy and yet was far removed from spontaneous feeling. Daunt's presence that dreadful night on the hillside, his confusion, his bleeding hand, his roundabout return to the hotel—all this at the sight of the Damascene crop in the bushes had flashed to her mind in damnable sequence. And yet something deep and unfathomed within her had driven her to the obliteration of that mute evidence. Austen Ware had slipped and fallen, such was the universal verdict. The truth was sealed forever in the urn now bound overseas to its last resting place. She alone, she thought, knew the secret of that Nikko tragedy.

The pity offered her, though not openly expressed, since her engagement had not been formally announced, hurt her like physical blows, and the quiet of the Ts'kiji rectory was some solace. Tonight an unwelcome task lay before her. She was to visit the yacht, now by a satiric freak of chance legally her own, to seal the private papers of the man whose deed of gift might not now be recalled.

As she sat listening to the meaningless reading and the sighing of the wind above the chapel roof Barbara's eyes on the stained glass figure in the rose window were full of a wistful loneliness. If her father were only alive—if he could be near her now! Unconsciously her gaze strayed across the hedges to the gray roof of the old temple where lived the eccentric solitary to whom her thought insistently recurred. In her trouble she longed to go to him with a longing the greater because it seemed fantastic and illogical.

She was startled by a sound outside—the single, shrill, high scream of a horse in some stable near at hand. It cut through a pause in the service, sharp, curdling, like a cry of mortal fear. A baby near Barbara awoke and began to cry, and the mother soothed it with whispered murmurings.

Suddenly there arose a strange rattling, a groaning of timbers. The bishop ceased reading. People were rising to their feet. The building was shifting, swaying, with a sickening upward vibration as though it were being trotted on some Brobdingnagian knee. Barbara felt a qualm like the first touch of mal de mer. "Ji-shin! Ji-shin!" rose the cry, and there was a rush for the open air. In another moment she found herself out of doors with the frightened crowd.

It was her first experience of earthquake, and the terror had gripped her bodily.

The air swelled with a horrible, crunching, grinding roar like the complaint of a million riven timbers. Across the lane a sinister dust cloud sprang into the air like a monstrous hand with spread fingers. "It is one of the temples," said the bishop, and hurried with the rest, Barbara following him.

The newer temple faced the open space as usual, but across the hedged garden no ornate roof now thrust up its Tartar gables. Instead was a huddle of wreckage upon which lay the huge roof, crumpled and shattered like the fragments of a gigantic mushroom. From the tangle projected beam ends coiled about with painted monsters, and here and there in the cut [illegible] great lumps of [illegible]

minar deities. Over all hung a fine yellow dust, choking and penetrating.

What was under those ruins? Barbara shivered. She was quite unconscious of the mud and the pelting rain. The bishop drew her under the temple porch and they stood together watching the men now working with mattocks, saws and with loose beams for levers, prying up a corner of the fallen roof. It seemed an hour they had stood there when a priest, bareheaded, his robes caked with mud, came from the clustering crowd. The bishop questioned him in Japanese. Barbara guessed from his face what the priest had answered. She waited quiveringly.

Through the bishop's mind swift thoughts were passing. He knew by hearsay of the recluse—knew that he was not an oriental. He had often seen the placard on the little gate, "Maker of Buddhas." He had never passed it without a pang. It seemed a satirical derision of the holiest ideal of the west—a type and sign of reversion, a sardonic mockery of the creed of Christ. He was a priest holding the torch of the true light to this alien people, and here, a dark shadow across its brightness, had stood this derisive denial. Yet now perhaps this man stood on the threshold of the hereafter, and he was a man of his own race.

He turned to Barbara. "Wait here for me," he said. "I am going in. I will come back to you as soon as I can."

The bishop went quickly through the crowd to a gap under the great gables where the beams had been sawed through and the rubbish shoveled to one side, making a difficult way into the interior. A group of priests stood on the altar platform beside a huddle of wadded mats and brocaded draperies on which a man was lying, his open eyes upturned to the painted monsters on the twisted tangle of rafters.

The bishop hesitated, then came close.

The man's head turned toward him. For an instant he seemed to shrink into the cushions; then in his eyes, dark with the last shadow, came a swift yearning. He spoke to the priests, and they drew back.

"ARTHUR, DON'T YOU KNOW ME?"

"Arthur," he said, "don't you know me?"

A gasping sound came from the leaning bishop. "John! John Fairfax!" he cried, composure dropping from him, and fell on his knees. "After these years!"

The other lifted his hand and touched the bishop's pale, smooth shaved face.

"I am going, Arthur," he said. "I never intended to speak, though I've seen you often. I thought it was best. Did she—did my wife never tell you?"

"Never a word, John. I have never known!" cried the bishop in a shaken voice.

"It was my fault—all mine. I never believed as she did, Arthur, and here in the east what was breath and bread to her to me came to seem all mumbo jumbo. I had had a hard life, and I wanted comfort—for her. Then I found out about the gold lacquer."

He paused to gather the strength that was fast ebbing.

"I got the formula from a crazy priest, and I began in a small way—the idol making, I mean. I had a shop at Saga. At first it was only for the mandarins in the China trade, and no one knew. But the lacquer grew famous, and within a year I was shipping to Rangoon and Tibet. I made all sorts of praying tackle. Then—then I quarreled with my agent, and he told my wife. She didn't believe it, but one day he brought her to where I was at work. I was modeling an Amida for a temple in Nagasaki."

He threw an arm across his face and moaned.

"She left me that night. A ship was in the harbor. I never saw her again. I never knew I had a daughter till a week ago—I never knew!"

There was a silence.

"I have seen her. She must never guess, Arthur. She thinks I died in Nagasaki. It's better so. Promise me!"

"I promise, John," said the bishop. "I promise."

The bell of the temple across the inclosure began to strike. "It sounds like the bell of the old Greek church," the failing voice said. "When I left home the priest said I would do nothing good. But"—the grim ghost of a smile touched his lips—"I made good idols, Arthur." The smile flickered out. "My little girl! My own, own daughter! Don't you think it was cruel, Arthur?"

"Would you like to see her?" asked the bishop. "She is just outside."

The wan face was illuminated. "Yes, yes," he said. "God bless you, Arthur! Bring her, but quickly!"

The dying man's eyes were closed when Barbara knelt down and took his chilling hand between hers.

"It is I," she said softly.

His gaze was dimming, but he knew her. "I can't see your face much longer," he said, "but I can feel your hands. How long ago it seems—our flower of dream! It bloomed today, my dear."

She was weeping silently. There was a pause in which the wind droned through the shattered timbers. The dying man's free hand wandered feebly at his side, found a gold lacquer crucifix and drew it closer.

"The white cross on the roof—it call-

-ed me back!" He tried to lift the golden crucifix. "I've been making this for a long time. I was outside when the shock came, but I went back to save it. I should like it to be in your chapel, Barbara."

She laid her young cheek against his hand. She could not speak.

Across the silence the bishop's low and broken voice rose in the prayer for the sick:

"O most merciful God, who, according to the multitude of thy mercies, dost so put away the sins of those who truly repent that thou rememberest them no more, open thine eye of mercy. Renew in him, most loving Father. Impute not unto him his former sins."

"Are you still there, Barbara?"

"Yes."

"A little longer." Death was heavy on his tongue. "Namu Amida Butsu!" he muttered. "But at the end—the old things—the old faith"—

The tears ran down the bishop's face.

"They are all dead now," came the broken whisper through the closing darkness. "There is no one to forgive me, except"—

"God will forgive you!" said the bishop, with a sob.

But the idol maker did not hear.

CHAPTER XXV.

"IF THIS BE FORGETTING."

THE sailing master of the yacht Barbara, with his mate and crony, sat in the main saloon whiling away a tedious hour.

The room bore all the earmarks of "a rich man's plaything." It was tastefully and luxuriously furnished. The upholstery was of dark green brocade, thin Persian prayer rugs were on the hardwood floor and electric bulbs in clusters were set in silver sconces which swung with a long slow motion as the yacht rocked to the deepening respiration of the sea. At one side a small square table held the remains of a comfortable refection, and by it on a stand sat a phonograph with which the two men had been gloomily diverting themselves.

But though the repertoire of the instrument was extended it had brought little satisfaction tonight. The last irksome fortnight of inactivity had made each selection trite and familiar. Moreover, the captain's spirits were not of the best. The abrupt change of ownership, followed hard by the death of the yacht's former master, had confused his automatic temperament, and the sight of the double locked cabin door in the saloon was a daily depressant. He had never seen the yacht's new owner, though she had written him that he might expect her at any time, and the enigma of a future under a woman's orders troubled his sturdy and unimaginative mind.

"Wish to the Lord she'd come if she's ever coming!" he muttered as the phonograph ran down with a wheeze. "This is two days I've kept the dinghy lying at the hatoba."

The mate nodded. It was not the first time the remark had been made. "I wonder why she ordered his cabin door kept locked?" he said.

"Papers," returned the captain sapiently. "Wants to seal 'em up for the executor. New owner must be rich, I guess. I'd like to know what she paid for the outfit. First time I ever signed under a new skipper sight unseen!"

"Miss Barbara Fairfax," mused the mate. "Nice name. Curious only one piece of mail should come for her—and second class too." He picked up a thin package from the table, folded in dark paper. This had been made sodden by the rain. Now it parted and a flat, black disk of hard rubber slipped from it and rolled across the floor.

"Blamed if it isn't a phonograph record," he said as he picked it up. "It's out of the wrapper now. Let's try it." He set it in place and rewound the spring, and the saloon filled with a chorus of chirps and tinklings from quivering catgut smitten by irony plectrons.

"Samisen!" said the captain. "I've heard 'em in the tea houses. Give me a fiddle for mine any day."

The yacht's cabin boy entered. "The dinghy's coming, sir," he said. "Lady and gentleman aboard of her."

The captain got up hastily, put out a hand and stopped the machine. "Take away those dishes, and be quick about it," he ordered. "Mr. Rogers, pipe up the men."

Presently he was giving a helping hand to the visitors at the break in the rail, looking into a pair of brown eyes that he thought were the saddest he had ever seen and replying to a voice that was saying:

"I am Miss Fairfax, Captain Hart, and this is my uncle, Bishop Randolph."

When all had been done and the papers sealed in a portmanteau for delivery to the consul general Barbara came into the brilliant saloon. The yacht was pitching heavily, and she could stand with difficulty. Steadying herself against the table, she saw the empty wrapper addressed to herself. It bore a Nikko postmark. Who could have sent it here? As she stood holding the paper in her hand the bishop entered.

"WHAT WAS IN THIS, I WONDER?"

"Captain Hart thinks we would better stay aboard tonight, Barbara," he said. "There is a nasty sea, and we should be sure of a drenching in the dinghy. We have no change of clothing, you know."

"You will be quite comfortable, Miss Fairfax," the captain's voice spoke deferentially from the doorway. "The guest rooms are always kept ready."

"Very well," she said, a little wearily. "That will be best, no doubt." She held up the torn wrapper. "What was in this, I wonder?"

The captain confessed his indiscretion with embarrassment, and she absolved him with a smile that covered a sharper pang than she had yet felt that evening, for that thin disk had been on the hillside that Nikko night—perhaps had heard that quarrel, had seen that blow, had watched a man crawling, staggering foot by foot till he collapsed against the frame that held it. By what strange chance had it been sent to her here?

Her uncle bade her good night presently, being an indifferent sailor, and betook himself to bed. The room that had been prepared for her opened into the saloon. She was too restless to retire, and after a time she climbed up the companionway to the windy deck.

The vaulted sapphire of the sky had been swept clean of cloud, and the stars sparkled whitely. Off at one side, a flock of sinister shadows, she could make out the squadron of battleships and beyond in a curving line the twinkling lights of the Bund.

Her love would come back to her only in bitter memories, in painful thoughts that would shame and burn. All else beside, she had been Austen Ware's promised wife. How could she still feel love for the man who had caused his death? Yet—if she must—if she could never tear that image from [illegible]

HIGH SCHOOL GIRLS MEET WITH A DEFEAT

The Plainfield High School girls' baskefball team received its first defeat of the season yesterday afternoon, when it met the South Orange High School five on the local court. The final score was 26 to 19. Last season South Orange was defeated by Plainfield, but yesterday the visitors brought a star player which the local guards could not keep covered. Miss Thomas, who played a spectacular game, threw goals from all angles. She threw four baskets from play and one goal from foul in the first half.

Miss Brown, of the visiting team, also played a fast game, scoring one basket in this half. Miss Stewart and Miss Mehl, the local forwards, both played a hard game, but they were so closely guarded by the fast work of the visitors that scoring was practically impossible. Miss Stewart made the only score for P. H. S. in this half, scoring two baskets. During the last half Miss Mehl threw two baskets almost in succession. The lineup:

Plainfield—Forwards, J. Stewart, A. Mehl; center, A. Douglas; side center, E. Phillips; guards, E. Rodenbaugh, M. Moy.

South Orange—Forwards, L. Thomas, T. Brown; center, E. Arcularis; side center, V. Crooks; guards, A. Jones, H. Stekely.

Referee, Miss Daisy Day; linesmen, T. Champlain, K. Sminck.

MUST HAVE MORE ROOM IN THE STATE CAPITOL

The situation at the State House with reference to finding accommodations for some of the overcrowded departments is getting tense. The State House Commission is considering the advisability of moving the State Department of Education, or a portion of it, to the Green House recently acquired by the State, on the corner of West State and Delaware streets, adjoining the State House grounds. The officials of this department, however, say the building is not suitable and that it will not give them half room enough. The proposition of the State House Commission was to spend $1,000 in fitting up the dwelling as an office building, but the officials of the State Architect's Department claim it will require much more money than this to fit the dwelling for offices.

There are no proper heating facilities in the building and a more serious situation is that it is claimed that the floors are not strong enough to support the safes which would be necessary for the preservation of State documents. The State Department of Education has a large safe in its present offices in the State House and it is claimed that if it were moved to the Green House it would have to be placed in the cellar, owing to the weakness of the floors.

Under the new laws regulating the Educational Department several additional employes will be required when Commissioner Kendall appoints the other Deputy Commissioners. It is expected that these appointments will be made in a short time and then to organize them and get them in working order will require considerable more room. The present quarters of the Educational Board are already overcrowded and the officials object to a proposal to put part of the department in the Green House, because it is claimed that this division under this plan would hamper the work.

GRIGGS SAYS RECALL WOULD OUST WILSON

The New York Republican club dined Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson last night in New York, listened to a carefully prepared analysis of government control of big business and a defense of President Taft's policies along that line, and then gave ear to Otto T. Bannard, president of the club, and John W. Griggs, ex-attorney general and former governor of New Jersey, while they lauded Mr. Taft and called on all good Republicans to get together and work for President Taft's renomination and "triumphant re-election." The members of the club listened attentively and at times they applauded.

Mr. Bannard sounded the "boost for Taft" when, in calling for a toast to the President of the United States, he added: "None more honest, none more sincere; he's the greatest jurist of them all."

This sentiment, like many others, received the approval of the members, but the biggest applause of the night greeted the incidental mention of Justice Hughes.

Ex-Governor Griggs began his talk by a reference to the likeness in things political in New Jersey and New York. In both states, he said, Democratic governors had been elected because many Republicans had a grouch. He thought the grouch had reacted and said:

"If we had the recall over our way we'd have our governor out of office the first chance we had. We'd retire him on a pension."

When the laughter and applause had subsided a bit, Mr. Griggs went on:

"It does seem, however, that my governor has reversed the natural order of things. I always thought that a man got a pension after fighting, when the war was ended and he was discharged. But my governor wanted one when he'd just enlisted for the fight."

Then Mr. Griggs began his praise of President Taft. His administration, said Mr. Griggs, had been marked by careful, active, studious endeavor, and Mr. Taft had attempted tasks enough for two administrations and had gotten away with them.

TROUBLE NOW IN RANKS OF MODERN WOODMEN.

Chicago, Dec. 16.—Difficulties within the ranks of the Modern Woodmen of America have resulted in the organization of a number of the members into a party styling itself the National Layman's Association of the Modern Woodmen of America, the first convention of which was held this week in the Hotel Sherman, Chicago.

The trouble originated from the belief of some of the "independents" that the officers of the Modern Woodmen are in collusion with the "old line" insurance companies. It is charged that the latter are endeavoring to fatally weaken fraternal bodies, and that the contemplated raise in rates of the Woodmen would materially assist them in accomplishing this.

CLAIM BALSAM TREES FOR CHRISTMAS USE.

There are several kinds of trees used for Christmas purposes, among them being the fir, balsam, spruce, cedar and hemlock. Of them all, the two best varieties are the spruce or fir, and balsam, and by the greater number the balsam is considered the better. It is said the balsam is prettier and that the needles remain on it longer.

The spruce tree needles are of different shape and fall off soon after the tree is cut. Th trees from Jersey and Delarwe form a small proportion of those used at Christmas time, but these are mostly cedar. Some hemlock trees find their way into Christmas use and once in a while a pine, but the last-named varieties are in the minority.

N. P. H. S. NOTES.

Monday afternoon the North Plainfield High School boys' basketball five will play Roselle Park High at Roselle Park.

A chess club is about to be organized in the North Plainfield High School and a meeting will be held soon to elect officers. William P. Taylor and Edmund J. Kenney originated the idea.

Remove Appendix of 9-Weeks Baby.
Pittsburgh, Dec. 16.—A nine-weeks-old baby was successfully operated on at the Mercy Hospital early yesterday for appendicitis. The child's father submitted to a similar operation recently.

Alfred K. Naugle, a teacher in the Whittier School, Dunellen, who was operated upon at Muhlenberg Hospital three weeks ago for appendicitis, has returned home.

WARD IS AGAINST FOUL STRIKE RULE.

If John M. Ward, chairman of the National League rules committee has his way the foul strike rule will be modified, at least in his own organization. Ward as soon as he learned that he had been appointed the head of the rules committee declared that at least one reform should serve to increase the batting.

The present foul strike rule is too great a handicap for the batsman to overcome, and gives the pitcher an immense advantage. I have studied the working of the rule with much care, and I believe that it should be modified. While I haven't had time, of course, to think of alterations, it seems to me that if the first foul ball was called a strike instead of the first two, the batsman would enjoy more leeway.

"It is possible that I shall advocate the leveling of the pitcher's box. The raised box, in some cases two feet higher than the base paths, also gives the pitcher an unsportsmanlike advantage. He should be made to deliver the ball on a plane with the plate instead of pitching downhill, so to speak."

Citizens Pay Salaries.
Though Mayor Gonzales, of Bayonne, refuses to allow any money to be borrowed by the city to pay the salaries of the police and firemen and city officials for November and December, and insists that they will have to wait until taxes sufficient to meet the demand have been collected, the public servants have been assured that they will get their money. This has been brought about by the action of fifteen citizens who have banded together and have gone on a joint thirty days' note for $12,000. This will cover the salaries of all the city officials for the month of November.

$500 Bequest to Church.

EFFORT AND RESULTS.

All around us, everywhere nature has been showing us that increased result comes from lessened effort, not from greater effort, but we have been too stupid to understand. Because it takes one pound of coal to produce one horse-power, and two pounds of coal to produce two horse-power, because it is harder to jump over a fence four feet high than over a fence two feet high, because it is still harder to jump over a fence five feet high, we have non-reasoned back from results to effort, and concluded that effort should be gauged by result which is in accord with one set of experiences, but wholly contrary to the larger experience. Any specific kind of effort, measured by a result, falls from a maximum to a minimum and then rises again to another maximum, so that there is only one point where maximum result is attained for minimum effort, a point properly scheduled at 100 per cent.

This law of the reduction of effort for greater results crops up in the most unexpected places so that engineers have evolved the definite critical speed, the speed of maximum result for relatively least expenditure. In fast steamers resistance does not increase with the cube of the speed, but there are certain higher critical speeds at which resistance is less. Nearly 100 years ago in England a man running express passenger canal boats had them towed by galloping horses at a speed of nearly fourteen miles an hour, claiming this was easier than a slower speed. He was ridiculed by scientists who opposed the law of cubic increase of resistance. A bet was made, dynometers attached, and up to eight miles the law held good, but above eight miles the canal boat began to climb out of the water, so that at fourteen miles the actual resistance was small. This was the origin of the hydroplane boat. A wise Kansas mare hitched to a plough, if it pulled heavily, would look back, take in the situation, and increase her speed. The plough immediately pulled easier because the greater speed flung the clinging earth free of the mold board, thus greatly lessening friction. — Engineering Magazine.

NATION'S PROBLEM

To Make Good Citizens the Immigrants Must Have the Gospel, Says Pastor.

REV. MR. BROEK'S DISCOURSE.

"Burning Question," Minister Says is What is to Be Done for the Alien—He Gives His Solution of Question.

"The Gospel and the Immigrant," was the topic of an interesting discourse by Rev. J. Y. Broek at Trinity Reformed church, yesterday morning. In part Mr. Broek said:

"Immigration is one of the greatest problems facing the American people. All other problems are combined in this one. The aliens are coming to our shores at the rate of 1,100,000 a year, or 20,000 people a week. At the present rate of influx they could populate fifty cities the size of Plainfield, each year. Sixty-three per cent. of the immigrants land in the State of New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

"They are illiterate and often in dense ignorance, 25 per cent. can neither read nor write. Frequently they do not make good citizens in their own country, yet they gain citizenship in our land in five years. They are attracted by the abundant prosperity, and the personal freedom which they here enjoy. They have either escaped military duties, avoided persecution or burdensome taxes in their native country. During the year 1908, $70,000,000 was sent to Italy as the stream of earnings of Italian immigrants.

"What shall we do with the immigrant is the burning question. Some would say 'Let all come who would.' Some find solution in restricting immigration. Statesmen differ on this question. Washington doubted the advisability of allowing all people to land on these shores. Madison favored a policy of liberality and inducement and Jefferson said he wished that there was a fire between this continent and Europe.

"The aliens are already here. What are we going to do with them? To a Christian there is only one solution. We must give them the Gospel of Christ. The Cross of Calvary is the only remedy. We are not a barbarous nation, but a Christian nation. Christ solved every problem and Christ can solve this one. Solution of every problem is given in diligent application to the dear old Book. Give me a nation that is willing to bow before the Maker of this Book and that nation shall stand as long as the earth shall exist.

"Christ's gospel is for all. Souls are as precious to Him, among the poor, ignorant and filthy, as among the cultured and refined. Why do churches move away from poorer districts. God gives a foreign missionary challenge to each local church by setting the aliens on its doorsteps and saying, 'Give ye them to eat of the Bread of Life.' Christ's gospel must not run away from rags, poverty, filth, but must recognize the fact, that if we are more refined and cultured than others, we are only thus privileged, but also obligated to give, to love and bless others."

"White Christmas" Service

The Bible school of the First Baptist church will observe a "White Christmas" service in the church on Friday night. The Cecelia String Quartet, of New York, will be present. Frank L. Brown, of Brooklyn, superintendent of the largest Sunday school in the world, will deliver a short address. Mr. Brown has just returned from a trip around the world at the request of the International Sunday school committee, visiting Sunday schools and will tell something of his trip. The members of the school will present their gifts for the poor at that time.

Christmas at First Baptist.

The Sunday school of the First Baptist church will hold its Christmas service next Sunday afternoon. Grant Colfax Tullar and a fine orchestra will be present to aid in the musical program and the church choir will also assist. In the morning there will be a special service by the chorus choir and Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong will preach an appropriate sermon.

Hope Team Victorious.

The Hope chapel basketball five defeated the team from the Plainfield Trust Company at Hope gymnasium Saturday night. The score was 34 to 9. The lineup: Hope Chapel—Forwards, T. Heron, J. Heron; center, Doig; guards, Wardrop, Leighs. Plainfield Trust Company—Forwards, Trotter, Moulton, Dunham; center, Morrison; guards, Case, Schmink.

—The funny jumping frog game is on exhibition this week at room 411, P. O. Bldg. It makes a most appropriate Xmas gift.

MARSHAL REILLY MAY BECOME KAN. FARMER

South Plainfield citizens have received with much regret the information that they will in all probability soon lose their efficient marshal, William Reilly, who has served them faithfully for the past nine years. He returned Saturday after a trip to Minneapolis, Kansas, where he looked over a farm of 160 acres bequeathed by a relative to his deceased mother and of which he is now one of three owners, the others being his two brothers, John Reilly, of Newark, and Patrick Reilly, of Ireland. The possibilities of the country so impressed him that he is seriously considering purchasing his brothers' interests and locating on the property. Mrs. Reilly, who accompanied her husband, also likes the Kansas atmosphere, as does Miss Mary McDonough, of South Plainfield, a third member of the party, speaks well of the western country.

The farm property was owned by a cousin of Mr. Reilly's mother. When it reverted to the sons, the marshal decided to personally inspect the acreage, finding it to be located in a good section. Real estate men say the farm is easily worth $10,000. Mr. Reilly is employed by the Lehigh Valley Railroad, which recognized his valuable services by providing transportation for himself and wife to and from Minneapolis.

JACOB FASS' PLANS FOR THE 'NEW PARIS'

Jacob A. Fass, proprietor of "The Paris," announced today his plans for his new store, Nos. 140, 142, 144 West Front street, formerly known as the Compton building, which is just receiving its finishing touches with structural iron work. The building which is a four story brick structure is being remodeled and reinforced with a considerable amount of tiled brick and iron work. The two story and basement extension is of iron and brick with a metal roof, making it an absolute fire proof building with all modern conveniences.

In the basement there is being built a cold storage department for the proper storing of furs for the general public filling in a long felt want in this city. The store with the balconies represent 21,400 square feet of floor space. The latest style of dust and moth proof cabinets are being installed for the proper handling of the stock. Natural lighting will be provided by 320 square feet of skylight. Three large easy climbing stairways have been provided for the safe traveling to the balconies, thereby avoiding congestions at any one time. The entrance to the store is being so arranged as to allow any number of people from coming in and going out without the necessity of elbowing with one another and with those who are looking at the window displays. The front will be all modernly built and encased with 990 square feet of French plate glass. The work has been done by local mechanics.

CITY JUDGE DEMEZA DISPOSES OF MINOR CASES.

John Cater, of Sycamore street, was arraigned before Judge William G. DeMeza in the city court this morning for riding a bicycle on the sidewalk. Sentence was suspended with a warning. Mrs. Mary McFadden, of Dunellen, picked up in a bewildered condition, told the court that she had been made so by home made wine given her in a friend's house she had visited. Sentence was suspended. Charles Day, was also given a suspended sentence. He was arrested for drunkenness.

Albert Cook, colored, was sent to Elizabeth for 60 days. Several months ago Cook was arrested for "shooting crap" and after being fined asked to be allowed to go to the home of a friend to get the money. His request was granted and that was the last seen of him until Saturday night when he returned to town and was immediately arrested.

"Loaded," Fell off Load.

Adam Pfeiffer, of Oak Tree, fell off a load of Christmas trees on East Fifth street this morning and did not break the half pint whiskey flask the contents of which was responsible for his tumble. Neither did he injure himself although he is long past the half-century mark in age. Sergeant Overbaugh was sent to the scene of the downfall and brought the mud bespattered one of famous name to police headquarters. He was too much intoxicated to be given a hearing and will be arraigned tomorrow morning.

Rev. Gabriel Reid Maguire baptized two persons at the Park Avenue Baptist church last night.

LABOR VS. CAPITAL

Rev. C. S. Kemble Says They Have Simply Declared War on Each Other.

DISCUSSES LABOR QUESTION.

Suggests That Arbitration Courts Be Provided For the Settlement of All Grievances.

"Are Strikes Necessary?" was the subject of a stirring sermon delivered by Rev. C.S. Kemble at the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, last night, in which the preacher presented some pointed truths. Mr. Kemble spoke in part as follows:

"The dynamiting of the Los Angeles Times building a little over a year ago, in which twenty-one lives were lost, now definitely known to be a bloody battle in a great labor war, is too ominous a symptom of social disease to be passed by without the gravest and most thorough consideration by both press and pulpit.

"It is not enough to summarily decide that 'Murder is Murder,' as our great ex-President does. Nor enough to condemn what is called the 'direct action' wing of the labor army. These men have shown a reckless disregard of human life that is simply appalling and all right-minded people should deplore and condemn their ruthless destruction of human beings, most of whom were of their own class and not of the ranks of the enemy.

"Because of these deeds of violence on the part of the laborers we are not warranted, however, in concluding that the capitalist class is entitled to our sympathy or backing. The laborers, as united for aggressive action in the various unions are fighting for the 'close shop' and for shorter hours of toil—for safer and more sanitary conditions of labor—for higher wages; the capitalists as represented, for instance in the National Erectors' Association, the organization these iron workers have been fighting, are organized to establish the 'open shop.' They have simply declared war on each other.

"Our local coal men last week referred to the preparation for another war in the anthracite coal fields, the company building stockades and otherwise fortifying themselves for the impending conflict. The question before this nation for its decision is simply the arbitration treaty applied to class struggles as well as to international disputes. Has not the time fully come when we can trust out national and class differences to arbitration, that is to the appeal to tribunals of justice instead of to the stern arbitrament of war.

"Are we sufficiently civilized, if not sufficiently christianized to stop the old savage appeal to force? If the nation decides that war is the proper method for settling irreconcilable differences of opinion, for righting injustice then the McNamaras are merely bloodstained heroes of the labor army. Where there are no courts a man's own strong arm is his only defense. We compel men to disarm only when we provide public means of redress. Shall this anachronism of armed conflict between capital and labor continue or shall Congress or our Legislatures provide arbitration courts to which both parties shall be compelled to submit their grievances and contention? War is hell. We've had enough of it. Let's try the Golden Rule."

Richardson—Stark.

Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Lillian May Richardson, daughter of Rev. J. W. Richardson, formerly of this city, and Arthur W. Stark, of Stamford, Conn. The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride's father by the latter, on Friday. The bride's mother died recently. Rev. J. W. Richardson was formerly pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church.

Greetings from Grand President.

The grand president of the Sons of St. George of the State, will send greetings to the Englishmen of the city who will meet at the Queen City Hotel tonight to organize a local branch of the order. It is expected that a large number of men will identify themselves with the order. Several grand lodge officers will be present.

Navy Chaplain to Lecture.

Chaplain D. H. Tribou, U. S. N., will give an illustrated lecture before the Brotherhood of the First M. E. church, Friday night in Vincent chapel, on "The Old and New Navy." The Brotherhood will hold a short business session prior to the lecture and elect officers.

Attended Alumni Banquet.

Several members of the Plainfield Princeton Alumni Association attended a banquet given by the Princeton Alumni Association of Montclair, Friday night.

SEEKING RELIEF

New Jersey Central and Others Want Modification of Drawbridge Rules in Rush Hours.

COMMUTER TRAINS DELAYED.

Empty Mud Scows Given Precedence—Schedule Shows Movement of 174 Trains in 174 Minutes.

Another agitation has been started by the patrons of the New Jersey Central and others interested in the matter, to reduce to a minimum the delay occasioned by the precedence given to navigation resulting in the opening of the drawbridge over Newark Bay. By reason of the operation of the Meadows Company, filling a large area of the Newark meadows with excavated material, ashes and refuse from the city of New York, a largely increased movement of mud scows, with their loads, and the return empty movement, has taken place.

Sometime ago a monster petition was circulated and finally sent to Washington, the movement being backed up as well by the powerful Merchants' Association of New York, asking for consideration on the part of the Government whereby the rules and regulations governing the opening of the drawbridges might be modified to the extent that in the morning and evening, during the rush or commutation hours, the drawbridge might be kept closed. The army officers who have jurisdiction in the matter denied the request and delays have become considerably more frequent by reason of the mud scow movement; and anomalous though it is, an empty mud scow has precedence over several trains loaded with business men and women enroute to their daily duties.

It is pointed out that between the hours of 4:02 p. m. and 6:55 p. m., there are fifty-six outbound and thirty-one inbound trains at the Jersey City terminal shed. This total of eighty-seven trains in and out must be doubled in order to get the true movement, for every loaded train in must be moved empty out of the shed, while every loaded train out has been placed empty into the shed. There is therefore, a movement of 174 trains in and out in 174 minutes, exactly a train movement at the rate of one a minute.

In the morning between 7:11 and 9:44 a. m. there are fifty-two inbound and thirty outbound trains, being a total of eighty-two trains, which, with the empty movement necessary to and from the shed, is 164 train movements in 153 minutes, being a movement slightly in excess of one per minute; or to be more exact, one in each 56 seconds. The above represents the schedule and ideal performance, and if everything moved like clockwork is what would regularly take place.

One can realize, therefore, what it means to traffic when, by reason of a delay at the drawbridge, and a congestion of trains at that point, several trains are thrown back on this close and intricate schedule movement, and terminal employes must turn themselves and double up so as to accommodate the congestion thus produced, and overcome a disarrangement of movement which, flowing normally, is at the rate of one movement to each minute.

ENTREATED MARTINE TO OBTAIN HEARING.

Elton Sullivan, a youth of twenty years, of Camden, called on Senators Briggs and Martine Thursday in an endeavor to interest them in his behalf to the extent of securing for him the privilege of giving a demonstration before the bureau of ordnance, War Department, of a new process for the manufacture of smokeless powder which he claims to have invented.

Sullivan, who is a member of the Pennsylvania rifle team, for a few years past interested himself in experiments on powders of various sorts for infantry equipment, and now believes that he has a smokeless powder that will reduce to a minimum the corrosion attendant upon the escape of gases when discharging the rifle. This feature has been one of the main drawbacks in the use of smokeless powders in the United States army.

LONG ILLNESS ENDS

Mrs. A. M. Runyon Passes Away After Months of Patient Suffering.

RESIDED HERE MANY YEARS.

Was a Woman of Lovable Character and Devoted to Her Home—Leaves Husband and Two Sons.

Mrs. Elizabeth Willits Runyon, wife of Alexander M. Runyon, passed away at her home on Madison avenue, at midnight Saturday, following a long illness. She had been ailing for two years and twelve weeks ago suffered a breakdown which compelled her to take to her bed. She continued to sink from then on and though her death had been expected for several days she was conscious almost to the last, recognizing the members of her family until twelve hours before the end.

Mrs. Runyon was born in New York city in 1839, the daughter of the late Samuel and Parmelia Stout Willits. Her girlhood days were spent at Aurora, N. Y., where her father died in 1856. The family moved to Plainfield soon after and two years later the young woman became the wife of Alexander M. Runyon. Her home was always her first consideration and her life was devoted to it.

Mrs. Runyon became a member of the old Second Baptist church and at its disbandment in 1876, joined the Congregational church. She retained her membership until the time of her death, always manifesting a keen interest in the work of the congregation. She was also an enthusiastic supporter of the Bible study movement conducted by Rev. Dr. Stearns and others.

One of the most noticeable traits in Mrs. Runyon's personality was her love of old friendships. She never forgot them or lost an opportunity to renew them. In her later life she liked nothing better than a reminiscent chat with a girlhood chum or to tell others of all those she had known who had passed away. Her reading of late had been limited because of the strain on her vision but she kept fully posted on current events, especially with respect to religious matters. Throughout her long illness, she bore her suffering with the same beautiful Christian resignation that endeared her to her family and friends throughout her life.

Beside her husband, Mrs. Runyon is survived by two sons, Frank W. and Elmer E. Runyon, both of this city. The funeral will be held at her late home tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 and burial will be in the family plot in Hillside cemetery.

Harvey Wentrick, of West Second street, has returned from a visit to Ashley Falls, Mass.

MAY LOSE SIGHT, RESULT OF RUNAWAY

As the result of an injury received late last night in a runaway accident, Paul Leverino, of Midway avenue, is in Muhlenberg Hospital suffering with badly lacerated scalp and face wounds and may lose the sight of one eye. His companion, Frank Ronio, also of Midway avenue, was but slightly hurt and after accompanying his friend to the institution was able to go home.

The young men were out for a ride and were driving eastward on North avenue. When near Leland avenue one of the shafts broke, according to Ronio's story, and the splintered end prodding the horse made it unmanageable. It's wild plunging upset the carriage, pinning Leverino underneath and dragging him for some distance. The horse finally kicked itself loose and ran to Fanwood where it was captured by the hackmen at the station. Leverino was helped to the Century Rubber Trading Co. works and the night watchman there called up police headquarters for the ambulance.

After the victim had been received at the hospital, considerable difficulty was experienced in securing a physician, it being more than an hour before one could be found. Finally Dr. C. B. Lufburrow and Dr. F. C. Ard were reached at their offices and hurried to the hospital, both arriving at about the same time.

C. W. M'CUTCHEN BUYS HUNTERDON CO. FARM

One of the largest realty transactions in Hunterdon county for many years was closed Saturday when Charles W. McCutchen, of Rockview avenue, the borough, purchased the William Probasco farm along the South Branch of the Raritan river near Flemington. The tract contains 236 acres and has been occupied by Mr. Probasco for forty-four years as a stock farm. Some of the best known horses of the State and elsewhere have been bred there and in this manner the place became widely known, especially among horsemen.

All of the buildings and farm equipment are in splendid condition and particularly adapted for the purpose to which the place has been put. It is understood that Mr. McCutchen will make some changes, however, and will conduct the stock raising business on a somewhat enlarged scale.

TO THE "GOOD FELLOWS" OF PLAINFIELD

TO THE GOOD FELLOWS AND THE GOOD GIRLS TOO:

Just about this time last year I told you my story. You listened to it—you did more—you followed its spirit out in a bang-up style. Bless your hearts, you made over 600 poor little tots know the real meaning of a joyous Christmas. I'm not claiming any credit for my story; I'm claiming credit for knowing that there are many Good Fellows in this fine old town of ours—royal chaps who don't do much preaching but when it comes to doing a good turn, well, they're there with the goods. This is no sermon that I'm handing you, it's a heart-to-heart talk with men with red blood in their veins, and here it is off last year's reel:

On Christmas and New Year's eve you and I went out for a good time and spent from $10 to $200. Christmas morning hundreds of children awoke to an empty stocking—the bitter pain of disappointment that Santa Claus had forgotten them. That's the way it used to be. Perhaps it wasn't our fault. We had provided for our own; we had also reflected in a passing way on those less fortunate than our own, but they seemed far off and we didn't know where to find them. Perhaps in the hundred and one things we had to do some of us didn't think of that heart sorrow of the child over the empty stocking.

Now, old man, here's a chance. Just send your name and address to The Daily Press—address Santa Claus—state about how many children you are willing to protect against grief over that empty stocking, inclose a two-cent stamp and you will be furnished with the names, addresses, sex, and age of that many children. It is then up to you, you do the rest. Select your own present, spend 50 cents or $50, and send or take your gifts to those children on Christmas eve. You pay not a cent more than you want to pay—every cent goes just where you want it to go. You gain neither notoriety nor advertising; no record will be kept; your letter will be returned to you with its answer. The whole plan is just as anonymous as old Santa Claus himself.

This is not a newspaper scheme. The Daily Press will preserve the anonymous character of this work. The responsibility of finding the children and sending you their names will be assumed by this paper and it guarantees that whatever you bestow will be deserved.

Neither you nor I get anything out of this, except the feeling that you have saved some child from sorrow on Christmas morning. If that is not enough for you then you have wasted time in reading this—it isn't intended for you, but for the good fellows of Plainfield.

Perhaps a twenty-five cent doll or a ten cent tin toy wouldn't mean much to the children you know, but to the child who would find them in the otherwise empty stocking they mean much—the difference between utter disappointment and the joy that Santa Claus did not forget them. Here is where you and I get in. The charitable organizations attend to the bread and meat; the clothes; the necessaries; you and the rest of the good fellows furnish the toys, the nuts, the candies; the child's real Christmas.

GOOD FELLOW.

"Good Fellow" is not a professional philanthropist, he takes a drink, and even goes out at night with the boys for a mild good time—but he has taken care of some poor little ones each year in Plainfield. He says he wishes he had always curtailed his holiday joy-making with the good fellows even more than he did, so that he might have had more money to gladden childish hearts.

The Worthy Grand Master of the lodge of Good Fellows has laid his plans for securing names through the Charity Organization Society.

This is how you can join the lodge of Good Fellows. Write a letter to "Santa Claus," care of The Daily Press, something like this:

I live at No. .... Street. I will be Santa Claus to 6 children.
John Jones.

The letter will go to Santa Claus. He will indorse on your letter the names and addresses of six children. That letter will be remailed to you. Then you get busy. That's all. Come on in, good fellows.

AUTOS DESTROYED

Two Cars, One Worth $8,000, Burned in Watchung Garage Fire.

THE PROPERTY OF DR. NASH.

Blaze Originated In Tipping of Oil Lamp On Runabout—Loss May Reach $15,000.

The large and costly equipped garage belonging to Rev. Dr. Charles E. Nash, located in the rear of his residence on Valley road, Watchung, was completely destroyed by fire, early Saturday night, together with two automobiles, one an Italia limousine valued at $8,000. Efforts to save either car or any of the contents of the place proved futile, but the flames were kept from a new chicken house, 14x100 feet, by dint of hard work on the part of neighbors and the Watchung Chemical Engine Company. The loss is placed between twelve and fifteen thousand dollars with an insurance of fifty per cent.

Dr. Nash returned from New York on the 6:19 train Saturday night and was met at the North avenue station by his daughter, Miss Elizabeth Nash, with their Maxwell runabout. On arriving home the young woman alighted and Dr. Nash ran the machine into the garage. He had barely gotten inside when one of the oil lamps tipped at an angle and caught fire. The blazing oil dropped to the floor spreading about despite the clergyman's attempts to head it off. He used his gloved hands to beat out streaks of flame on the side of the auto but was compelled to flee for his life by a sudden burst of fire that seemed to reach every part of the interior. It was plainly evident that gasolene had caught somewhere.

The glare of the flames attracted a large crowd to the scene which had to look on helplessly while the cars burned up. The wind was blowing from the residence, located 200 feet distant, probably was all that saved it from being added to the flames. The garage was a two-story structure, the upper part being occupied by two employes, Henry Hiller and William Ralston. Everything they owned, with the exception of what they had on, went up in smoke. The Italia car was recently overhauled at a cost of $800.

Dr. Charles A. Eaton, pastor of the Madison avenue Baptist church, New York, was one of the crowd drawn to the scene and which kept at a respectful distance when word was passed that a tank holding forty gallons of gasolene was built in the ground beneath the garage. There was a chance that it might add to the conflagration, but fortunately did not catch fire.

Mr. Burchard, whose "Rum, Romanism and Rebellion" speech in 1884 has been credited with the defeat of J. G. Blaine for President and the election of Grover Cleveland.

Judge George H. Cabaniss, in the Superior Court, signed the decree after Mrs. Burchard had testified to the desertion of her husband and his refusal to contribute to her support for several years.

FOGLER AND CLARKE WINNERS OF 6-DAY RACE.

Retaining their one-lap lead to the finish, Jackie Clarke, the Australian Rocket, and Joe Fogler, of Little Old New York, won the international six-day bicycle race which was concluded Saturday night on the saucer track, Madison Square Garden. As was the case two years ago, when the same Clarke, riding with Rutt as a partner, carried off the major prize, there was no struggle for the championship on the final night.

The winners covered 2,718 miles and 9 laps, which is 18 miles and 2 rings behind the world's record made in 1908 by MacFarland and Moran, but 173 miles and 6 laps more than the riders traveled last year. Frank Kramer, the teammate of Jimmy Moran, won out, as was expected, in the final mile sprint to decide the tie for second place among six riders. Percy Lawrence and Walter DeMara finished third, Drobach and Halstead fourth, Magin and Cameron fifth and Pye and Collins sixth.

Lorenz and Saldow, the noted German team, which won the last six-day race in Berlin, and was tied with five other teams for second place at the conclusion of the race Saturday night, refused to ride off the tie because of a dispute, and had to content themselves with seventh money. Fred Hill and John Bedell, the reconstructed team, came in eighth, a lap behind the "second" sextet. Lapiv and Van Howaert, the French-Belgian team, ninth, and Brocco and Georget, of Sunny France brought up the rear guard of survivors.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

An old-fashioned Christmas celebration will be held at Warren chapel between Christmas and New Years.

The regular communion service will be held at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church Sunday, January 14.

The sewing meetings of the Home Missionary Society of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church will be omitted until after the holidays.

The choir of the First Baptist church is rehearsing a fine program of Christmas music which will be rendered next Sunday morning.

The Christmas cantata, "The Star of Bethlehem," will be sung by the quartet choir of the First M. E. church, Sunday morning. Miss Edith Rubel, violinist, will assist.

The choir of the Seventh-Day Baptist church will sing a Christmas cantata next Sabbath morning, entitled "The Story of Bethlehem." The Christmas entertainment for the Sunday school will be held Thursday night, December 28.

NEW DISTRICTS MAKE MORE STATE OFFICES.

The creation of two new Congressional districts in this State by the coming Legislature under the new apportionment of Congress will add to the size of the State Geological Survey and the Board of Visitors to the State Agricultural College at New Brunswick, and will give to Governor Wilson the making of six additional appointments during the coming legislative session.

Both of the boards named have their members appointed by Congressional districts, although the Geological Survey also has several members-at-large. The survey has one member from each Congressional district, so that two members will be added to it, while the Board of Visitors will get four new members, as it is composed of two members from each Congressional district.

The terms of three members of the survey will expire in 1912, so that Governor Wilson will also have these places to fill. Those whose terms will expire next year are P. Kennedy Reeves, of Bridgeton, representing the Second Congressional District, Herbert M. Lloyd, of Montclair, representing the Seventh Congressional District, and Harrison Van Duyne, of Newark, one of the members-at-large. The terms of the members of the Board of Visitors is two years, and the present members will all go out of office April 15, 1913, so that the only appointments to this board will be those of the added members.

RUSSIA BARS JESUIT ON SCIENTIFIC QUEST.

The Russian ban against the Order of the Society of Jesus has proved an insuperable bar against the entry into that country of Father Pigot, an eminent Jesuit scientist, from Australia.

Father Pigot is particularly anxious to visit the Pulkova Observatory in order to investigate seismological questions with Prince Galitzin. The British Embassy, on behalf of the meteorological office in London, made special representations at the Ministry of the Interior asking that the anti-Jesuit law might be relaxed in favor of the eminent scientist, but all efforts have been unavailing.

—Job printing. Satisfaction assured.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

One of the grandest holiday bills ever known in the history of vaudeville will be the Christmas week beginning December 25 offering at the Keith and Proctor's 5th Avenue theatre, with a "Merry Christmas to all" and a present for everybody. The first big headliner will be Sidney Drew, assisted by Lionel Barrymore and S. Rankin Drew, presenting for the first time in New York city, an original comedy, entitled "Stalled" written by Mrs. Sidney Drew, who under the pen name of "George Cameron" is known to all theatregoers through her successful farce "Billy" as presented by Mr. Drew at Daly's theatre. The special attraction will be "The King of Comedians," Jack Wilson, assisted by Franklin Batie and Ada Lane, in the nonsensical cyclonic comedy entitled "An Upheaval in Dark Town." An extra feature will be Miss May Tully, who was compelled to cancel her engagement two weeks ago, and who will positively appear next week with her admirable company presenting a new play on divorce life in Reno, Nev., entitled "The Battle Cry of Freedom."

EMERY WHEEL BURSTS, WORKER'S SKULL BROKEN.

A fragment of an emery wheel, at which he was at work in the cutlery factory of the R. Heinisch's Sons Company, Thirteenth avenue and Bruce street, Newark, Saturday morning, struck August Joerger, of 739 South 18th street, on the head, inflicting a fracture of the skull.

The injured man was taken to the City Hospital, where it was said that his condition was serious.

Joerger is foreman of the grinding department and was at work on an eighteen-inch wheel shortly before 8 o'clock, when, without warning, the wheel burst and one of the pieces struck him on the forehad. Joerger fell to the floor unconscious.

The emery wheels are tested frequently in the factory, according to the superintendent, but it is impossible to say at what moment one may burst.

After the accident all work in the department was stopped for some time, and several of the men were so unnerved that they did not resume work.

ELIZABETH CITY COUNCIL CAUCUS PROMISES FIGHT.

With the coming of the caucus for Elizabeth Common Council during the next week, a fight is looked for in the selection of a president of the governing body. As far as can be learned Councilman George H. Schloterer will uphold one end of the struggle, while the friends of Councilman Nugent, the present executive, will fight for his reelection.

According to wide spread rumors should Schloterer be placed in the president's chair, Nathaniel K. Thompson, present street commissioner, will be retained in office despite the request of Mayor Stein that he be removed.

In City Council there are sixteen Democrats, six Republicans and two Socialists. As far as can be seen, Schloterer needs two more councilmen to give him their support to cause a deadlock in the Democratic ranks, and in which event he is likely to be made president.

SPICER COMPANY ENTERTAIN EMPLOYES

The foremen and heads of departments of the Spicer Manufacturing Company were entertained at dinner by the firm Saturday night in the office building on West Fourth street. The success of the affair, which was also mutually beneficial to the employers as well as employes, has prompted the concern to make similar gatherings annual events in the future. At each of these there will be a free exchange of views, just as there was Saturday night and some one high in his chosen line of mechanics to tell the men of his work and its possibilities.

J. C. Whiteside, engineer of the New York Leather Belting Co., was the guest of honor at the first dinner and he gave a very interesting and instructive talk on the practical uses of the product whose manufacture he has studied. Other speakers were C. W. Spicer, George L. Babcock, A. W. Stone, George McCombe, James Rollason, C. R. Guinee, William McCoombe and T. C. Vail. Their topics were all about the department in which they work. A. M. Morrell was toastmaster.

Those present were F. B. Wills, J. W. B. Pearce, F. A. Langworthy, H. W. Vail, D. Mack, W. Ainscough, H. Reeves, M. Martin, A. H. Stevens, H. Maritz, J. D. Anderson, Percy Davis, A. G. Billingsley, R. E. Beeber, A. McConnell, F. R. Kellogg, C. G. Thompson, R. M. Davis.

ON 10,000 MILE TRIP TO WED STEP-BROTHER

With Johannesburg, South Africa, as her destination, Miss Caroline Franke, who formerly resided on South Second street, this city, for several years, and who until recently has been a weaver in a silk mill at Sterling, is on the sea to meet her stepbrother and sweetheart, Henry B. Hoag, to get married.

Miss Franke drew her last pay envelope in the mill two weeks ago and went to New York, boarding a steamer for England, telling only a few of her intimate girl chums of her intentions.

When the marriage takes place it will mark the culmination of a most unusual as well as romantic courtship. Fifteen years ago in McAlester, Oklahoma, Henry B. Hoag, a widower, married the widow of Arthur L. Franke, mother of the prospective bride. About ten years ago the family came east.

Six years ago Hoag went to Johannesburg. When the ship carried him away from New York it also carried the promise of a step-sister to become his bride. Since then the flames of love were kindled through the mails.

WESTFIELD DELIVERIES WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY

YOUNG BRIDEGROOM DIES AT WESTFIELD

Raymond L. Edwards, one of Westfield's best known young men and who had hosts of friends in this city, died yesterday morning at his apartments in the North avenue hotel, Westfield, conducted by his father-in-law, J. H. Willet. Death resulted from heart trouble, brought on by a heavy cold contracted three weeks ago as he was helping to bring the new Westfield auto fire-fighting truck from New York, the day being rainy. He had been confined to his home since that time.

Mr. Edwards was twenty-seven years old and was an insurance broker at 56 Williams street, New York. He removed to Westfield from Brooklyn seven years ago with his father, who retired after twenty-six years' service as a police sergeant. The young man was an ardent horseman and entered his horses in all the local meets of the Plainfield Driving Club.

Mr. Edwards married Miss Mabel Willett on October 25 last. The young couple were living at the North Avenue Hotel temporarily having had a bungalow erected on Brightwood avenue and were planning to move in the first of the year. His bride of seven weeks is almost prostrated.

Beside his wife and father, the young man is survived by two sisters, Miss Kathryn Edwards, of Westfield, and Miss Elsie Edwards, a school teacher in Brooklyn. The funeral arrangements have not been made pending the arrival of the father and Miss Kathryn, who have been in Florida. They are expected home tomorrow.

BLAMES TEACHING FOR PUPILS' BACKWARDNESS.

In a paragraph on the general trend of education, incorporated in his part of the annual report of the Belleville Board of Education, just issuel, School Superintendent George R. Gerard has the following to say of "retardation" of pupils:

"At the present time one hears much about what is called retardation of pupils, and there is exhaustive study of this subject by experts at considerable expense. The real cause of backward pupils in the majority of cases is due to the poor quality of their instruction, rather than to their deficient intellect. Were there less theorizing and more intensive teaching, the number of pupils everywhere who fail of promotion would become an almost negligible quantity.

"Schools, like other workshops, will ever be known by the volume and quality of their product, and the more of good sense we inject into our pedagogy the greater will be the quantity and the higher the standard of our finished students."

That the need of a public playground in Belleville is more urgent now than ever is also brought up by Mr. Gerard, and he recommends that action toward securing a centrally located plot of ground, large enough for such a playground and for a new high school building, which he states will soon be needed, be taken before the price of land gets too high.

In commenting on the progress of the Belleville system during the last year the superintendent says it compares "very favorably with those of other communities," although "a glance at the school reports of various municipalities, wherein statements are made of the increasing excellence of the systems concerned, would give the impression that the schools of some of these towns must nearly approach perfection.

"The most important and, perhaps, the most difficult factor connected with the management of schools," Mr. Gerard says, "has to do with the personnel of the teaching staff, for the daily contact with the teacher moulds the child. Belleville is to be congratulated that stable conditions for the last few years, together with moderate increases of salaries, have permitted the gathering and retention of a corps of teachers which any municipality might be proud to possess."

Christmas Eve Musical.

There will be a special Christmas eve musical service at the Church of the Heavenly Rest Sunday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock, in charge of the rector, Rev. C. H. Mallery. There will be an alto solo, "Cantique De Noel," by Miss Elizabeth Forster, and the choir will sing, "There Were Shepherd's Abiding in the Field;" also several hymns. The decorations will be elaborate.

Funeral of Miss Emma Brokaw.

The funeral service of Miss Emma Brokaw was held at 11:30 o'clock this morning at the late home on East Ninth street and was largely attended by friends and neighbors. Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, former pastor of the First Baptist church, of which Miss Brokaw was a member, officiated, and Miss Grace Carroll, contralto soloist, sang two selections. The burial was in Willow Grove cemetery, New Brunswick.

BATTLE-SCARRED.

Senator Robert L. (Fiddling Bob) Taylor tells about a man in the back-woods of Tennessee who applied for a pension for a gunshot wound. An examining surgena of the medical board stripped and examined him, ejaculating finally:

"Old man, we cannot find a single blemish on your hide. Where were you shot during the war?"

The old man said: "Well, gentlemen, I was shot in the substitute."

Funeral of T. R. Brown.

The funeral service of Thomas R. Brown was held at the late home on Summit avenue, Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. J. O. McKelvey, of Warren chapel, officiated. The burial was in the M. E. cemetery.

Preparations for Christmas communion at the Church of the Heavenly Rest will be made Saturday evening at 8 o'clock and all communicants are urged to be present.

The Christmas cantata will be rendered by children of the Bible school of Trinity Reformed church, Friday night, December 29. Miss S. Etta Raybert is training the children.

Dry Cleaning

like everything else, is cheapest when you get the best, for your garments are cleaned and pressed better—and therefore the work lasts longer and is better for your clothing or household furnishings.

Besides a saving, good cleaning is sanitary. Since this is so, get the best, for handwork in small tubs is sure to carry some dirt along from other clothing belonging to other people.

You don't experience anything of that nature in a first-class place.

'JIM' PARKER APPEARS IN SENSATIONAL ROLE

Jim Parker, temporarily a resident of this city, staying with his wife's mother, Mrs. Percy Von Ohl, while filling an engagement at the Bronx theatre with Gus Hornbrook's Wild West show, became an involuntary hero Saturday, while doing his act at the matinee. His wife who was Miss Adele Von Ohl, also appears in the act and was a witness of her husband's daring.

Mr. Parker is considered an expert rider, and one of his specialties is to pick up his hat while mounted on a vicious broncho. He never fails, he says, to accomplish the trick, which he considers spectacular as well as sensational. Saturday the act went awry, and Jim had the opportunity to distinguish himself, but in an entirely different fashion.

The broncho somehow stumbled about eight feet from the footlights, and before Jim could dismount or get control of the reins the animal slid to the apron of the stage and went over into the pit, carrying the rider with it. The pair landed in the orchestra over the head of the viola player, and the audience, thinking it was a part of the act, applauded vigorously.

After it was all over it was found that nobody was hurt and that the only damage recorded was to the viola. Only one incandescent globe was broken in the descent of the horse and his rider. The performance was not stopped, the actors in the company continuing as if nothing had happened. When it was over there was the usual intermission, and by removing one of the rails in the rear of the theatre the horse was led through the orchestra out into the street.

FREIGHT TRAIN SCATTERS CHRISTMAS PRESENTS.

Edward M. Doty, local agent for the United States Express Company at Cranford, and George Robbins, of Mountainside, his assistant, had a narrow escape from being killed at the Central Railroad station there Saturday morning shortly after 7 o'clock, when a westbound fast freight loomed up out of the fog and bore down upon them and a large truck load of express they had just taken from the 7 o'clock train. Doty and Robbins jumped from in front of the locomotive just as it struck the heavy truck.

Ten crates of oranges and grape fruit were scattered in all directions a muff, sent there as a Christmas gift, was carried a quarter of a mile up the track, and several cases of liquor were smashed. A piece of flying glass hit Mr. Doty behind the ear, inflicting a slight wound. Articles of furniture and Christmas boxes were ripped open and their contents damaged. The big express truck was cut in half. The engineer of the fast freight train stopped his train after the damage had been done.

OLDEST ALUMNUS OF PRINCETON 93 SATURDAY

Rev. Dr. George Armstead Leakin, one of the oldest Protestant Episcopal clergymen in Maryland, and the oldest alumnus of Princeton University, quietly celebrated his ninety-third birthday Saturday at his home, Lecona, near Hollins, Baltimore county.

Dr. Leakin was the first rector of St. John's Protestant Episcopal church, at Mt. Washington. He was also rector of Trinity church, Baltimore, for more than forty years.

At the celebration many of his friends and his son, William Ridgely Leakin, of Savannah, Ga., were present.

Contest Hermit's Will.

Mrs. H. H. Richards, widow of Henry Richards, of Branch Mills, who lived as a hermit in a shack on North avenue, in Cranford, and who bequeathed all of his property valued at $100,000 to Harry and Gertrude Darby, the children of William Darby, of 425 Mountain avenue, Westfield, has engaged counsel to make a fight for her share in the estate. The will was drawn by J. Warren Dix, an Elizabeth lawyer, and the Darby children were made the sole beneficiaries. It is believed that Mrs. Richards is willing to accept a compromise. Henry H. Richards died at Elizabeth, November 3, at the home of Mrs. Bishop, a niece who lives on Salem avenue in that city. His body was buried in the family plot on property which he owned in Branch Mills. Richards is reported to have held mortgages on many Branch Mills and Mountainside farms.

ARMY OF GOOD FELLOWS IS GROWING

The army of Good Fellows has now reached a total of 281 recruits and others are responding promptly to the urgent call to provide a merry Christmas for the poor children of the city and borough. Frequently a telephone message will bring word that someone is anxious to be a Good Fellow to one or more and thus help to provide cheer and comfort for those who would otherwise spend a dreary time of it at this season of the year.

This morning's mail brought a letter from one Good Fellow who wants to take care of ten children, another one will provide for four, another for one and a young woman wishing to join the army has said that she will look out for two children. Thus the good work is going forward. Join the army now and be a Good Fellow before it is too late.

TO CONSULT GOVERNOR ON AUTO LEGISLATION.

Governor Wilson will be interviewed by the special committee of the Newark Board of Trade appointed to consider automobile legislation before that body asws the co-operation of other trade organizations of the State to assist in having a measure passed providing for reciprocity.

The committee, with A. V. Hamburg presiding, met Friday night and discussed the matter at length. The members agreed that there ought to be a limited time, not more than fifteen days, during which automobiles from other States would be given free use of the roads without registration or a permit.

A letter was received by the committee from Robert P. Hooper, president of the American Automobile Association, acknowledging the receipt of copies of resolutions of the Board of Trade and saying that the association would exert its influence in New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania or any other State to bring about absolute freedom of interstate highways.

SCHOOL FORMALLY DEDICATED.

The Lincoln Public School, of New Brunswick, which has been in use since October, was formally dedicated Saturday afternoon. Professor George H. Eckels, city superintendent, presided. The children of the school presented "Little Boy Blue" in costume and other numbers. Howard V. Buttler, chairman of the Building Committee, spoke for the Board of Education, and addresses were made by City Treasurer W. Edwin Florance and Rev. Samuel McClenaghan, of Jamesburg.

Professor Eckels took occasion to defend the public school system from attacks which have declared that the three "R's" are neglected. He asserted that a knowledge of useful facts was not to be despised, but that it was by no means the chief aim of education.

Engagement Announced.

Mrs. Peter C. Johnson, of Plainfield avenue, South Plainfield, gave a party at her home, Saturday night, at which she announced the engagement of her daughter, Miss Florence A. Johnson, to John P. Terry, of Alton. Twenty-five friends were in attendance. The parlor and dining room were decorated in Christmas colors. No date has been set for the wedding.

In Borough Court.

Harry Hansen, of Lincoln place, was fined $3 by Recorder Charles M. Dolliver in the borough court this morning, for drunkenness and disorderly conduct Saturday night. Warren Smith, colored, of Warren street, was fined $2 on a similar charge.

Miss Pauline Blaso.

Miss Pauline Blaso, aged thirty-three years, died at her home in Dunellen this morning. The funeral will be held at the late home on Dunellen avenue Wednesday morning at 8:15 o'clock, and at St. John's church at 9 o'clock, where there will be a mass.

MUSICAL SERVICE AND MISSIONARY TALK

Under the direction of W. A. Conger, organist, the chorus choir of the Temple Baptist church gave a special musical service, last night. The Christian Endeavor Society combined its meeting at this service and Rev. Lewis Bond, formerly a missionary to Turkey, gave an interesting talk on his work in that country.

The choir sang the following anthems during the service: "The Lord Is My Shepherd," Koschat; "O, Dry Those Tears," Gounod; solo, "Ave Maria;" "Face to Face," Herbert Johnson; solo, "The Rosary," Nevin. The service closed with the singing of "Saviour, Breathe an Evening Blessing." Rev. Evarts C. Conover, pastor of the church, was in charge of the service.

PANSIES.

I send thee pansies while the year is young,
Yellow as sunshine, purple as the night;
Flowers of remembrance, ever fondly sung
By all the chiefest of the Sons of Light;
And if in recollection lives regret
For wasted days and dreams that were not true,
I tell thee that the "pansy freaked with jet"
Is still the heart's-ease that the poets knew.
Take all the sweetness of a gift unsought,
And for the pansies send me back a thought.

MAYONNAISE.

The Way the Genuine Dressing Is Prepared by French Cooks.

Housewives concoct all sorts of dressings—cooked and uncooked—which they call mayonnaise, but which are not properly entitled to that name. The genuine mayonnaise as prepared by French cooks is made by combining olive oil, egg yoke and vinegar without cooking in such a way that the mixture will not curdle. The proportions of these ingredients and the method of putting them together may be varied, and mustard and similar seasonings may be added, but fundamentally, the real mayonnaise is always the same. The following rule will be found a good one:

Have ready one egg yolk, one scant cupful of olive oil, three teaspoonfuls of vinegar, a saltspoonful of salt, a saltspoonful of sugar, a light dust of cayenne and a level half teaspoonful of powdered mustard. Break the yolk with a fork, beat the mustard, salt, pepper and sugar into it and when a smooth mixture has been formed begin adding the oil, drop by drop, until the whole begins to look like creamed butter. Then pour in the oil faster until all is used. While the oil is being added the dressing should be beaten constantly with a fork. Last of all, pour in the vinegar very slowly, beating the dressing rapidly while doing so. Set it on ice to stand until wanted and add it to the salad the last moment before serving.

It is well to have everything very cold when making this dressing, although excellent mayonnaise has been made without the use of ice, but the oil must not be so cold that it has begun to thicken. It is sometimes stated that the drop by drop method is unnecessary, but while success may be obtained by putting the ingredients together more quickly it is always risky to do so. The drop by drop method practically insures success. If desired lime juice may be substituted for the vinegar.—Exchange.

FRENCH POLICEMEN.

They Can't Be "Fixed," and They Are Always Polite.

The laws of France relative to the out of door life of the masses are made in the interest of the people. Furthermore, they are enforced. There is no fixing things with a French policeman. If your bicycle has suddenly been twisted into junk by a careless driver the belted and brass buttoned gentleman who arrives on the scene questions you with intelligence and jots down in his notebook the facts of the occurrence as near as he can ascertain them. Throughout the interview he is polite, alert and painstaking in getting at the exact truth, and, whether you or the offending driver or both accompany him to the police station, he conducts you with a quiet dignity and an air of fulfilling his duty. It does not make the slightest difference in France who you are or whether or not you have mutual friends or come from his "ward" or are a relative of Congressman So-and-so. If you are at fault you must pay the damages. If the other fellow is to blame you will be ushered from the presence of the commissaire de police with as much ceremonial politeness as would be shown at a diplomatic interview.

If it is boiling hot or freezing cold and you are in need of information, go to the nearest policeman, address him as "monsieur" and raise your hat. He will immediately return you a military salute, listen attentively and give you, as carefully as possible, the necessary information, saluting you again as you raise your hat to leave him.—F. Berkeley Smith, "Parisians Out of Doors."

Couldn't Fool Him.

Serving in the capacity of collector for a local bank is a colored man who spends his evenings playing in an Oakland band.

One of the clerks in the bank, knowing of the clerk's musical attainments, said to him, "Joe, I went to a vaudeville show last night, and one of the fellows there played 'Traumerei' great!"

Joe looked at him suspiciously for a moment and then said: "You tell that stuff to Bonny. You don't get me to bite, 'cause Ah knows they ain't no such instrument."—San Francisco Chronicle.

A Simple Antidote to Poison.

It is a valuable thing to understand thoroughly what simple antidote to take if one is so unlucky as to swallow poison of any kind. Sweet oil is to be found in nearly every house, however humble, and half a pint of it taken immediately is an effectual antidote to almost all poisons. Any one with a strong constitution should take a larger quantity of this simple remedy.—London Family Herald.

THE MULE AND THE MAN.

The mule—he is a gentle beast;
And so is man.
He's satisfied to be the lest;
And so is man.
Like man he may be taught some tricks;
He does his work from 8 to 6;
The mule—when he gets mad he kicks;
And so does man.

The mule—he has a load to pull;
And so has a man.
He's happiest when he is full;
And so is man.
Like man he holds a patient poise,
And when his work's done he'll rejoice.
The mule—he likes to hear his voice,
And so does man.

The mule—he has his faults, 'tis true;
And so has man.
He does some things he should not do;
And so does man.
Like man, he does not yearn for style
But wants contentment all the while.
The mule—he has a lovely smile;
And so has man.

The mule is sometimes kind and good;
And so is man.
He eats all kinds of breakfastfood;
And so does man.
Like man, he balks at gaudy dress
And all outlandish foolishness;
The mule's accused of mulishness—
And so is man.

Two Champion Penmen.

A contest in the fine art of penmanship would not arouse much public interest now. But there seems to have been great excitement when Peter Bales was challenged by Daniel Johnson in 1595. Bales was the beautiful writer who could transcribe the whole Bible so that it would go into a walnut shell and who had provided Queen Elizabeth with a specimen of his handwriting which she wore in a ring, a magnifying glass being required to read it. When the contest took place there were five judges and a hundred spectators. The competition included all kinds of writing, the proficiency of the rivals' pupils and the masterpieces of either. Bales won the golden pen, but Johnson declared that there had been trickery, Bales having begged to be allowed to show the pen to his sick wife and having promptly pawned it, whereupon the judges had to declare him the winner to get out of the difficulty. Really the award was privately made to spare Johnson's feelings.—London Spectator.

Fat and Fashionable.

According to the Moorish idea of beauty, a really handsome woman ought to be so fat that she can only waddle, not walk. The fatter she is the more beautiful she is considered. If she can attain 200 or 300 pounds of flesh she is the envy of all her sex. The Moorish shape—if shape it can be called—approaches the perfection of feminine beauty when it resembles, or, rather, exceeds, the circumference of a barrel. What a paradise for the fat woman! There she can eat and drink and feast to her heart's content, denying herself nothing, living an easy, indolent, luxurious life, with no horror of accumulating fat, but rather rejoicing in it. There the ambition of a woman is to acquire bulk. Physical culture she would regard as an enemy to beauty, and to take Turkish baths and diet herself would be considered the height of folly. She wants to be beautiful, and to be beautiful she must be fat.

An Early Street Cleaner.

"One day," Ben Franklin wrote in his autobiography, "I found a poor, industrious man, who was willing to undertake keeping the pavement clean by sweeping it twice a week, carrying off the dirt from before all the neighbors' doors for the sum of sixpence per month to be paid by each house. I then wrote and printed a paper setting forth the advantages to the neighborhood that might be obtained by this small expense. I sent one of these papers to each house and in a day or two went around to see who would subscribe an agreement to pay these sixpences. It was unanimously signed and for a time well executed. This raised a general desire to have all the streets paved and made the people more willing to submit to a tax for that purpose."—Survey.

Grave Humor.

The punster is irrepressible. He even indites his jokes on tombstones. An epitaph in Waltham abbey informs us that Sir James Fullerton died "fuller of faith than of fears, fuller of resolutions than of pains, fuller of honour than of days."

There is another of Daniel Tears: "Though strange, yet true, full seventy years was his wife happy in her Tears."

This was written of an organist: "Here lies one, blown out of breath, who lived a merry life and died a Merideth."

Another says: "Here lies Thomas Huddlestone. Reader, don't smile, but reflect as this tombstone you view that Death, who killed him, in a very short while will huddle a stone upon you."—Pearson's Weekly.

A Bright Future.

Once there was a man who yearned to be a millionaire in order that he might help the suffering poor, and one day wealth came to him and landed him high in the millionaire class. He did not forget the poor—not entirely; but, being too busy to hunt them up, he failed not to ask Providence to pity them, "and, anyway," he reflected, "they have a bright future with so much treasure in heaven!"—Atlanta Constitution.

Grapefruit Greenery.

Effective greenery for the dining room table may be made by planting the seeds of grapefruit. Sow them thickly, and in two weeks, if the earth is good and has been kept moist in a warm place, the little shoots appear. Two weeks more and the leaves unfold, and very soon there is a mass of rich, glossy green which is not affected by gas or furnace heat.—Suburban Life.

Forever at Him.

Newitt—Funny! I always associate your wife with a certain episode in my own life. There's just one thing she always reminds me of— Henpeck—I wish I could say that. There's lots of things she always reminds me of.—Philadelphia Press.

No Clew.

"Is the new bookkeeper married?"

"I dunno. He's one o' them close mouthed fellows. If he has any trouble he keeps it to himself."—London Telegraph.

Two Barks.

What is the difference between the bark of a tree and that of a dog?

One is the product of the bough, the other of the "bow-wow."

There is many a woman whose epitaph ought to be, "Nobody ever saw her hands folded but once."—Youth's Companion.

The Kingdom Of Slender Swords

By HALLIE ERMINIE RIVES

Copyright 1910 by the Bobbs-Merrill Company

Daunt accompanied his chief that evening to a dinner at the Nobles club—a "stag," for conventional functions had been discontinued since the royal death had cast a pall over the gay of the squadron. Toward the close the ambassador found himself seated beside the minister of marine.

"Very clever," he said, as a Chinese pheasant flew out of an inverted opera hat. "I almost believe he could produce my missing dog if he were properly urged."

"Have you lost one?" asked the admiral. "I'm sorry."

The ambassador laughed. "It was really something of a relief," he said, and told the story of the Russian wolfhound which had so curiously disappeared on the evening of Dr. Bersonin's call. "The oddest thing about it," he ended, "is that, though the name of the embassy was on his collar, nothing has been heard of him."

The two men chatted for some time on things in general, the conversation veering to the squadron. The ambassador thought the other seemed somewhat distrait. At 2 the affair ended and the carriages drew up to the windy porte cochere. There was a confidential matter which the ambassador wished to speak of with his host. He had mentioned it, but no fitting opportunity had occurred. At the door the admiral recalled it, suggesting with a quizzical reference to the other's American fondness for late hours that, as his house was on the way, the ambassador stop there while they had their talk over a cigar. The latter therefore departed in the admiral's carriage, and Daunt drove alone to the embassy, directing the coachman to go in a half hour for his chief.

In the past three days Daunt had fought a constant battle. Every feature of that night at Nikko was stamped indelibly on his mind. The passionate resentment, the agony of protest that had come to him at the hall when he had received the torn fragments of his letter to Barbara, returned in double force, opposing a strange new sense of shame that his thought should follow her even into the tragic shadow where she now dwelt. Yet—for fancy will not be denied—his brain would again and again circle the same somber treadmill:

"We have done those things which we ought not to have done!" He seemed to hear her say it on the dark hillside. Her voice had had that in it which, against his will, had thrilled him. What had she done that she regretted? She had spoken of the day in the cave at Enoshima—had seemed to wish him to believe that she had not then been acting a part. Could anything have happened in that one day's interval so utterly to change her? She had been unhappy, for he had surprised her weeping. What was it she had wished to "confess?"

He let himself into the chancery with his latchkey to get his evening's mail. A telegram had been laid on his desk. It was a cipher from Washington, and he opened the safe at once and from the inner drawer took out the official code book. He sat down at one of the desks and began the decoding of the text. For a time he worked mechanically, as it were, with but one-half of his brain, tracing each group of figures in the bulky volume, transposing by the secret key, dragging in the complicated process sense and coherency from the meaningless digits. Then he sat staring at the result:

Large short selling today in European bourses and in New York (comma) unexplainable on usual grounds (comma) is creating anxiety (period) Can scarcely be explained except on hypothesis that secret group of dealers have suddenly come into possession of information which leads them to consider the international situation ominous (period) Newspapers in ignorance of anything extraordinary (period) London and Paris evidently puzzled (period) Has situation developed new phases and in your opinion does it contain possible element of danger (period) Hasten reply

A full five minutes Daunt sat motionless, revolving the matter in all its bearings. An answer must be sent without delay. A part of that answer might be found in the departure of the squadron. The newspapers had announced its receipt of sailing orders, but the news had yet to be verified. The naval minister could give this verification.

He went at once to the stables, where the carriage was about to start for the ambassador. He sprang in. A little later he was at the admiral's official residence and his chief was perusing the message. After a moment's thought the ambassador read the dispatch aloud.

Daunt had made a move to retire, but the admiral stopped him.

"Just don't go yet," he said. "There is something I should like to say on this matter, and I count on your discretion, Mr. Daunt, as on his excellency's. Since the American government attaches significance to that peculiar incident I think no harm can come from an exchange of opinion. It may help us both." He paused a moment, his foot tapping the floor.

"The news contained in that telegram," he continued presently, "for the past two days has caused my government great concern. Your excellency will understand when I say that the particular objects of this attack (if I may so call it) are precisely those securities which would suffer most were Japan's peace or prosperity threatened. There has seemed to be a concurrence in it not purely fortuitous. Back of this selling is no mere opinion. It is too assured for that. Some interest or individual abroad is apparently banking heavily on a belief that Japan is about to enter a period of great stress!"

The ambassador spoke for the first time. "Abroad?" he said shrewdly, his face very grave.

The admiral looked at him an instant without speaking. His expression changed swiftly. He rose and went quickly to the telephone in the next room.

"He is talking with the secret service," said Daunt in a low tone.

In a few moments their host returned. There was something in his face that made the ambassador's keen eye kindle. "The suggestion was most pertinent," he said. "There is one man in Japan who, exclusive of the commercial codes, has sent in the past two days cipher telegrams to New York, London and Berlin."

He took a short turn about the room in some agitation. "Your excellency," he said, stopping short, "I make a confidant of you. That man is Dr. Bersonin."

The ambassador started.

"Pray absolve me," said the admiral quickly, "from an apparent indiscretion. Dr. Bersonin is no longer in the Japanese service. His contract expired at noon today. It will not be renewed. As one of my government I speak to you as the representative of your government concerning a private individual whose acts are in the purview of us both. The circumstances are extraordinary, but I think the occasion fully justifies this conversation."

He rang a bell sharply, and his private secretary entered. "Bring me," he said in Japanese, "report No. 11 of Lieutenant Ishida Hetaro."

When it was brought he turned to a leaf underscored with red. "Your excellency," he said, "interested me profoundly this evening by the account of the disappearance of your dog. I am going to ask Mr. Daunt, who reads Japanese so fluently, to give a running translation of this."

Daunt took the manuscript—as perfectly executed as an inscription in uncial Greek—and began to read. As he translated his breath came more quickly, and the ambassador leaned forward across the table. Yet the words chronicled nothing more than the curious disappearance from the laboratory of a tiny song bird and a steel pen rest. The close of the narrative drew an exclamation from the ambassador's lips, for it told of feathery sprays of reddish brown powder on the expert's desk, and he seemed to see himself, his study lamp in his hand, bending over curious whorls of dust on his own piazza.

"May I ask," said the admiral, "whether the episode of the dog suggested to your excellency the possibility that your caller might himself be able to solve the mystery of the animal's disappearance?"

The ambassador's reply came slowly, and he nodded his head with deliberate emphasis:

"It did. The more so from our previous conversation. In my study I have the model of a Dreadnought. We were discussing this, and the doctor described the fighting machine of the future—an atomic engine which should utilize some newly discovered law of molecular action, a machine that might be carried in a single hand, to which a battleship would be, as he expressed it, 'mere silly shreds of steel.' He spoke, I thought, with a strange confidence that seemed almost unbalanced. In connection with the conversation the later incident, I confess, left a deep impression. Yet the idea it suggested was so incredible that I have never spoken of it to any one before."

"I suppose," said the admiral, "that the man we are discussing has actually constructed such a machine. What possible connection can there be between that and a confidence in some near event which will lower Japan's credit in the eyes of the world?"

CHAPTER XXVI.

THE ALARM.

BEFORE the ambassador replied there was the sound of voices outside—a sudden commotion and a woman's agitated protestations. The secretary came in hurriedly and whispered to the admiral. A door slammed in the hall, there was the sound of a short struggle, and a girl burst into the room. She threw herself at the admiral's feet, panting broken sentences. Her kimono was torn and muddied, her blue black hair was loosened and her face white and pitifully working.

Suddenly she saw the ambassador. She lifted her face, swollen with crying, to him.

"You—nod know me—Haru?" she faltered. "No? Say so!"

"HARU!" HE EXCLAIMED.

"Haru!" he exclaimed. Then, to the admiral, "I know the child," he said. "She was companion to one of our house guests till a week ago, when she disappeared from her home."

His host made an exclamation of pity. "It is nobyo, no doubt," he said, using the word for the strange Japanese brain fever which is akin to madness. "She must be cared for at once." He leaned and spoke soothingly to her.

A spasm seized Haru. "They will none of them listen! They will none of them listen!" she screamed in Japanese. "They call it the fever, and they will not hear! And tomorrow it will be too late! Are all the gods with Bersonin-San?"

At that name the admiral's face changed swiftly. "Leave her with me," he said, "and wait in the anteroom."

The aid withdrew with the secretary. The two callers had risen, but the admiral stayed them. "We have gone far along the road of confidence tonight," he said in a low tone. "If you are willing we will go to the end."

He bent and drew the girl to a sitting posture.

"Tell us," he said gently, "what brought you here?"

As the three men listened to the swift, broken story there was no sound save the rustle of the wind outside, the clack of a night watchman and the ticking of the clock on the marble mantel. The crouching form, the sodden garments, the passionate intensity of the slim, clutched hand, the fire in the dark eyes—all lent effect to a narrative instinct with terrible truth. The ambassador's knowledge of the colloquial was limited, but he knew enough to grasp the story's main features. It capped the edifice of suspicion and furnished a direful solution to what had been mysterious. Once the admiral's eyes met his, and each knew that the other believed. Terrible as its meaning was—pointing to what black depths of abysmal wickedness—it was true!

The admiral listened with a countenance that might have been carved of metal, but the faces of the others were gray white. Later was to come to both the pathos and meaning of the sacrifice this frail girl had laid on the knees of her country's gods, but for the hour all else was swallowed up in the horrifying knowledge, struck through with the sharp fact that one of the partners in this devilish enterprise, however expatriate, was of their own nation. To Daunt this was intensified by his own acquaintance with Phil. Memories swept him of that worthless, ribald career, the evil intimacy with Bersonin, the gradual dominance of the bottle, which in the end had betrayed him!

With a singular separateness of vision he seemed in lightning-like flashes to see that betrayal—the blind infatuation, the slow enticements, the reckless, intoxicated triumph, the final surrender. He seemed to see Haru, her secret won, running, panting, through the wind. He saw Phil waking at last from his drunken slumber—to what shame and penalty? He shuddered.

When the secretary entered at the crisp sound of the admiral's bell he started at the pallid countenances in the room. The Japanese girl stood trembling, half supported by the admiral's arm. The latter spoke in a voice that held no sign of feeling. It was to present the young man to the girl in the most formal and elaborate courtesy.

"The Ojo-San deigns to be for but an hour the guest of my mean abode," he said. "Instruct my karei that in that unworthy interval he may offer her august refreshment and afterward prepare her proper escort and conveyance. Meantime send my aid to me."

The secretary's gleam of astonishment veiled itself under oriental lashes, and a tinge of color warmed the whiteness of Haru's cheek. He bowed to her profoundly. As he deferentially opened the door she turned back, swayed and sank suddenly prone in a deep, sweeping obeisance.

An instant the admiral stood looking after her. "The petal of a plum blossom," he said, "under the hoof of the swine."

His manner changed abruptly as the aid entered. He spoke in quick, curt Japanese in a tone sharp and exact as steel shears snipping through zinc:

"Something has transpired of great moment. There is no time to deal with it by the ordinary channels. It is of the first importance—the first importance—that I reach Yokohama within the hour. You will call up Shimbashi and order a special train with right of way. This admits of no delay. Send for my carriage at once. You will accompany me. We leave in ten minutes." The aid went out quickly, while he seated himself at his desk and began to write rapidly.

"Two battleships," he said suddenly, wheeling in his seat, "with the human lives on them. Perhaps even war between two or more nations. Gods of my ancestors! All this to hang on the loyalty of a mere girl!"

The ambassador, pacing the floor, snapped the lid of his watch. "It must still be close to two hours of sunrise," he said in an agitated voice. "Surely there is time!"

The admiral was consulting an almanac when the aid re-entered. "Here is a telegram," he said. "Put it on the wire at once. It must arrive before us."

"Excellency," said the aid, "the train is not possible. The service to Yokohama ceased at 6 o'clock. The rains—there is a washout."

His chief pondered swiftly. "It must be left to others, then. Call up the emergency long distance for Yokohama and give me a clear wire at once to the governor's residence. I must make the telegraphic instructions fuller." He bent over the desk.

Trepidation was on the aid's face when he returned this time.

"Excellency, the accident to the line was the failure of the bridge over the Rokuga-gawa. It carried both the telegraph and telephone conduits. No wire will be working before noon tomorrow."

The admiral half rose. He stretched out his hand, then drew it back.

"The wireless!" exclaimed the ambassador.

The aid's troubled voice replied. Whatever the necessity, he knew that it was a crucial one.

"The mast was displaced by today's earthquake," he said. "The system is temporarily useless."

There was a moment of blank silence. The admiral sat staring straight before him. The only sign of agitation was his labored breathing.

"Can a horse get through?"

The other shook his head. "Not under three hours. It would have to be by detour, and there are no relays."

"A motorcar?"

"Impossible!" exclaimed the ambassador. "By the long road and in better weather my Mercedes cannot do it under eighty minutes."

The admiral lifted himself from his chair. His eyes were bloodshot, and on his forehead tiny veins had sprung out in branching clusters of purple.

"In the name of Shaka! Yokohama harbor but a handful of miles away and cut off utterly? It must be reached, I tell you! It must be reached!" His voice was low pitched, but terrible in its intensity. "Drive to the Naval college and ask for twenty cadets—its swiftest runners—to be sent after you to Shimbashi. A locomotive can take them as far as the river. If there is no sampan they can swim. Make demand in my authority. Not a minute is to be lost!" He put what he had been writing into the aid's hand. "Read this in the carriage. It will serve as instruction."

The aid thrust the paper into his breast and vanished. The admiral looked about him through stiffened, half closed eyelids. Then, under the stress it seemed of a mighty shudder—the very soul of that overwhelming certainty of the peril awaiting the red dawn on that bungalow roof above the Yokohama anchorage—the racial impassivity, the restraint and repression of emotion that long generations of ingrain habit have made second nature to the Japanese, suddenly crumbled. He struck his hand hard against the desk.

"Has not Japan toiled and borne enough that this shame must come to her?" His deep voice shook. "Your excellency—Mr. Daunt—in all this land where heroism is hackneyed and sacrifice a fetish there is no prince or coolie who to turn aside this peril would not give his body to the torture. Yet must we sit here helpless as Darumas. If man but had wings!"

Daunt stiffened. He felt his heart beat to his temples. He started to his feet, with an exclamation.

"But man has wings!" he cried.

What of the long hours of toil and experiment, the gray mornings on Aoyama parade ground when his glider had carried him circling above the treetops? Could he do it? With no other word he darted to the hall. They heard his flying feet on the gravel and a quick command to a betto. The wind tossed back the word into the strained quiet.

"Aoyama!" exclaimed the ambassador as the hoofbeats, lashed to an anguish of speed, died into silence. "His glider!"

A sudden hope flashed into the admiral's face.

"The gods of Nippon aid him!" he said.

CAMPAIGN IS BEGUN TO CARE FOR BLIND

A State-wide campaign for the improvement of conditions among the blind of New Jersey was launched Friday night at a meeting held under the auspices of the New Jersey Commission for the Blind, in the First Baptist church at Montclair. The principle speakers were Governor Woodrow Wilson, and Miss Winifred Holt, of New York, who, as secretary of the New York Associaton for the Blind, has achieved wonderful success in aiding blind men and women and boys and girls in New York by providing work for them and teaching them how to earn a living as stenographers, telegraphers, basket-weavers, potters, broommakers and other artisans.

It will be recalled that at the welfare exhibit in Plainfield not long ago particular emphasis was laid upon the fact that in this State practically nothing was being done to aid the blind. Two years ago, at a State charitites conference, the plan was suggested to erect an institution for the segregation of the blind in New Jersey, and at this meeting, Miss Holt appeared and bitterly denounced the scheme to "wall up" blind men and women. Her advice was taken, and with the appointment of a commission and the formation of an association which is a branch of the New York association, the prospect is that New Jersey will soon be in the front rank of those States which are endeavoring to benefit those within their borders who have been deprived of sight.

Miss Holt in referring to what this State might do for the blind, said:

"New Jersey has shown its usual diplomatic wisdom in refusing the suggestion which was being urged when I spoke here last for the State Charity Conference, to build an institution for blind men and women.

"The appointment of a commission and an association is in accordance, as you know, with what has been done successfully before to help the blind. In New York we had a commission consisting largely of the officers of the association. The association did the work for the commission, and when the work was done of tabulating a census, the commission went out of existence. In Massachusetts, where there is an ideal commission, it co-operates most successfully with the association and other agencies for the blind, in many instances helping them to do their work, or lifting their burdens from them.

"It is earnestly to be hoped that New Jersey will be able to follow its example of perfect harmony, and successful results, owing to complete sympathy and understanding between the commission and the association, and all activities working for the same ends. As secretary of the New York Association for the Blind, I shall confine my talk to the work that could be properly undertaken by an association or a commission.

"This century is a century of prevention and emancipation. We no longer wall up our blind and accept their calamity as inevitable. Today we stop blindness, teach the blind to free themselves and, despite their handicap, to find light through work.

"Associations for the blind which search for the blind, educate, employ and make their lives interesting without separating them from their home ties, are among the most up-to-date agencies for their help. The first thing for an association for a light house for the blind to do is to find the blind. It must carefully, by personal visitation, make a detailed census of the blind, far and near, giving such items of interest as the age of the individual, cause of blindness, education, earning capacity, and details of the family history, which aid physcians in making deductions as to the cause of blindness. Such a census should be placed at the association and then kept up to date, and include additional information received from time to time about the light house wards.

"The blind are often lost entirely, or hidden; sometimes because the parents of blind children are ashamed of them, sometimes because the blind person is hired to beg, and to procure the pension to be given to somebody else. I had an interesting instance of this myself. I went to look for a blind girl in an East Side tenement; at her address I was told that she had never lived there, and was unknown; I remained to gossip with the people living at her address, and after ingratiating myself with them, a door was unlocked and an emaciated blind girl appeared. She was not related to the people with whom she was living, and was kept by them to procure the pension and to beg. There are doubtless many blind children and adults living the same kind of lives, and it is only by great perseverance that we can find the lost blind.

"The basis of the association's work should be a campaign to stop blindness, warfare against infant opthalmia, industrial accidents, and efforts for saner social conditions, better care of the poor, the aged, the infirm and the dissipated."

POLE BREAKS AT BASE; LINEMAN STRAPPED TO TOP.

Strapped fast to an electric pole, which snapped off at the base from his weight on it just before dark Saturday noon in East Orange, Joseph Williams, a lineman in the employ of the Lackawanna railroad, had a narrow escape from death. He was saved by a billboard against which the pole fell. He hung suspended for a minute ten feet from the ground. He released the belt that held him to the pole and dropped to the ground. The fall of the pole Williams was on caused another to break off in the same way and for an hour the linemen had a lively time gathering up the sputtering live wires and keeping the public out of danger.

The poles that broke are of the line which the railroad uses to carry out from Hoboken the current from its private power house, for lighting the stations. They are located, one near the Brick Church station and the other close to Halstead street. Williams was on the former.

SAYS OIL FIRE CAUSED BIG REDUCTION OF TAX.

Tax Receiver William Anderson, of Bayonne, issued a statement Saturday in answer to the charge that the assessment of $3,371,000 on the plant of the Tidewater Oil Company had been unjustly reduced $119,000. Anderson said the reduction was made because of a fire which occurred at the concern's factory some time ago. A reduction of $343,000 had been sought by the company, Anderson said, but this figure was considered too high.

GRIGGS PRAISES TAFT AND KNOCKS WILSON.

Former Governor of New Jersey John W. Griggs, Friday night, at the dinner given to Secretary of War Stimson at the Republican Club, New York, praised President Taft and administered a few knocks to Governor Wilson.

"I'm glad I had my day in office before the reign of righteousness came upon the country," Mr. Griggs said. "Otherwise, with my old-fashioned ideas, I believe I should have been considered an ally of all that is bad in our corporate and industrial life."

After stating that the solution of the business troubles of the day rests largely with the people, Mr. Griggs said that the only thing President Taft lacks, according to present day standards of judging men in public life, is the element of a popular demagogue.

"President Taft has already attempted and accomplished more than ordinarily would be expected of two administrations," he continued. "In the matter of the tariff, he has done a great service to the country by saying that there shall be no more helter-skelter legislation and by establishing a Tariff Commission to carry out his aims. Nothing that he has done has been for popular applause. He has been faithful where it cost something to be faithful.

"The only men who are dissatisfied with the recent government prosecutions are those who have been prosecuted and the stock speculators. Stock speculators are superstitious and such thorough believers in witchcraft, charms and hoodoos that the most grotesque scarecrow that could be set up on the steps of the Sub-Treasury would have to flap its wings only twice to produce a panic in the Stock Exchange."

Mr. Griggs, after saying that the people of New Jersey would like to recall Governor Wilson, referred to the attempt of the official to obtain a pension from the Carnegie fund.

"Most men are content with a pension after they have enlisted and served their country, but my Governor wants a pension before he enlists," he said.

SUFFRAGISTS ABANDONED PLANS TO QUIZ WILSON.

No attempt was made by the members of the Montclair Equal Suffrage League to interview Governor Wilson, on the occasion of his visit to Montclair Friday night, in regard to his views on women voting. At a meeting of the league early in the week a resolution was passed to quiz the Governor.

In explanation of the failure to quiz, Miss Jeanette Studdiford, president of the league, said Saturday that the scheme had been abandoned after consideration, because Friday night was believed to be an inopportune time. Miss Studdiford said further that the Montclair league may decide to seek Wilson's views at some future time.

KINGSLEY SCHOOL 32, PLAINFIELD HIGH 12

The Plainfield High School basketball team lost its second game of the season, Saturday afternoon, when it was defeated by the Kingsley School at Essex Fells in a hard game by a score of 32 to 12. The defeat was largely due to the loose playing and poor basket throwing of the P. H. S. five. The home team was able to throw baskets from any angle.

The Kingsley team started off at a rapid pace which was kept up until the end of the half, displaying superior skill in goal throwing. The first half ended with a score of 13 to 4 in favor of the home team. In the second half, Grisley was replaced by Zerega at forward while the rest of the lineup was not changed by P. H. S. Although the Plainfield boys did better in this half, their opponents were too much for them. The Plainfielders played a good game in general, although not up to their usual form. The lineup:

P. H. S.—Forwards, Ricketts, Grisley, Zerega; center, Sattels; guards, Nash, VanZandt.

Kingsley—Forwards, Rees, Rennick, Tremain; center, Southwick; guards, Berkely, Raven, Hurd.

Referee, A. Doggett; umpire, Mr. Smith; timers, Messrs. Bolton, Mohleck; time of halves, twenty minutes.

BARRED HIS DOOR TO FREEZING WIFE.

James Ford, of 111 Houghton avenue, Trenton, is under arrest there without bail to await the action of the coroner's jury. It will inquire into the cause of the death of his wife, aged 65 years, who was found shivering on his doorstep early Saturday morning, and who died later. She had vainly knocked and her husband had refused to get out of his warm bed to pull aside the bolts he had shot in the door frame when the woman went out early in the evening.

On the way to the station house Ford told the policemen that his wife had taken to drink lately, had refused to prepare his food, and that he had told her that if she went out of the house he would not let her in again. He admitted hearing her knocking during the night, and said he would not break his word. He kept in bed and let her knock.

The woman caused so much noise early in the morning by her repeated efforts to gain admission to her home that a neighbor, Mrs. Ellen Kenny, heard her some distance away and dressed herself and rescued the woman. She found Mrs. Ford almost frozen to death, she having dropped down benumbed from the cold on the doorstep. Dr. Norton was sent for and he could not restore her. The woman died an hour after the arrival of the doctor. The body was removed to the city morgue by the direction of the coroner and the husband was then arrested.

Ford says that his wife had repeatedly gone out early in the evening and come home in an intoxicated condition. He had repeately warned her, and Friday night let her out, after she insisted that she would go, but informed her that he would not let her in again. He kept his word, she died, and he is in a cell without bail awaiting the report of the coroner's jury.

Editorial Opinion.

There has been weather lately which verges on the immoral. It will be better this week, because it could not be worse, and in this country anything that displeases the people must be changed. It is a pity that so much time has been lost, but there is still a full week, and what American asks more than six days to spend his money?—Sunday Call.

Commissioner Brown Resigns.

Charles Brown, for the last three years a member of the Elizabeth Board of Health, resigned Saturday. Brown's resignation was accepted by Mayor Stein. The withdrawal of the retiring Health Commission is directly attributed to the tempest which occurred in the administration last fall over the majority report on the Isolation Hospital.

WILTON LACKAYE HERE ON WEDNESDAY NIGHT

Wilton Lackaye, the well known actor, will offer his new play, "The Stranger," at the Plainfield theatre next Wednesday, supported by an excellent company of players, under the able management of L. S. Sire. The story of the play hinges upon the efforts of James Marshall (Mr. Lackaye) a young engineer, to secure a franchise for a city railway in Danville, Va. The local politicians seeing prospects for "boodle" antagonise the efforts of Marshall and try to force him to terms, and, when he refuses, concoct all kinds of schemes to drive him out of town. Marshall, however, has developed another interest, a love for the daughter of his principal antagonist, and, with this two-fold incentive proposes to show his mettle and not only secure the franchise, but marry the girl of his choice. After many vicissitudes accomplishes his desires in both directions. The comedy interest has been well developed, and, with the lights and shades of the more intense action, forms a very interesting play.

GAVE TRIBUTE TO THE PILGRIM FATHERS

The Dutch Arms, Men's Association, of Trinity Reformed church, by special invitation attended the vesper service at the Congregational church yesterday afternoon and heard the pastor, Rev. C. L. Goodrich, in a sermon recite personal reminiscences of the Mayflower party's night in Leyden just prior to sailing for America. The sermon was also a tribute to the Pilgrim Fathers and the early Dutch settlers in this country, with a short review of the causes for their taking the then perilous journey to the new world.

At the conclusion of the sermon there was a showing of hands of all in the congregation who were descendants of Dutch, New England or Mayflower ancestry and there proved to be quite a number of each present. The service was augmented by the presence of the vested choir. Malcolm Barnes sang a solo aside from carrying the solo parts in a specially selected anthem. Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, assisted Mr. Goodrich in conducting the service.

The Plainfield Democratic Club at its meeting last night decided to publish a Democratic weekly newspaper, the first number to appear on Friday, December 29. It will be issued on succeeding Fridays. This statement was made by LeRoy J. Ellis, who will be editor. It is not known just where the paper will be printed, estimates having been received from local concerns, as well as Elizabeth publishers.

Martin Doud will be the manager for the weekly, and in addition to the editorial work of Mr. Ellis, there will be several leading contributors. It is proposed to issue 1,200 copies at first. The paper will be called "The Democrat."

BORO PUPILS MAKE GOOD SPELLING MARKS

The task of correcting the papers turned in by the pupils of the North Plainfield High School after the spelling test of 300 words, given them by Superintendent H. C. Krebs last week, was completed yesterday. They show that all four classes made excellent averages and in some cases the individual results are almost as good as those in the Montclair Normal School, from which the list was obtained. The best record at the latter was the missing of eleven words, while Ralph Martin, who made the highest average in the borough school, failed to spell but fourteen, an average of ninety-five per cent. The young man is a member of the Junior class. Miss Rose Andrews made the highest percentage for the girls, missing seventeen. She is a senior as is also Miss Marion Mair, who made ninety-three per cent. Miss Katherine Giddings, a junior, made ninety-two per cent., and Miss Anna Warnock, a sophomore, made a mark of ninety-one. The same figure was reached by Miss Margaret Darby, a senior. William Taylor, a senior, and Newton Spencer, a junior, each got ninety per cent.

The test has stimulated the pupils' interest in spelling in no small degree and others are to be held after the holidays. Mr. Krebs has also planned a series of spelling "bees" to begin in February. The enthusiasm and rivalry developed, it is believed, will make the spelling average of the borough high pupils one of the best in the State.

JOHN BIGLOW DEAD

Venerable Patriot and Author Passes Away at His New York Home.

AGED NINETY-FOUR YEARS.

Intimate Friend of Most of America's Distinguished Men of Last Seventy Years—A Power in Politics.

John Bigelow died this morning in New York at the age of ninety-four years. Prolific writer and man of affairs for the usual span of years allotted to man, he succumbed peacefully at his home, No. 21 Gramercy Park, finishing a busy and useful life, during which he has been the associate and intimate friend of most of the notable figures of his day.

On Mr. Bigelow's last birthday—Friday, November 24—he received the congratulations of the entire city, voiced in the press and in personal messages delivered by such notable men as Andrew Carnegie, Joseph H. Choate and others.

John Bigelow came from one of the oldest New England families, his first American ancestor having settled in Watertown, Mass., in 1642. He was born at Malden-on-Hudson, in the State of New York, November 25, 1817. He graduated from Union College in 1835, was admitted to the bar in 1839, became joint proprietor with William C. Bryant, and managing editor of the New York Evening Post in 1849, was appointed Consul at Paris by President Lincoln in 1861, Charge d'Affaires in 1864, and Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to France in April, 1865.

At the termination of his mission he received from the American residents in Paris the compliment of a substantially unanimous invitation to a farewell dinner at the Grand Hotel in Paris, December 19, 1866, the last of its kind ever paid to an American diplomat at any foreign court. After his resignation he returned to the United States and devoted himself principally to literary pursuits.

He was appointed chairman of the commission organized at the request of Governor Tilden to investigate the management of the canals of the State of New York in 1874, was elected Secretary of State in 1875.

During his residence in Paris he published "Les Etats d'Amerique en 1863," his purpose being to correct the erroneous notions of the French people in regard to the relative commercial importance of the Northern and Southern States.

Mr. Bigelow was one of the executors of the will of the late Samuel J. Tilden and was president of the board of trustees of the "Tilden Trust." As a trustee of this estate he was an associate of former Mayor L. V. F. Randolph, of this city.

In 1888 Mr. Bigelow was the sole commissioner of the United States to the International Exposition at Brussels.

WACK IS BANISHED FROM CITY FOR YEAR.

When Charles E. Wack, of this city, was arraigned before Judge William G. DeMeza in the city court this morning on the charge preferred by Frank Linke of passing an alleged worthless check, Mr. Linke was not in court to press the complaint. Judge DeMeza disposed of the matter by suspending a sentence of $100 or 60 days in jail providing Wack left town and remained away for one year. If he returns within that time he is to be arrested and the sentence imposed. He promised to go and stay away.

Christmas Greetings By Wire.

The Western Union Telegraph Company will introduce a new plan during the holiday season for the benefit of its patrons, providing specially printed blanks, surrounded with mistletoe and appropriate wording, to be used in sending Christmas and New Year greetings. These blanks will be provided for those wishing to send such greetings and they will be delivered at the receiving end on the same style of blank. The idea has already proved popular and Manager Davis, of the local office, reports a large increase in business.

A Burglary.

John Thorpe, of Marshall place, reported to the police this morning that his house had been entered between 8 and 10 o'clock last night during the family's absence. A pair of black trousers and a safety razor were the only articles taken. The intruder who entered by a rear window and went out the front door which he left standing open.

NEED MORE ROOM

Borough Board of Education Discusses Present Taxed Classrooms.

REMEDY WILL BE NEEDED SOON.

Disposition of Backward Pupils Taken Up—Notes and Bonds Ordered Paid Off.

The North Plainfield Board of Education, at its regular December meeting, last night, informally discussed the fact that it will soon be confronted with the problem of providing additional room for pupils. It may not come within two or three years, it was stated, but the Somerset street building is already taxed to its capacity and the demand for increased space is apt to be made within twelve months. In some of the lower classes there are as many as forty-five children, a number not conducive to special attention on the part of the teachers in backward cases. This condition of affairs is paralleled at the Watchung school, where the grades are taking care of all that they can conveniently handle. It is not at all improbable that afternoon sessions may be established in the coming spring or fall to ease the congestion at the Somerset structure.

In speaking of the matter, last night, one of the members said that it should be considered as soon as possible. It is more pressing, he declared, than the widening of Somerset street or some other improvements that are in contemplation. The need of more room is apparent now and almost before the citizens are ready to arrange the financial end, the demand will be imperative. No action was taken last night but the question will be talked over again in the near future.

Another matter taken up at the meeting was the disposal of weak-minded or backward pupils in the lower grades. There are a number of them in both schools and it has been found that the teachers cannot devote the time they require if justice is to be done the other members of the class. The State school law states that backward pupils must be put in a special class but if this was done it would mean that the borough would have to defray the expense of one or two additional teachers. It was decided to keep several of the worst cases out of the school while the others will be given additional instruction by Miss Claypoole, the general assistant in the Somerset school, when not otherwise engaged.

Several truancy cases were considered and reports were received on the fire drills and other matters. A number of repairs were ordered on the buildings and the district clerk was authorized to secure bids, specifications may be secured from him. In the future, all bids for work or supplies will be received by the clerk and opened by him at the board meeting.

The salary list was passed upon in order that teachers might have their money before Christmas and all bills were ordered paid. In anticipation of receiving tax money, $10,000 worth of notes, bonds and coupons were authorized to be taken up.

The next regular meeting of the board will be held the last Monday in January.

No Fault There.

Morris Harrison, manager of Muhlenberg Hospital, said today that the delay in securing a physician on Sunday night to attend Paul Leverino, of Midway avenue, who was injured in a runaway accident, did not occur at that institution, but before the patient had been received there. According to the information given this paper yesterday, the patient was attended at the hospital by Dr. C. B. Lufburrow and Dr. F. C. Ard, when as a matter of fact he had been seen by them at his home, where the delay in obtaining a physician had occurred. It was no fault of either physician that they were delayed in attending the victim as they were both out on other calls when summoned to attend. Leverino, who was injured at 8:45 and was not received at the hospital until 10:30 being ordered removed there by the physicians who attended him.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF MRS. ELIZABETH RUNYON

The funeral service of Mrs. Elizabeth Runyon, wife of Alexander M. Runyon, was held at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon at the late home on Madison avenue, where a large number of relatives, friends and neighbors gathered to pay their respects to one whom they had loved and admired for her exemplary Christian and womanly qualities.

Rev. Charles L. Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational church, of which Mrs. Runyon had been a devoted member for many years, conducted the service. He read appropriate Scripture selections, offered prayer and made a short address of eulogy. There were a number of beautiful floral tributes. The burial was in Hillside cemetery.

WORK TO LIQUIDATE CHAMBER'S DEBT

The special committee of the Chamber of Commerce having in charge the work of devising ways for raising $2,500 with which to liquidate indebtedness met in the Coward building on Park avenue, last night. It was reported that at present a little more than $800 has been raised without any special effort and it was decided to start a subscription with a view to securing the balance of $2,500.

Plans for the annual meeting, which occurs on January 4, were discussed and there seemed to be no doubt but that the civic body will be continued. Several changes are anticipated. The special committee will meet again on Tuesday night, December 26, at the Chamber of Commerce to receive reports and plan for further work in connection with raising the amount of the deficit.

MISS J. M'LOUGHLIN BRIDE OF MR. MOYNIHAN

Miss Jennie McLoughlin, of 142 Byard street, New Brunswick, and Harvey J. Moynihan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Moynihan, of Bound Brook, were quietly married at 2 o'clock this afternoon in St. Peter's Roman Catholic church, New Brunswick. Monsignor O'Grady performed the ceremony. The couple was accompanied by Miss Minnie McElroy, of Brooklyn, cousin of the bride, who was the bridemaid and Michael T. Moynihan, of Dunellen, a cousin of the groom, who was best man.

Immediately after the ceremony the couple left on an extended trip through the south. They will reside at Albany, N. Y., where the groom is engaged in the vacuum cleaning business. Mr. Moynihan is well-known here, being a graduate of the Plainfield High School, Class '03. He was prominent in athletics, having pitched for the high school and Hope chapel teams. He is a member of Plainfield Lodge, No. 885, B. P. O. E., and Watchung Council, Knights of Columbus.

EAST END RESIDENTS ASSOCIATION FORMED

A Netherwood Residents' Association was formed last night with a membership of sixty-three when A. C. Niedermier was chosen as president; A. C. Wilmerding, of Belvidere avenue, as vice president; Edwin L. Allen, secretary, and F. W. Carlisle, treasurer. W. H. Druse called the meeting to order and presided as temporary chairman after telling of the purpose for organization. These standing committees were appointed: Highways, public safety, educational, United States mail and telephone, public health and railroads. Each committee will consist of three members and the chairman of each with the president constitute the executive board.

The question of incorporating was discussed at length and was referred to a committee to investigate the points and features brought out in discussion and report at the next meeting, which will be called by the president.

The project of having a dollar dinner either in January or February was discussed with enthusiasm. It was proposed to invite the city and borough officials to attend and to secure speakers of note to address the gathering.

This matter was left by resolution in the hands of a committee of which W. H. Druse was made chairman and his committee will also make its report at the next meeting.

ARREST COLEMAN

Colored Youth in Toils Suspected of Commiting Many Burglaries.

RINGLEADER OF A GANG.

When Arraigned Before Judge De Meza He Pleads Not Guilty and Hearing is Set for Tomorrow Morning.

In the arrest of James Coleman, colored, early this morning at his home on Berckman street, the police say they expect to clear up all of the mysterious burglaries which have been committed here during the past several months. Sufficient evidence of the youth's connection with nearly all of them has already been obtained as a result of an investigation the police have been carrying on since the arrest last week of three young men on suspicion of having burglarized the tailor shop of Benjamin Estrin, on Somerset street, several weeks ago.

Learning of the arrest of these young men, Coleman, who was wanted on the same charge, fled and until last night remained a fugitive from justice. The other boys, Albert Vail, Edward Hamilton and Edward Murphy, all white, await the action of the Somerset county grand jury. As the city police assert that they have uncovered so much pointing to Coleman's guilt on jobs here, it is not likely that he will be turned over to the North Plainfield authorities, as the offense for which he is wanted there is of less importance.

Coleman is also wanted in New York according to information obtained yesterday by Mr. Estrin, from a pawnbroker to whom Coleman sold the clothing stolen from Estrin's shop. The pawnbroker missed a gold watch after Coleman's visit and has made a complaint charging him with stealing it. Mr. Estrin recovered all the goods taken from his place at the time of the burglary, from the pawnbroker.

The jobs with which the police say they are sure they can connect Coleman with are the theft of a lot of clothing from Mrs. Robert Gardner's tailor shop on Watchung avenue, the holding up of William Gardner on Washington street, the Weinberger clothing store burglary and several of the closed house jobs during the summer. Coleman pleaded not guilty to all the charges and demanded a hearing. His arrest was made by Detective-Sergeant Flynn, who found him asleep in bed at his home at 4 o'clock this morning.

374 GOOD FELLOWS

Recruiting Closes Tomorrow When it is Hoped to Have All Provided For.

LETTERS FROM POOR TOTS.

Messages Addressed to Santa Claus by Children Who Tell What They Want in Their Stockings Xmas Morning.

The army of Good Fellows today numbers 374, there having been a generous response to the appeal yesterday for recruits for this work which will mean a happy Christmas for the poor children of the city and borough. The campaign of enlistment will close tomorrow, as it will be necessary to give the Charity Organization Society, which is working in co-operation with The Daily Press, to have sufficient time to provide for the distribution of names of worthy children to those who desire them.

It is hoped that between now and the time of closing the campaign tomorrow, many additional recruits will be mustered in for this work of providing toys for some poor children, who otherwise would know nothing of Christmastide cheer.

Following are some of the letters addressed to Santa Claus:

My dear Santa Claus, I would like to have you bring me the following gifts: sled, moving picture machine, electric questioner, typewriter and tool chest with tools. The above articles are all pictured out so Santa will not make a mistake. And then he says: Santa Claus, go and ask one of the clerks to get my truck and stall, with the horse in it. I left my address there.

Dear Santa, I am a little girl, seven years old. My father is dead, and mother has to work hard. I have a brother Alfred, he would like something too. I want a dress, stockings, hair ribbon, leggins, doll, doll bed and some candy.

Dear Santa Claus, please do not forget me. I am a poor boy and live on West Third street. My father is dead.

My dear Santa Claus, I am a little girl six years old this Christmas day and my papa is out of work for a long time. I want you not to forget my little sister. I want you to bring her a rag doll. I want a doll, book, jumping jack, a set of dishes, table, chairs, some candy and will be glad to get anything you want to bring. With love.

Dear Santa, I take great pleasure to write you a few lines telling you that I am well and hope you are the same. Will you be so kind and send my brother and me something for

TO THE GOOD FELLOWS AND THE GOOD GIRLS TOO:

Just about this time last year I told you my story. You listened to it—you did more—you followed its spirit out in a bang-up style. Bless your hearts, you made over 600 poor little tots know the real meaning of a joyous Christmas. I'm not claiming any credit for my story; I'm claiming credit for knowing that there are many Good Fellows in this fine old town of ours—royal chaps who don't do much preaching but when it comes to doing a good turn, well, they're there with the goods. This is no sermon that I'm handing you, it's a heart-to-heart talk with men with red blood in their veins, and here it is off last year's reel:

On Christmas and New Year's eve you and I went out for a good time and spent from $10 to $200. Christmas morning hundreds of children awoke to an empty stocking—the bitter pain of disappointment that Santa Claus had forgotten them. That's the way it used to be. Perhaps it wasn't our fault. We had provided for our own; we had also reflected in a passing way on those less fortunate than our own, but they seemed far off and we didn't know where to find them. Perhaps in the hundred and one things we had to do some of us didn't think of that heart sorrow of the child over the empty stocking.

Now, old man, here's a chance. Just send your name and address to The Daily Press—address Santa Claus—state about how many children you are willing to protect against grief over that empty stocking, inclose a two-cent stamp and you will be furnished with the names, addresses, sex, and age of that many children. It is then up to you, you do the rest. Select your own present, spend 50 cents or $50, and send or take your gifts to those children on Christmas eve. You pay not a cent more than you want to pay—every cent goes just where you want it to go. You gain neither notoriety nor advertising; no record will be kept; your letter will be returned to you with its answer. The whole plan is just as anonymous as old Santa Claus himself.

This is not a newspaper scheme. The Daily Press will preserve the anonymous character of this work. The responsibility of finding the children and sending you their names will be assumed by this paper and it guarantees that whatever you bestow will be deserved.

Neither you nor I get anything out of this, except the feeling that you have saved some child from sorrow on Christmas morning. If that is not enough for you then you have wasted time in reading this—it is not intended for you, but for the good fellows of Plainfield.

Perhaps a twenty-five cent doll or a ten cent tin toy wouldn't mean much to the children you know, but to the child who would find them in the otherwise empty stocking they mean much—the difference between utter disappointment and the joy that Santa Claus did not forget them. Here is where you and I get in. The charitable organizations attend to the bread and meat; the clothes; the necessaries; you and the rest of the good fellows furnish the toys, the nuts, the candies; the child's real Christmas.

GOOD FELLOW.

"Good Fellow" is not a professional philanthropist, he takes a drink, and even goes out at night with the boys for a mild good time—but he has taken care of some poor little ones each year in Plainfield. He says he wishes he had always curtailed his holiday joy-making with the good fellows even more than he did, so that he might have had more money to gladden childish hearts.

The Worthy Grand Master of the lodge of Good Fellows has laid his plans for securing names through the Charity Organization Society.

This is how you can join the lodge of Good Fellows. Write a letter to "Santa Claus," care of The Daily Press, something like this:

I live at No.——— Street. I will be Santa Claus to 6 children.

John Jones.

The letter will go to Santa Claus. He will indorse on your letter the names and addresses of six children. That letter will be remailed to you. Then you get busy. That's all. Come on in, good fellows.

REVOKE LICENSES

Permits of Six Hackmen are Taken Away by Mayor Following Complaints.

MORE STRICT HEREAFTER.

Authorities Make Investigation of Charges and After Licenses Are Rescinded Two Women Are Ordered Out of Town.

After investigating several complaints that had been made to him regarding seven hackmen at the North Avenue station, Mayor Moy yesterday afternoon rescinded the licenses of six and is going to further investigate the findings in regard to the other. In taking away the drivers' numbers, His Honor said that they are the first people strangers come in contact with upon arrival in town and in no small extent opinions of a town are formed on the class of its hackmen. He also said that after the first of the year he was going to be more strict in looking into the character of those applying for drivers' licenses and would not grant any except he was sure that the one to whom this permission is given will not abuse it.

The information secured was of a private nature and the decision was announced after private hearings had been given the men with Judge William G. DeMeza, Chief Kiely, Mayor Moy, Miss Cassie Beam, of German Valley and Miss Lucy Ross, of Pittston, Pa., present. The women were ordered out of town, their fares being paid by the Charity Organization Society. Those losing their licenses were Joseph Parsons, Harry Seader, Wells Cregar, William Bird, W. G. Willis and John Kennedy. Christian Mobus is the driver still being investigated.

SONS OF ST. GEORGE LODGE STARTED HERE

The preliminary arrangements for organizing a Plainfield lodge of the Sons of St. George was held last night at the Queen City Hotel when a number of representative English-Americans discussed the plans as outlined by Samuel Lion, of Newark, and William H. Hill. Mr. Lion presided and Fred Ivamy was selected to act as secretary. After the tentative organization had been effected "Trafalgar" was unanimously chosen as the name for the lodge.

In explaining the advantages of joining the organization Mr. Lion explained the protection it affords and said that Englishmen generally have been very slow about banding themselves together for mutual benefit and protection. The grand lodge guarantees the death benefit of $100 now, having been able to do so through the success the order has attained. The order is now 40 years old and consists of 500 lodges with a membership of 30,000. Grand lodge headquarters are at Trenton.

A committee was appointed to secure rooms and a lodge doctor. The next meeting will be held in the Queen City Hotel on Tuesday, January 9.

PLAINFIELD TRUST CO. ISSUES A CALENDAR.

The patrons of the Plainfield Trust Company are invited to call for one of its 1912 Osborne calendars which are now ready for distribution. The subject of this calendar, "The Trailing Cloud," which is the conception of the well-known artist, Edwin Lamasure, depicts a scene in the dusk of a summer's day. A group of stately cedars, an old bridge, a range of blue hills in the distance, a silent brook and, as the dominating feature, a great feathery cloud trailing across the twilight sky, make up the picture.

This picture is handsomely mounted in such a way that when it has ceased to do service as a calendar it can be framed and preserved as a work of art.

The river Avon, in Southern Wales, burst its banks; great destruction was wrought.

Denunciation of the 1832 treaty by President Taft roused favorable comment in St. Petersburg and Vienna.

The Egyptian government took possession provisionally of the Sollum territory, on the Tripolitan frontier, and will hold it pending the end of the Turco-Italian War.

State Department officials admitted there was little chance of a new Russian treaty being negotiated; the trade balance in favor of the United States was estimated at $21,000,000.

Fearing an outbreak of smallpox at Brown University, Providence, President Faunce requested all students to be vaccinated before they returned from the Christmas vacation.

Counsel for John D. Rockefeller was sharply reprimanded by Chairman Stanley of the House Steel Trust investigating committee for seeking to interpret the testimony of a witness.

The government filed suit at Los Angeles in the federal court to dissolve the so-called Pacific Coast Plumbing Trust, charging that it has conspired to restrain trade and interstate commerce.

Ten years in the federal prison at Atlanta was the sentence imposed at Portland, Me., on the Rev. Frank W. Sandford, leader of the Holy Ghost and Us Society of Shiloh, for causing the death of a follower on the yacht Coronet; the other five counts were continued.

The peace conference in Shanghai began its sittings; a cable dispatch announced that a joint note was about to be presented to the conference by Great Britain, Germany, France, Russia and Japan urging the importance of arriving at a settlement.

Congress—The President informed the Senate he had denounced the Russian treaty; a resolution approving that course was favorably reported, but a vote was delayed until today; no language to which Russia could object was contained in the note of denunciation or in the Senate resolution. House: Objections by Democrats and Republicans prevented consideration of any bills.

FALL OF 18 FEET DOES SLEEPWALKER NO INJURY.

George Flagg, of 143 Valley road, West Orange, walking in his sleep Sunday morning, stepped out of a second story window, and fell a distance of eighteen feet to the ground. Beyond a severe shaking up, he escaped injury.

Flagg, who has been a somnambulist for several years, usually takes the precaution of locking his bedroom window, but neglected to close it Saturday night.

About 4 o'clock another inmate of the house was awakened by loud cries, and looking out of the window discovered Flagg lying on the ground underneath the window.

Knowing Flagg's sleep-walking habits, he ran down stairs to assist him, and found him in a dazed condition.

Flagg succeeded in getting back into the house and to his room unassisted, and yesterday said that he felt no ill effects from his experience.

OLD FIGHTER SHOT.

Mysterious Billy Smith Probably Fatally Wounded.

Seattle, Dec. 19.—Mysterious Billy Smith was probably fatally wounded at Portland, Ore., in a duel with Albert Loomis, captain of a river steamer. Small hope for Smith is held out, as four shots took effect.

The shooting was the result of animosity engendered between the two men when Loomis married Smith's divorced wife three months ago. Mrs. Loomis obtained a divorce from Smith a short time before her marriage to Loomis, after a separation of several months. Loomis said today that Smith had often threatened to kill him and had sent him word to that effect by Mrs. Loomis a month ago.

Loomis was held without bail, though he is slightly wounded from a revolver shot fired by Smith.

Mysterious Billy Smith was one of the best known welterweight fighters in the ring half a dozen years ago. He fought them all and in most of his battles came out ahead. He was born in Eastport, Me., May 15, 1871. Up to the time of his retirement in 1903 he fought 118 battles, half of which he won outright. He fought at 138 pounds.

LEWIS IS AMBITIOUS.

Willie Asserts that He Can Dispose of Gibbons.

Willie Lewis will leave New York tonight for Toronto, Canada, where, on Thursday, he meets Hilliard Lang, the Canadian welterweight champion, for ten rounds at 145 pounds at 3 o'clock. This will be the third fight that Lewis has had in nine days. His first was a decisive win over Billy West in New York, then a victory over Paddy Lavin in Buffalo, and now comes a contest with the boy who claims two victories over Gibbons, the last being a fifteen-round affair.

Willie is going to keep going until he gets another fight with Gibbons, for he still claims that he can whip the Westerner and intends to fight everyone until Gibbons is forced to give him another date.

GIANTS DO WELL.

Win Most of Their Baseball Games on the Cuban Trip.

After a stormy but successful series of games, the Giants wound up their winter baseball campaign in Cuba yesterday and the members of the team are packing their grips so as to spend Christmas in the United States and take a short rest before reporting at Marlin for spring training.

Six victories in succession from the Cubans gained the respect of the inhabitants for the visitors, which was further enhanced by the defeat handed out to Mendez, the Alemendares pitcher, who is regarded as a phenomenon.

WILSON'S SOUTHERN BOOM IS IN COLLAPSE

Atlanta, Dec. 19.—The decline of the Woodrow Wilson Presidential boom in Georgia and the surrounding States is most notable.

Here in Atlanta it has had a conspicuous illustration. Some weeks ago there was widely advertised a great Woodrow Wilson Southern rally, to be held in Atlanta during the last week of November. Prominent speakers from several Southern and Northern States had been invited, including William G. McAdoo, the New York tunnel man, who is said to be very active in Wilson's interest in New York.

Suddenly this great Wilson rally is called off, the invitations are withdrawn and the speakers are notified of an indefinite postponement.

The reason for this collapse, given here from the inside, is that the Wilson enthusiasm had waned, and there was not enough interest discernible to get up the rally or to promise any success if it were held.

The New Jersey elections gave the first black eye to the Wilson boom; the Georgia voter, after all explanations, took the vote to mean a lack of confidence in the Jersey executive at home and a plain intimation that the schoolmaster in politics could not carry his own State in politics in the national campaign.

But the incident, which is said to have done more than anything else to chill, if not kill, the Wilson popularity is that recent application of his for a teacher's pension under the Carnegie fund. The comment runs that that fund was left for the lame ducks, the "superannuated," and was not intended for men in the full vigor of life like Woodrow Wilson.

EXONERATED OF ARSON; SAYS HE'LL SUE FOES.

There is some speculation as to the identity of the persons whom Ellis W. Appleby threatens to sue. Appleby is a resident of Old Bridge, who was exonerated recently of a charge of arson by the Middlesex county grand jury. He says his accusers will hear from him.

Appleby has been quoted as saying that he purposed to sue Will M. Clemens, head of the Clemens Insurance Bureau, 45 to 49 William street, Manhattan, who, after an investigation, swore to the complaint charging Mr. Appleby with arson.

It was said in Old Bridge Sunday that Mr. Appleby is not so desrious of suing Mr. Clemens as several others in the vicinity of Old Bridge, whom he considers his enemies.

"The arrest of Mr. Appleby was not due to a conspiracy," said Mr. Clemens, "but was the result more of his own acts than mine. I have no criticism to make of Mr. Appleby or any one else in Old Bridge at this time, but will say that the affidavits of fifty-six citizens of Old Bridge were obtained regarding Mr. Appleby. In causing the arrest of Mr. Appleby I merely did my duty as a detective. When Mr. Appleby talks about suing his accusers he does not allude to me."

Mr. Clemens said that the coming trials of George Reed and Leonard Rivers, lately indicted by the grand jury on a charge similar to that made against Appleby, would result in developments of importance.

IN FIGHT OVER WOMAN NEGRO SUFFERS 47 CUTS.

With forty-seven stab wounds in his body, the result of a quarrel over a woman, Jesse Brown, colored, of Summit, was taken Sunday morning to Overlook Hospital. Most of the wounds are superficial, the hospital physicians said, but a long, deep gash over the heart may prove fatal,

Earl Johnson, colored, is accused of slashing Brown with a razor. He is being detained in the Summit lockup to await the result of Brown's injuries. The fight occurred at Johnson's house, 48 Railroad avenue, Summit, where Brown was a boarder.

From what the police have learned, the quarrel arose over a young colored woman to whom both men have been paying attention. With Jacob Drayton, colored, Johnson and Brown are said to have been drinking in Johnson's room when the fight started. Johnson told the police it was only after Brown had thrown a beer bottle at him that he used the razor in self-defense.

Brown's legs, breast, back and face were cross slashed. It was with much difficulty that the flow of blood was stopped by City Physician English.

Johnson and Drayton, the latter as a witness to the cutting, were arrested by Patrolmen Daniel McNamara, John J. Gannon and Herbert Smith.

GUARDIAN SOUGHT FOR SON OF ROBERT DAVIS.

An echo of the fight over the estate of the late Democratic leader of Hudson county, Robert Davis, was heard before Vice Chancellor Harrison in Jersey City yesterday, when James R. Bowen, representing Annie Toppin Davis, the widow, appeared and asked for the naming of a guardian al litem for the small son of Mrs. Davis, Hugh D. Davis.

Former State Senator William D. Edwards, for the sons of Mr. Davis, asked that the matter be adjourned for one week and Mr. Bowen agreed. The boy is in the custody of Robert Davis, Jr.

The Junior Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church will meet tomorrow afternoon at 3:45 o'clock. The topic will be "Nehemiah, Who Prayed and Tried," and the leader will be Alma Allegar.

Mrs. B. Frank Coriell, Mrs. Mehlenbeck, Sr., and Mrs. W. A. Woodruff, chairman, comprise the committee from Trinity Reformed church on Christmas dinners, and will receive donations of money, fruit, flowers or provisions. THE OVERSEER QUESTION.

The more we hear of the discussion pro and con of the proposal to appoint Henry L. De Forest overseer-of-the-poor, the more clear it becomes that a rare opportunity is offered to the people of Plainfield to do great things not only for the poor of our city, but for the good of the community and the cause of social betterment in the whole State. Mr. DeForest is by education and bringing up peculiarly fitted for the task of bringing the Plainfield poor department into the lines of the fullest growth under the enlarged powers granted by the new law of 1911. The personal sacrifice to him must be very great, as it was to his father when in New York, some years ago, he rendered a similar service in developing the tenement house department and setting it on a plane where it has been a model for legislation in all the States ever since.

Mr. De Forest will doubtless find it to his advantage to employ the services the present overseer in performing many of the tasks of a routine and clerical kind. With the added power of the rich experience, education and opportunity for broad view of the new appointeee, Plainfield is destined to find herself within the coming year, advanced to a position of leadership in these matters throughout the State.

It is clearly understood that should Mr. De Forest be appointed he will retain Alexander Ayres, the present overseer, and will turn over to Mr. Ayres the overseer's salary.

MONDAY AFTERNOON CLUB'S BUSY SESSION

The program for 1912-1913 was a subject of discussion at the meeting of the Monday Afternoon Club held yesterday at the Hartridge School Auditorium. Mrs. William M. Stillman was in charge of the discussion which was shared by a large number of members and designed to aid the executive board in making out the program for the year's study.

The season's lectures also came under discussion, Miss Mabelle Phillips showing how the methods of socials service suggested in Dr. Cabot's lecture of October 16 on "Medical Sociology," could be carried out in Muhlenberg Hospital with the help of the Charity Organization Society if a larger number of friendly visitors would give not only money but active service. At the present time, she said, the society could only help the patients in need of material aid and that was done largely by appeal to the ever helpful circles of King's Daughters. Nervous and other cases requiring tact, wisdom and a safe shelter, the Charity Organization was unable to cope with in their present limitations.

Mrs. S. B. Herrick in discussing the lecture November 22, by Dr. Simon Flexner on "Bacteriology and Preventive Medicine," spoke of Pasteur as a pioneer in the discovery of disease produced by a germ of vegetable or animal life and treating the disease with a sereum to counteract and destroy the power of the germ.

General discussion followed on the lectures "Luther, Reformer and Founder of the Literary Language of Germany," by Dr. J. Duncan Spaeth October 30, and "Popular Fallacies," by Woods Hutchinson, M. D., Dec. 4.

CHRISTMAS SOCIAL AT HEAVENLY REST.

The Christmas social and sale of useful articles by the Women's Guild of the Church of the Heavenly Rest was held last night and was a decided success, although the attendance was not as large as it has been in previous years. The social features did not in any way detract from the sale and each booth was a centre of activity throughout the evening.

The affair was in charge of a committee headed by Mrs. Charles Borden as chairman. Mrs. Moore was in charge of the fancy work booth and Mrs. Corless of the refreshments. They were assisted by the Misses Tabbing, Veal and Mrs. VanPelt. Mrs. W. B. Grannatt pleased with several recitations and Miss Alice Rimmer played several well received piano selections.

Observed Birthday Anniversary.

Josiah S. Smith, of 203 North avenue, quietly observed the eightieth anniversary of his birthday at his home on Saturday. A feature of the occasion was the presentation of a handsome cake. Mr. Smith has lived here for twenty years, removing here from New York. He was a carpenter by trade, but is now an invalid.

WESTFIELD DELIVERIES WEDNESDAY AND SATURDAY

SOMERSET ORDERLY GRAND JURY HEARS

In delivering his address to the grand jury when the Somerset county court opened at Somerville this morning, Judge Vail said that from the class of cases to be considered it would appear that Somerset county is a place of tranquility. Mayor N. B. Smalley, William F. Williams and I. H. Boehm are the boroughites on the jury and Assemblyman Geo. M. LaMonte is also a member of this term's body. Former Sheriff E. E. Cooper, of Warrenville, is foreman.

Among the cases to be considered by the Grand Jury are Edward Murphy, Edward Hamilton and Albert Vail, all young men from this city, for burglary of Benjamin Estrin's tailor shop on Somerset street.

The North Plainfield causes on the calendar are the F. L. C. Martin Co. vs. Benjamin A. Largeman, Jr., in attachment and R. Marshall Remsen vs George H. Bolen, Jr., administrator, on contract.

Licenses were granted to William Feaster and Hilaire Blatz and a temperance hotel license was granted to Charles Jensen. All of these men conduct hotels on Somerset street, in the borough.

CITY GETS $100,000 AT TAX OFFICE TODAY

Tax Collector William R. Townsend is the busiest man in town these days as a visit to his office will prove. The amount of money paid in taxes at this time of the year accounts in a large measure for the fact that the Christmas trade among the stores is not as brisk as it would be otherwise. Up to 3 o'clock this afternoon, Mr. Townsend had received for the day about $60,000 and it is estimated that about $40,000 will come in today by mail.

Plainfield's share of the State school and county tax is $170,000 and this must be paid by Friday. If tomorrow's receipts at the tax office aggregate about $130,000, which is estimated, the State school and county tax can be met as well as other obligations. Many taxpayers are waiting for the last minute tomorrow so as not to lose their interest on money in the banks and a tremendous rush is anticipated before the offices closes tomorrow night.

MORMON MISSIONARIES ARE MAKING CONVERTS.

Elders Albert J. Newman and Arthur S. Horsley, of Price, Utah, who for the past seven weeks have been spreading the doctrines of Mormonism in the borough after being denied the privilege in the city by Mayor Moy, when interviewed today said that they are meeting with satisfactory results and have been more than pleased with the reception tendered them in the homes in which they have been granted hearings. In some cases they have been invited to call and spend the evening for the purpose of thoroughly explaining the articles of their faith and arrangements are now under way to hold cottage meetings in the homes that have been opened to them.

If these meetings prove as successful as their efforts thus far have been they say a mission will be started as soon as there are sufficient converts to assure the support of one.

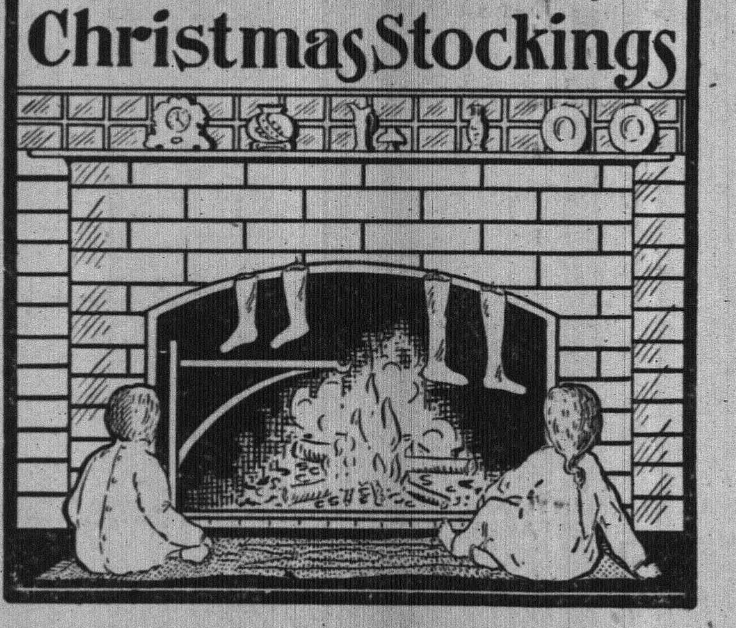
Entertained "Avondale Six."

Thomas C. Vail, of 927 West Fourth street, entertained the "Avondale Six," of which he is a member, at a "stag" party at his home, last night. The evening was spent playing "500," after which an elaborate luncheon was served. The six comprises John Case, Elston B. Davis, David B. Hill, Wallace Hill, Barton K. Davis and Thomas C. Vail.

Mrs. George S. Clay, of East Seventh street, was removed to Muhlenberg Hospital this afternoon for treatment.

SLIPPER HIM THIS XMAS

Little Shoes for Christmas Stockings



As we have said before, probably of all the utilarian gifts that suggest themselves to the minds of the economical and loving mother, slippers and house shoes are by far the most popular and the ones that are most frequently given. There's a heap of comfort in them and they are a constant reminder of the thoughtfulness of the giver. Don't think because we mention Men's Slippers that we haven't made it possible for the men to remember their good wives and daughters. We've all the patterns and styles that please the women folks and the children.

OPPOSE MARRIAGES BY JERSEY SQUIRES

Another effort to curtail the business of New Jersey justices of the peace in the performance of marriages will be made at the next session of the Legislature, according to members of St. Michael's Holy Name Society in Jersey City, which has adopted resolutions condemning the New Jersey justices' practice on marriage ceremonies. A bill prohibiting the performance of marriages by these officials is planned.

Two years ago the Legislature attempted to lessen the number of marriages performed by justices of the peace by requiring every person who would marry to take out a license. In cases where both prospective bridegroom and bride are from another State it is required that they bring with them an identifying witness. The result is that if one wishes to marry he may find in the City Hall in Jersey City any number of persons who will identify him or her for a consideration or even for nothing if the couple selects a justice of the peace who is a friend of the identifying witness. There are as many marriages performed by the justices as ever, and the clergymen do not like it. Their plea to the Legislature will be that marriages by justices of the peace are not conducive to sacredness in the ceremony.

SUITOR, REJECTED, SHOOTS.

Youth Fires Twice at Girl and Then Ends His Own Life.

Determined that no one else should wed her, Ladislaus Gyroi yesterday at New Brunswick shot Miss Mary Marold after she had refused to accept him upon his fifth proposal. He then fired a bullet through his heart. He is dead and the girl is in Wells Hospiltal, New Brunswick, with a bullet in her shoulder and one in her back. She probably will recover. Gyroi was twenty-two years old and the girl is eighteen.

Holy Name Society Elects.

The Holy Name Society of St. Joseph's church has elected these officers for the coming year: President, Robert McCormack; vice-president, James Hurley; recorder, William McCullough; financial secretary, William Daley; treasurer, Thomas Meaney. Patrick McDonough is chairman and Thomas Hurley assistant of a sick committee.

Dry Cleaning

like everything else, is cheapest when you get the best, for your garments are cleaned and pressed better—and therefore the work lasts longer and is better for your clothing or household furnishings.

Besides a saving, good cleaning is sanitary. Since this is so, get the best, for handwork in small tubs is sure to carry some dirt along from other clothing belonging to other people.

You don't experience anything of that nature in a first-class place.

PAY HIGH PRAISE TO LATE JOHN F. DRYDEN

Resolutions on the death of John F. Dryden, late president of the Prudential Insurance Company, were made public yesterday by Secretary Grey. The resolutions were passed by the board of directors of the institution at a meeting Monday, December 11. The committee appointed to draft the memorial consisted of Richard V. Lindabury, William T. Carter and Wilbur S. Johnson. The resolutions are as follows:

"In the death of John F. Dryden, the founder of this company, and for thirty years its president, the company has sustained a loss which no man can measure and no words express. He not only founded the company but guided its policies and led its activities from the hour of its birth until the day of his death. There were other calls upon his time, but the Prudential was always his first consideration, and to it he gave the best there was in him. Whatever of success it has achieved or of good it has accomplished is due primarily to his clear vision, sound judgment and untiring zeal.

"In founding the Prudential Mr. Dryden's idea was to bring the benefit of life insurance to the homes of the working people. He had been greatly moved by observing the distressing condition which frequently obtained in those homes when the working member of the family was suddenly taken away by death. The plan had often been tried before, and in many different ways, but had never succeeded in this country. It was left for him to work out a practical scheme and to find the men and the money to carry it out. This he did, and upon the foundation he laid the whole fabric of industrial insurance in America rests today. His earlier efforts were attended with many difficulties and much discouragement. To a man less sure of himself and less resolute of purpose they would probably have been fatal. Capital was timid and friends lukewarm, but serving without salary and operating in humble quarters his expenses were small and in a few years the project became self-supporting. With its growth grew also Mr. Dryden's conception of the possibilities which his scheme involved. He started the company as the 'Widows and Orphans' Friendly Society.' Then it became 'The Prudential Friendly Society,' and finally 'The Prudential Insurance Company of America.' Thus was evolved from small beginnings in the basement of a Broad street bank the magnificent institution which today challenges the respect and admiration of the world. That so much could be accomplished in a single life-time and by a single individual is truly marvelous and of itself stamps the author as one of the great men of his time.

"In 1902 Mr. Dryden was chosen to represent the State of New Jersey in the Senate of the United States. In the discharge of his duties in that high office he displayed the same breadth of view and the same keenness of intellect which marked his administration of this company's affairs. In securing the enactment of legislation requisite for the speedy construction of the Panama canal he left a permanent imprint upon the country's history. In his death the State and nation have lost a citizen and public servant of the first order.

"In his personal intercourse Mr. Dryden was the personification of gentlemanly courtesy. This he constantly exhibited toward the members of the board, and, in even a more marked degree, toward the employes of the company. How the latter responded to it is shown by the record of devoted service rarely equaled and probably never excelled.

"In his private life and family relations Mr. Dryden's character shone with peculiar lustre. Kindness, gentleness and consideration for others were observable in everything he said and everything he did. His conversation was pure, his ideals high and his judgments just. No one could associate with him without being the better for it, and no one having that privilege but feels a deep sense of personal loss.

"Resolved, That the foregoing be spread upon the minutes of this board as a permanent testimonial to the memory of Mr. Dryden; that a copy of the same be given to the press and another copy, suitably engrossed, be sent to his family."

UNCROWNED KINGS THEME OF PASTOR

"Uncrowned Kings," was the subject of a lecture given by Rev. W. T. Sherman Culp, of Philadelphia, at the Park Avenue Baptist church, last night before a large and appreciative audience. Dr. Culp is a natural pulpit orator and has the faculty of holding the close attention of his audiences.

The "Uncrowned Kings" referred to by the speaker included the men of science, medicine, surgery, manufacture, etc., telling in quick succession of the countless things achieved in recent years and the wonderful progress made. One of the most interesting features of the lecture was the minute description of the functions performed by each part of the human body, and the important relationship of one to the other.

Dr. Culp carried his audience at will from the sublime to the ridiculous, from the pathetic to the humorous, and he impressed all with his scholarly and eloquent presentation of the subject.

DR. HERRING TALKS AT DUTCH ARMS' SUPPER

The Dutch Arms, men's Association, of Trinity Reformed church, held its regular monthly meeting in the lecture room of the church, last night, features being an informal program of music and an excellent address by Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church, together with a fine supper prepared and served by the good and welfare committe, of which T. R. VanZandt is the chairman.

The supper was served at a long table, the menu comprising roast meat, beans, celery, home-made biscuits, crackers, coffee and cake. After the good things were enjoyed, E. D. Young, president of the Dutch Arms, introduced Dr. Herring, the speaker of the evening. Dr. Herring took for his subject, "Man," and his remarks were greatly enjoyed. He likened man to an English walnut. He said that some English walnuts looked perfectly sound on the outside, but when opened the meat was dried up and tasteless, and some contained emptiness.

Comparing the walnut with man, Dr. Herring said that some men look big, robust and in perfect health, yet within they are the opposite. They are as useless as the dried up walnut. They are emptiness itself. On the other hand there are men like a sound walnut, sound all the way through and they possess fine characters. You can tell at a glance that they are all right. Throughout his short talk, Dr. Herring related many personal experiences, holding the close attention of hearers to the end.

Following the talk, there was a musical program. William Ward, of Scotch Plains, rendered a number of piano selections, Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Young sang several duets, George Dufford gave two recitations, while there were cornet and piano numbers by Mr. Ward and Mr. Young, all of which were enjoyed and heartily applauded. T. R. VanZandt was chairman of the good and welfare committee, which prepared and served the refreshments, the other members being John Bennett, George Dufford, Henry Seader and Horace J. Martin, Sr.

Proctor's Big Show.

"The Bachelor's Honeymoon," which was one of the greatest successes, is presenting in tabloid form at Proctor's theatre this week, under the name of "A Quiet Honeymoon." If you want a good hearty laugh see this sketch. It provides twenty minutes continual laughter. Golden and Golden, "The Performer and the Bootblack," in song, merry talk and dancing, are clever. Those who remember the famous Pat Rooney of twenty years ago, will want to see his daughter, Kate Rooney, who sings popular songs and gives a fine impersonation of her father. She is assisted by John Harding. The DeVet Sisters present a refined piano and violin act, and Edith Haney, the pocket edition comedienne, is a clever little miss, singing French and kid songs.

Danish Lutheran services will be held tomorrow night at 8 o'clock at the Swedish Pilgrim church, West Sixth and New streets, with preacning by Rev. N. H. Nyrap, of Brooklyn.

Christmas Legends

ALL around the season of the Coming of Love as a little Child there have sprung legends and beliefs, like blossoms in a gracious clime, which testify with subtlety to the depth of the appeal of the birth of Christ. Here divinely spiritual symbolism and there sweet human tenderness and pathos appear, and, blended, they evidence the world's belief that this was both Son of Man and Son of God.

An Irish legend tells that, on Christmas eve, the Christ-Child wanders out in the darkness and cold, and the peasants still put lighted candles in their windows to guide the sacred little feet, that they may not stumble on their way to their homes. And in Hungary the people go yet further in their tenderness for the Child, they spread feasts and leave their doors open that He may enter at His will, while throughout Christendom there is a belief that no evil can touch any child who is born on Christmas eve.

The legend which tells how the very hay which lined the manger in which the Holy Babe was laid put forth living red blossoms at midwinter at the touch of the Babe's body could only have arisen from belief in the renewal of life through the Lord of Life.

The Holy Thorn.

IT is not so many centuries ago since there was that holy thorn at Glastonbury which blossomed every Christmas, and, so ran the legend, had done ever since St. Joseph of Arimathea, having come as apostle to Britain, and, landing at Glastonbury, had stuck his staff of dry hawthorn into the soil, commanding it to put forth leaves and blossoms. This the staff straightway did, and thereby was the king converted to the Christian faith, the faith which preached life from death.

The holy thorn of Glastonbury flourished during the centuries until the civil wars. During those it was uprooted; but several persons had had trees growing from cuttings from the original tree, and those continued to bloom at the Christ-season, just as their parent, which had grown from St. Joseph's staff, had bloomed. And about the middle of the 18th century it was recorded in the Gentleman's Magazine how the famous holy thorn would not deign to recognize the new style calendar, which had then come into force but would persist in blossoming as of old on old Christmas day!

In those days the anniversary of the advent of the Babe had certainly meant more to the common people than merely a time for feasting and revelry, for giving and receiving; it had been also a season for holy observances, for they refused to go to church on New Christmas day, the holy thorn not being then in blossom. So serious became the trouble that the clergy found it prudent to announce that Old Christmas day should also be kept sacred as before. Only another story of men's weak, superstitious minds? True, perhaps; but they are better who evidence some spiritual weakness than those who wallow in the wholly material, and when we cease to be careful of the cup and the platter, we become not over careful of their contents.

The First Christmas Rose.

ANOTHER of those spiritual parables is the legend of the Christmas rose, and it tells how good things, fit for giving, spring up ready to the hand which earnestly desires to give to the Child. It is said that a certain maiden of Bethlehem was so poor that she had nothing to give to the Babe to whom kings brought wealth from afar, and, as she stood, longing and mourning, and angel appeared to her, saying: "Look at thy feet, beneath the snow," and lo! on obeying the maiden found that a new flower had miraculously sprung up and blossomed at her needs. Every since then, runs this story, this exquisite flower, with its snowy petals just touched by suggestions of pinkish bloom, is to be found at this season; and, indeed, its half-opened cups are like chalices of love, and its fully-spread petals are like a happy innocence, fit symbols for the gifts for the Babe of spotless innocence, whose heart was the vessel of love.

Christmas Eve Legends.

THERE are several exceedingly touching legends concerning bells, which are heard ringing from buried cities and villages at this season. One belongs to a village near Raleigh, in Nottinghamshire, and the story runs that once where there is now but a valley, there was a village which, with every trace of life and habitation, had been swallowed by an earthquake; but ever since, at Christmas, the bells of the buried church are heard to ring as of old.

A similar legend is told of Preston, in Lancashire, and yet another and more moving one comes from the Netherlands. It is said that the city of Been was notorious for its black and shameless sins, as well as renowned for its beauty and magnificence. To the Sodom of the middle ages came our Savior on one anniversary of his birth, and went as a beggar from door to door, but none so in all that Christmas keeping city gave the Master of the abundance. Sin he saw rampant on every side, but not a trace of Christmas bounty and good will, and he called to the sea, which, as of old, obeyed his voice, and Been, the city of sin, was buried deep, clean out of sight, beneath the waves. But ever at Christmas up from beneath the covering waters comes the sweet calling of church bells buried in Been. It is a legend which appears to tell in parable that nothing which ever belonged to the Christ, and was dedicated to his service, is ever wholly lost from him and alienated from service; that ever and again something of their inherent beauty and compelling sweetness rises from the depths through all seeming ruin.

The Manger.

TRADITION declares that within the stone manger there was another one of wood, and that the stone cradle in the Chapel of the Nativity is, indeed, the outer manger. Splendid is that humble stone trough now with white marble, softly rich with costly draperies, and radiant with a silver star, which is surrounded by 16 lamps, ever a-lit. But yet more glorious is the wooden manger at Rome, held to be the veritable manger in which the Christ-child lay. It was removed to Rome in the seventh century, during the Mohammedan invasion of the Holy Land, and there it is preserved in a strong brazen chest, from which it is brought forth on Christmas days, when it is placed on the Grand Altar. It is mounted upon a stand of silver, which is inlaid with gold and gems, and the shrine in which it rests is of purest rock crystal. In the days in which this was accomplished men, whatsoever may have been their shortcomings in other directions, gave magnificently to the Church Visible.

Christmas Bells.

TRADITION says that the hour of the Babe's birth was the hour of midnight, and legend adds that from then until dawn cocks crow. In Ireland it is held that whoso looks into a mirror on this eve will see the devil or Judas Iscariot looking over his shoulder, surely thought sufficient to drive the hardiest soul to a thought of the Innocent Babe.

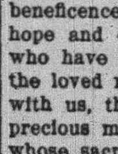
Another legend tells that, on Christmas eve, Judas Iscariot is released from that hell—"his own place"—and is allowed to return to earth that he may cool himself in icy waters.

Wild and improbable although such and such legends appear on their faces, they bear study and repay it, for we then see that they are full of subtle spiritual expression, as it were; that they are parables of certain spiritual facts, and it will be ill for us should the Christmas day ever dawn on which such flowers of tender faith and wonder shall appear to us no more than dry curious specimens from the dead roots of superstition.

What Christmas Means.

Christmas means hope and its realization. The child grows eagerly expectant as the time approaches for the visit of Santa Claus. While this fiction remains unquestioned, the imagination opens new and wider worlds, and ideals become so much a part of the mind that the prosaic and commonplace can never crush them. Until the youth reaches manhood and independence, Christmas is the happiest day of the year. Its gifts and hearty good cheer impress family affection, parental thoughtfulness and brotherly love. The dullest and most irresponsive of fathers and mothers are uplifted to a vision of higher life by the interchanges of souvenirs and the merry meeting with children and grandchildren at the table and fireside. Few can escape and all enjoy the meaning of the festival, the lessons it conveys and the inspiration it gives, and we enter upon a brighter future and a fuller appreciation of the beneficence of the practice of faith, hope and charity. The loved ones who have crossed to the other side, the loved near and far who are still with us, the old homestead with its precious memories, the old church whose sacred associations tie together childhood, maturity and age, love, marriage and death; the schoolhouse where the beginnings of education were so painful, and the ever-increasing pleasures of the pursuit of learning through the high school, academy and college are recalled and recited, and there is exquisite delight in these oft-told tales, and new experiences enliven this blessed anniversary.—Leslie's Weekly.

First Christmas Observance.



Christmas gets its name from the mass celebrated in the early days of the Christian church in honor of the birth of Christ, its first solemnization having been ordered by Pope Telesphorus. This was in or before the year 138, for in that year Pope Telesphorus died.

At first Christmas was what is known as a movable feast, just as Easter is now, and owing to misunderstandings was celebrated as late as April or May. In the fourth century an ecclesiastical investigation was ordered, and upon the authority of the tables of the censors in the Roman archives December 25 was agreed upon as the date of the Savior's nativity. Tradition fixed the hour of birth at about midnight, and this led to the celebration of a midnight mass in all the churches, a second at dawn and a third in the later morning.

Paint that Stays Painted

That has been my slogan for years I aim to do the best possible painting—using only the best materials that the manufacturers can furnish, and employing the most skilled mechanics that can be procured. I stand back of every job I do, and when I am allowed to use my own judgment in regard to the best method of doing it, I will gladly make good any work that by any chance proves defective.

CHAPTER XXVII.

WHOM THE GODS DESTROY.

THERE was one whose guilty eyes were closed to the red danger so near. In the house in the Street-of-the-Misty-Valley, under the green mosquito netting, Phil lay in a log-like slumber. The soft light of the paper andon flowed over the gay wadded f'ton, the handsome besotted face, with its mark of the satyr and, at one side, a little wooden pillow of black lacquer. There was no sound save the sweep of the wind outside and the heavy breathing of the unconscious man.

For three nights past, since his wild motor ride from Nikko, he had not slept, save in illusory snatches, from which he had waked with the sweat breaking on his forehead. Short as were these, they had held horrid visions, broken fragments of scenes that waved and clustered about the lilied altar in the Ts'kiji cathedral, echoing to the solemn service of the dead. Again and again there had started before him the stolid ring of blue clad coolie women, swaying as they had swayed to the straw ropes of the pile driver in the moat bottom with their weird chant—

Yo—eeya—ko—ra!
Yo—eeya—ko—ra!

And now they chanted a terrible refrain:

Thou—shalt—not—kill!

Tonight, however, deeper potations had done their work. He was dreaming—yellow dreams like the blackguard fancyings of the half world—visions in which he moved, a prince of largesse, through unending pleasures of self indulgence. He was on a European boulevard riding with Haru by his side in silk and pearls, and people turned to gaze as he went by.

But now, with sinister topsy turvydom, the dream changed. The cocher drove faster and faster into a mad gallop. He turned his head, and Phil saw that the face under the glazed hat was the face of his dead brother. The staring pedestrians began to pursue the carriage. They showered blow after blow on it till the sound reverberated like thunder.

Not the ghosts of his dream, but a hand of flesh and blood, was knocking. It was on the outer shoji, and the frail dwelling shook beneath it. The servant, sunk in bovine sleep, heard no sound, but the chauffeur in the automobile that throbbed outside the wistaria gate rose from his seat, and across a bamboo wattle a dog barked and scrambled venomously.

Phil's eyes opened, and he sat up giddily. He went unsteadily to the door and unfastened the shoji, blinking at the great form that strode past him into the inner apartment.

Bersonin's gaze swept the room. "The girl!" he said hoarsely. "Where is she?"

Phil looked about him dazedly—at the tumbled f'ton, the deserted wooden pillow. Haru gone? His senses, clouded by intoxication, took in the fact dully as a thing of no meaning.

The expert grasped him by his shoulder and shook him till the thin silk of the kimono tore under the enormous white fingers. The violence had its effect. The daze fell away. Phil broke into loud imprecations.

"Did you tell her anything?"

Phil's tongue clove to the roof of his mouth. "What is—what makes you think"— he stammered.

Bersonin's face was a greenish hue. His great hands shook.

"Tonight," he said in a whisper, "tonight—an hour ago—I saw her on the street. I wasn't sure at first, but I know now it was she. A naval officer was with her. He took her into the house of the minister of marine."

The other gave a low cry. A chalky pallor overspread his features. "Haru? No, Bersonin: You're crazy, I say. She—she would never tell."

Fury and terror blazed out on the big man's countenance. A sharp moan came from his lips.

"So she did know! You told her then, oh, incredible fool!"

For an instant the demon of murder looked from the doctor's eyes. Phil quailed before him. A frenzy of fear twisted his features. He felt the passion that had been his undoing shrivel and fade like a parchment in a flame. His voice rose to a kind of scream.

"Don't look at me like that!" he raved. "I was a fool to trust her, but it's done now. It's done, I tell you, and you can't undo it! What can they do to us? They may find the machine, but what can they prove? We're foreigners. They can't touch us without proof."

He had no thought now of the millions that were to have been his. All the grandiloquent pictures he had painted of the future faded in panic. He trembled excessively.

"Proof!" sneered Bersonin savagely. "There would have been none if—it happened. I had arranged that. In its operation the machine destroys itself. And neither of us is in Yokohama tonight."

"DID YOU TELL HER ANYTHING?"

Phil's ashen face set. His tongue curled round his parched lips. "What is to be done? Can we still"—

"Listen," said the doctor. "A single hour more, even with your cursed folly, and all would have been well, for no trains are running and all wires are down. I heard this afternoon, too, that the wireless is out of order."

"Then—then—they cannot"— Phil's voice shook with a nauseous eagerness.

"Wait! When I saw the girl there I was suspicious. I watched. In a little while your friend Daunt came from the gate. In some way he happened to be there. The betto was flogging the horses like a crazy man. He came in this direction. Can't you understand? His aeroplane! He is going to use it as a last chance. If he succeeds we may spend our lives in the copper mines. If he can be stopped we may win yet. There will be nothing but the tale of a Japanese drab—that and nothing else!"

Phil flung on his clothing in a madness of haste. The desperate dread that had raged in him was become now a single fixed idea, frosted over by a cold demented fury. Unhealthy spots of red sprang in his white cheeks; his eyes dilated to the mania of the paranoiac.

Hatless, he rushed through the little garden, cleared the rear hedge at a bound and fled like a runaway from hell toward the darkness of the vast parade ground.

As Bersonin stood by the wistaria gate beside the pulsing motor confused thoughts rushed through his mind into an eddying phantasmagoria. The fear and agitation which he had kept under only by an immense self control returned with double weight.

All was known—thanks to the brainless fool in whom he had relied! The government knew. The wild tale the Japanese girl had told had been believed. Had there been suspicions before? He thought of the espionage he had fancied had been kept of late on his movements, of the silent, saturnine faces he had imagined dogged his footsteps. Even his servants, even Ishida with his blank visage and fantastic English, might be—

He looked sharply at the chauffeur. He was lighting a cigarette in the hollow of his hands. The ruddy flare of the match lit the brown placid face, the narrow, secret keeping eyes.

He tried to force his mind to a measure of control, to look the situation in the face.

If Phil failed, if the aeroplane won against darkness and wind, if the bungalow was reached in time and the machine made harmless, nothing would happen. Who, then, would believe the girl's wild story? Who could show that he had made it? He had worked at night, alone in his locked laboratory. Besides, it would tell nothing. It would yield its secret only to the master mind. And if its presence on the roof damned anybody it would not be him. He had not put it there. He had not been in Yokohama in three days.

If the aeroplane did not start—he remembered the look on Phil's face when he rushed away—or if it failed: With its own deadly ray, the very machine would vanish. Phil had not known this—could not have told. The searchers would find nothing. The news would have flashed along the cables that must roll up for him vast sums in the panic of markets. And there would be nothing to bring the deed home to him.

Nothing? The warning had been given before the fact. The government had taken alarm. Bureaus were buzzing already. Sooner or later the accusation would be running through the street, swiftly and stealthily, from noble to merchant, from coolie to beggar, from end to end of this seething oriental city, wherein he was a marked man. What mattered it whether there were evidence on which a court would condemn him? The story of his huge coup in the bourses would be told—would rise up against him. He remembered suddenly a tale he had heard of a traitor to Japan cut to pieces in a tea house. An icy sweat broke out on his limbs.

Where was there any refuge? On a foreign ship? There were many in the bay. He longed with a desperate longing for the touch of a deck beneath his feet, a bulwark of blue water between him and possible vengeance. At Kisaraz, on the Chiba road, a dozen miles to the north in the curve of the bay, was his summer villa, his frequent resort for a week end. His naphtha launch lay there always ready for use. He could reach it in an hour.

"Get into the tonneau," he said to the chauffeur. "I'll drive myself."

He took the wheel the other resigned, threw on the clutch, and the clamorous monster moved off down the quiet lane faster and faster till the chauffeur clutched the seat with uneasiness.

The fever of flight was on his master now. He began to imagine voices were calling after him. From a police box ahead a man stepped into the roadway waving a hand. It was no more than a warning against overspeed, but the gesture sent a thrill of terror through the big man at the wheel. He swerved sharply around a corner, skidding on two wheels.

Bersonin muttered a curse as he peered before him, for the stretch was brilliantly illuminated. He was on the Street-of-Prayer-to-the-Gods, which tonight seemed strangely alive with hubbub.

PUBLISHERS TO DINE SOME NOTABLE MEN.

Governor Woodrow Wilson, of New Jersey; Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, in his capacity as contributing editor of The Outlook, and Senator La Follette, will be among the guests of honor at the banquet of the Periodical Publishers' Association, which will be held at the Bellevue-Stratford in Philadelphia February 2. All three have accepted invitations, while a fourth invitation has been extended to President Taft. No reply has yet been received from him, but it is likely that the dinner will bring together four men whose names are prominently mentioned in connection with the Presidential nomination for 1912.

It is rather an ungallant man who advocates women's suffrage on the theory that it will not make any real difference.—Washington Star.

DRIVING-ROD BREAKS ON P. & R. EXPRESS

Passengers on a Philadelphia and Reading express train from Philadelphia to New York were jarred out of their seats in a cut a mile west of Elizabeth yesterday, when a driving rod on the locomotive broke and the train came to a sudden stop.

All of the passengers were transferred to another train after a delay of fifteen minutes. Some of them, who had been eating breakfast in the dining car when the jolt came, had their food spilled in their laps. Two trains were stalled behind the wreck, but as the road has four tracks at this point they were speedily shifted to other tracks and proceeded on their way. The line was all clear in twenty-five minutes.

The train that broke its driving-rod is one of the one hour and fifty-minute trains between Philadelphia and New York. The other trains that were stalled were loaded with commuters.

RESCUER DIVES FROM CAR END

In answer to a cry for help, James Devning, a conductor on a Pennsylvania Railroad freight train, dived off the tail of the caboose into the icy waters of Newark Bay early yesterday morning and saved the life of his brakeman, William Miller, who had fallen off the top of a box car as the train was crossing the Newark Bay trestle.

As he fell he gave the cry which Devning heard. The conductor seized the red lamp, whirled it about twice, and dived off the end of the train after his man. As he hit the water he again heard the appeal for help.

"I'm coming! Hold fast!" he replied.

The train had stopped and the rest of the crew came running over the tops of the cars to learn the trouble. They heard Devning's shouts to Miller in the water. It was so dark they could go by sounds only, and even this was difficult, for the high wind that swept across the bay almost drowned out their voices.

"Hold him, Jim," they shouted, "we'll get a rope." The two men in the water were having all they could do to stay on top. The white caps splashed in their faces and they were more under water than on top. Finally a rope landed near the men and they were hauled upon the trestle. They were put in the caboose and taken to the foot of Gates avenue, Jersey City, where an ambulance was summoned from the City Hospital. At that institution they say the men will be able to leave today none the worse for their perilous experience. Devning is the hero of the yards today and a big reception awaits him when he comes back to man his freight.

The Assembly committee is likely to ratify the decision of the upper House committee in making March 22 the date for adjournment of the Legislature and to assign to various members of the House bills to be introduced to carry out the party program.

N. P. H. S. 31, ROSELLE PARK HIGH 16

The North Plainfield High School basketball five defeated the Roselle Park High School team at Debele Hall, yesterday afternoon, the final score being 31 to 16. The borough boys started off the game with a rush and practically cinched the game at the end of the first half, the score being 21 to 5. They had the ball all of the time and were able to shoot at will.

W. Taylor shot five baskets from the field and two from foul, while Carroll Taylor caged six field goals. These with superb guarding by Townley and Burner resulted in a big lead at the end of the first half. In the second half the Roselle boys got busy and with a combination of fast team work and good shooting brought the score to 31 to 16. During this half W. Taylor was injured and the game was called, but in a few minutes the player was able to continue. Saturday afternoon, N. P. H. S. will meet P. H. S. at the Y. M. C. A. in the first game for the inter-scholastic city championship. Yesterday's lineup:

N. P. H. S.—Forwards, W. Taylor, C. Taylor; center, Dunning; guards, Townley, Bruner, VanMater.

Roselle Park High—Forwards, Hill, Davies; center, Sharrot; guards, VanClief, Wilmore.

Referee, Stine and Euchen; scorer and timer, Kenney; time of halves, 20 and 15 minutes.

Fogel Sends Out Contracts.

President Horace Fogel, of the Philadelphia National League club, sent out twenty-eight contracts to his players yesterday afternoon, and expects to receive the signed contracts of all the men in a few weeks. He has the contracts of many regulars, but he is signing some of the youngsters he obtained from the various minor leagues last season. The Phillies' president is sure that Grover Alexander will accept the terms offered him.

Slocum's New Boss.

Jimmie Mullin, of Avoca, a suburb of Scranton, last night signed a contract to manage the Scranton team, of the New York State League, for the season of 1912. This is the team "Strike Out Slocum" will join in the spring. Mullin played second base for the Toronto, of the International League. He is a favorite in Scranton and is expected to have a pennant-winning combination.

Christmas Day Shoot.

The Watchung Gun Club will hold the annual Christmas Day shoot on the Independent Gun Club grounds next Monday. The prizes offered are turkeys, geese, ducks and chickens. These will be contested for both on dead mark as well as trap shooting. Shells for all dead mark contestants must be purchased on the ground.

One-Armed Bowler Victorious.

Ned Nelson, the one-armed bowler, defeated Jimmy Smith, of Buffalo, at Chicago, last night, in an eleven-game match, 2279 to 2266. Smith earlier in the day, defeated Tony Karlicek in eight games, 1690 to 1589.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

A new and original play this season, "The County Sheriff," by Lem B. Parker, will be the attraction at the Plainfield theatre Christmas afternoon and night. O. E. Wee has given it a magnificent production and engaged an exceptionally strong cast, including Miss Irma Manning, Mabelle Severton, Kittie Holville, Joe Lyonell, Loftus Husband, Victor Bouvier, Bert James, Charles H. Brooke, Walace E. Young and many others. The locale of the play is the most picturesque of all the Western States, namely the Dakotas. It is a skillful bit of work, of admirably drawn characters, bubbling humor, intensely dramatic situations with a very pretty love story. Don't forget the date.

—Neuman Bros. are making a specialty this week of mince meat, plum pudding, figs and fancy table raisins. These goods are of exceptional quality and the prices are reasonable.

LAWMAKERS' PLAN

Legislators Discuss Probable Make-up of Committees For Next Session.

DISTRIBUTION OF THE PLUMS.

Gaunt May Get Senate Appropriation Committee Chairmanship—Edge Likely As Judiciary Committee Chief.

One of the chief topics of discussion among the legislators at Trenton yesterday was the make-up of the committees of the two houses of the new Legislature. There was considerable speculation as to who would be selected for the chairmanship of the important appropriations committee of the Senate, a post which was held for the past five or six years by Senator William J. Bradley, of Camden county, who will retire from the Senate January 1.

The general drift of the talk was that Senator G. W. F. Gaunt of Gloucester county would succeed Mr. Bradley as head of this committee. Senator Gaunt has been a member of this committee for the past two years, and he is regarded as the logical man to pilot the appropriations committee.

The other members of this committee last year were Senator Leavitt, Republican, of Mercer, and Gebhardt, Democrat, of Hunterdon, and the talk was that because of their experiences these two members would be retained on the new committee next year. There are four members of the Senate appropriations committee, and the retirement of Senator Bradley will open the way for the appointment of another member in addition to the three before mentioned, and the probability is that the member will be selected from among the available holdover Republicans, who will be Senators Edge, Lewis, Hand and Nichols, not counting Senator Prince, who will be president. With the new Assembly in control of the Republicans, the committees there, of course, will have their political complexions changed from Democrat, as they were last year, to Republican. The chairmanship of the House Appropriations Committee will be selected from among the holdover members.

Following the customs in each house, the Republican leader will be made chairman of the Judiciary Committee. This will put Senator Edge of Atlantic at the head of the Senate Committee on Judiciary, while Assemblyman George W. Whyte of Camden will head the same committee in the House. It was thought that Senator Edge might remain as chairman of the Corporations Committee of the Senate, although the necessity of his being made chairman of the Judiciary Committee may change this plan.

Another important Senate committee is that on municipal corporations, which has the handling of all the measures relating to towns and cities.

Last year Senator Leavitt, of Mercer, was chairman of this committee, and in all probability he will be retained in this post in the new Legislature. Because of his position as master of the State Grange and his general familiarity with agricultural matters, Senator Gaunt will likely remain as chairman of the Committee on Agriculture. The retirement of Senator Frelinghuysen will vacate the chairmanship of the Committee on Education, and there was some talk that Senator Leavitt might be selected for this place, as he was formerly a member of the school board of Trenton, and so has had experience in public school matters. Senators-elect Pierce, of Union, and Smalley, of Somerset have both had several years' experience in the Assembly, and, doubtless, this will be considered by President Prince in selecting committee places for them. Mr. Pierce is preparing the grade crossings bill, and for the last year or two has given special study to this subject, so that it would not be surprising if he were placed on the committee on Railroads and Canals. Mr. Smalley was a member of the Assembly appropriations committee in 1910, his last term in that house, and this might lead to his appointment to the Senate Appropriations Committee, even though he is not a holdover member. In the Assembly, Mr. Radcliffe is the dean of the Republicans, and, doubtless, he will be given some of the more important committee posts. The talk was that he would likely be continued on the Appropriations Committee, and it is likely, too, that Speaker McCran will have him named to some such important place as the judiciary, the corporations or the revision of laws committee.

Mr. DeUnger, of Camden, because of his holdover office as commander of the Second Battalion of the Naval Reserves, will likely be retained on the Committee on Militia, and it

ROBERT FITZSIMMONS GETS INTO RING AGAIN

"Bob" Fitzsimmons, of Dunellen, who will never be forgotten, so long as he lives, was the third man in the right at the boxing bout between Joe Wagner, of Philadelphia, and Connie Schmidt, of Hoboken, at the New Permo A. A. at Perth Amboy, and he was given a reception that must have made his blood tingle with appreciation last night.

Before the bout began the lanky fellow made a neat speech, in which he said he was in as good condition for a fight now, as he ever was, excepting his hands, which he said went back on him, and forced him to retire from the game before he was willing to.

Harry Ramsey, the Perth Amboy fighter, was matched to meet Schmidt, but his last fight left him in a bad way and he was unable to go on. Harry was at the ringside to show that he was not faking, and a black lamp and other bruises showed that he was not fit to go on. He promised the members of the club that he would not fight again, until he had showed at the New Permo A. A. Wagner and Schmidt furnished a good six round draw. In the first round Bob Fitzsimmons tripped and fell onto the ropes, as if he had received a knockout, but quickly recovered, amid the applause and laughter of the spectators.

GOOD FELLOWS MAKE 472 CHILDREN HAPPY

Four hundred and seventy-two poor little children will know what it is to enjoy a real Christmas and only because there are several hundred Good Fellows in Plainfield. The result of the campaign begun only about a fortnight ago and ended today far surpasses expectations. The Good Fellows, themselves, will have a better Christmas themselves than ever before for they will have the satisfaction of realizing that they have made hundreds of poor youngsters happy.

The Charity Organization Society, which co-operates with The Daily Press in this movement each year, has devoted a lot of time and effort at its busiest season to investigate all cases and to compile lists of worthy children. Not only this but the society has attended to sending to Good Fellows the names of the poor little tots. In the name of that society and this paper, The Daily Press congratulates the Good Fellows for what these Good Fellows have done.

Y. M. C. A. PLANNING FOR ANNUAL MEETING AND BANQUET

The annual meeting and dinner of the Young Men's Christian Association will be held on Thursday, January 18, in the association building, East Front street. Following the election of officers, reading of reports and other routine matters to come before the meeting, the dinner will be held and this will be followed by a review of the work of the past year by President J. E. Kimball and an address on the church and the social situation will be made by Rev. Dr. John McDowell, of Newark.

Daughters of America Elect.

Martha Washington Council, Daughters of America, at its meeting last night, elected these officers for the coming year: Councilor, Mrs. M. Goodman; associate councilor, Mrs. A. Schmidt; vice-councilor, George Mobus; associate vice-councilor, Mrs. A. Kettenring; conductor, Miss Florence Williams; warden, Mrs. F. Overland; inside sentinel, E. E. Townley; outside sentinel, Harry Nolty; trustee, 18 months, Harry Nolty. A pumpkin pie sociable was held after the business meeting. The installation will take place January 2.

Busy Cleaning the Streets.

The absence of sever storms at this season of the year is giving Street Commissioner Gavett and his men an excellent opportunity to clean up the street, culverts and gutters about the city. A recent bad spell of wet weather left the streets in a muddy condition and the street gang has found much to do in removing this from the principal thoroughfares. There is no new work being started at present.

Establish Ford Salesroom.

The Ford auto agency has leased French's carriage respository on Somerset street and will have a stock of Fords on hand for sale at once. Ivamy's market has purchased a handsome delivery wagon of the firm and it will soon be seen in service.

—Fancy India River oranges, tangerine oranges and grape fruit, all of the highest quality, are offered at Neuman Bros. 'Phone 760.

CHILDREN'S PLAY

"Christmas Coronation" is Given by the Pupils of the Irving School.

MISS PETRIE AS THE DIRECTOR.

Other Teachers Assist Principal In Producing the Play Before a Crowded House.

"A Christmas Coronation," was given by the children of the seventh grade of the Irving School, yesterday afternoon and evening, with great success. The large auditorium was taxed to its full capacity with parents and friends of the school and all thoroughly enjoyed the fine program under the general direction of Miss Genevieve Petrie, principal, assisted by the teachers of the school. The children of the seventh grade were assisted by other children of the school. Miss Elsie Knowlton was at the piano, while Charles L. Lewis conducted the singing. The entire program was uniformly good, but there were two or three special features, including a recitation, "The Christmas Saint," by Warner Neff; a song, "An Every Day Dolly," by Jessie Ross, a little tot; a recitation, "The Sailor Lad," by Lester Symonds.

Robert Wilson made a fine Santa Claus, while Vivian Dunn, as a fairy queen, took her part uncommonly well. The fan drill and the folk dance and drill by pupils of the fifth, sixth and seventh grades won much applause, and in fact the audience was generous in its applause of the whole entertainment. The proceeds will be used to purchase a stereopticon for the use of the school. The program follows:

Part I—Song, Happy Christmas, pupils of sixth grade; exercise, Christmas Greetings, pupils of 2-a grade; recitation, The Christmas Saint, Warner Neff; song, Star of the Orient, pupils of fifth grade; exercise, To Make Christmas, pupils of 1-a grade; exercise, The Happiest Time, pupils of 3-a grade; folk dance, We're a Merry Party, twelve girls of sixth and seventh grade.

Part II—Cast of characters in the play: Santa Claus, Robert Wilson; fairy queen, Vivian Dunn; Common Sense, Walter Marienschek; Ready Wit, Albert Martin; Grumble, Ralph Jacobs; Grouty, William Lindsay; Aunt Cloe, Mary Kotrba; Bill Bobstay, Jack Tar, sailors, Charles Lyles, Lawrence Marshall; Good Will, Erma G. Dobbins; Good Deeds, Catherine Endress; Little Sweetheart, Jessie Ross; sailor lads, pupils of 4-a and 4-b grades; sunshine fairies, pupils of 3d and 4th grades; white fairies, pupils of 4th grade; owls, pupils of 3d-b grade.

Opening of play: Chorus, Christmas Chimes, pupils seventh grade; song, Santa Claus is Coming, pupils 1-b grade; recitative song, Nothing Right, Grump and Grouty; action song, The Spickety Man, pupils of 2-b grade; chorus, That's What We Think in the Irving School, seventh grade; solo, An Every Day Dolly, Jessie Ross; solo, the Children's Ailments, Mary Kotrba; recitation, The Naughty Little Girl, Carrie Pennoyer; song, Pity Misfortune, white fairies; recitation, The Sailor Lad, Lester Symonds; sailor boy's chorus, For a Boy, sailors in costume; boys' chorus, The Owl, nine boys in costume; recitation and song, Good Will and Good Deeds; song, Sunshine, Sunshine Fairies with full chorus; coronation of Santa Claus, Vivian Dun; closing song and tableaux.

Ray Edwards' Funeral.

The funeral of Raymond L. Edwards, who died suddenly at Westfield, Sunday, will be held at his late home in the North Avenue Hotel, at 8:45 tonight. The service will be in charge of Rev. A. W. Hayes, of the Methodist church, and burial will be in Fairview cemetery, Westfield, tomorrow morning.

Owl Club's Successful Year.

The Owl Social Club held its final meeting for the year last night. The past year has been a successful one for the club, a feature being the two weeks' camping trip at Keansburg; also several dances, a strawride and the annual ball.

Announce Engagement.

Mrs. Lillian Montanye, of Stebbins place, announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Florence Montanye, to Bruce Baylis, of Oak Tree. The wedding will take place in the near future.

Coldest Night of the Winter.

Weather Prophet John Naegle reports that last night was the coldest one of the winter, the thermometer registering 17 degrees above zero. This morning there was a very heavy frost.

MISS VAN DEVENTER'S PUPILS ENJOY DANCE

Miss Frances VanDeventer's dancing classes, one for the little folks and another for children between the ages of thirteen and fifteen years of age, gave a delightful cotillon at the Park Club, yesterday afternoon. The affair was largely attended by parents and friends of the children, and all enjoyed the attractive program. The first part of the program was devoted to the dances for the little folks, after which the older children gave their dances.

There were many attractive figures by both the older and younger children, a feature being one called the "Aviation," which won hearty applause. After the cotillon there was a distribution of favors. The little ones received dolls, horns, caps, airships, while the older children were presented with fans, parasols, etc. There are about fifty in the class for little children while the class for older ones numbers about seventy. Mrs. Charles L. Lewis was the efficient pianist yesterday.

Miss VanDeventer has still a third class for older people which meets Friday night and they will have a cotillon at the Park Club on Friday night, with many attractive features.

COLEMAN REMANDED FOR FURTHER HEARING

When James Coleman, colored, was arraigned before Judge William G. DeMeza in the city court this morning for a hearing on the several charges of burglary against him, Chief Kiely requested that the prisoner be remanded until tomorrow morning as investigation in regard to the colored youth's connection with several of the crimes had not been completed and that he had to appear before the Somerset County Grand Jury today when that body considers the charge of burglary against Albert Vail, Edward Murphy and Edward Hamilton, all of whom are suspected of having been accomplices of Coleman on one or more burglaries. The request was granted.

Chief Kiely also stated that he had secured a partial confession from Coleman in which he implicated Murphy in several of the jobs done here during the summer. The most notable of these was the theft of a quantity of clothing from the tailor shop of Mrs. Robert Gardner on Watchung avenue. Since Coleman's arrest Murphy, who was under bail awaiting the action of the Somerset County Grand Jury, has been missing. There seems to be but little doubt that he will be found when wanted, however. The Somerset County Grand Jury was in session all day yesterday and may conclude its deliberations today or tomorrow. There is but little question that indictments will be found against all three boys.

WESTFIELD FAMILY RESCUED FROM FIRE

The home of Frank R. Baker, on South avenue, Westfield, was almost totally destroyed by fire between midnight and 1 o'clock this morning. The flames evidently originated about the furnace and had gained considerable headway before discovered by Policeman McNeery. The officer attempted to turn in an alarm from a nearby box but it would not work, and he was compelled to rouse up a family to reach a telephone. By the time the department arrived the entire lower floor of the house was ablaze. The loss is placed at $2,500.

McNeery returned to the residence after sending in the alarm and rescued Baker, his wife and his mother, who were sleeping soundly. The elder woman is almost blind and was gotten to safety with considerable difficulty. The inmates had only time to catch up a few articles of clothing and convenient valuables. No other contents were saved.

Mr. Baker's daughter, Mrs. Lyle Brittingham, left Westfield last night to meet her husband at Washington, D. C., the latter being employed on the Pacific coast. A telegram telling of the fire was handed her by the Pullman porter just before the Capitol was reached. When told that another train bound east was due in four minutes she donned kimono and slippers, made the change safely and reached Westfield at 6 o'clock this morning. The husband was coming on to spend the Christmas holidays at the Baker home.

The loss is partially covered by insurance.

TWP. LINE DISPUTE

Agreement to Have Boundaries Between Warren and N. P. Twps. Established.

CLIMAX OF A LONG FIGHT.

W. deLa R. Anderson, For N. P. Township, and A. A. Clark, For Warren, Appear Before Somerset County Tax Board.

Assemblyman-elect W. deLaR. Anderson, representing North Plainfield township, and former Congressman Alvah A. Clark, of Somerville, representing Warren township, appeared before the Somerset County Board of Taxation at Somerville yesterday to discuss the question of the dividing line between the two townships. Mr. Anderson informed the board that the line in question had been established by reputable surveyors. It was the opinion of the board that it had no jurisdiction in the matter outside of the duty of seeing that an equitable assessment of property was levied.

Mr. Clark finally consented to an official establishment of the line and application will be made to the court for the appointment of commissioners to do that work. This is exactly what the people of North Plainfield township have desired for several years and they feel as though they have won a victory.

The question of establishing a line dividing North Plainfield and Warren townships has been one of contention for several years and there was always more or less trouble in the matter of tax assessment, and the residents of North Plainfield township have been particularly aggressive in having a proper division made of the township lines. F. A. Dunham, civil engineer, was engaged to do the work sometime ago, and it was this that Mr. Anderson referred to at the meeting in Somerville yesterday.

MISSIONARY SOCIETY HONORED A MEMBER.

Current events in the shape of letters occupied the time of the Woman's Home Missionary Society of the First Baptist church at its meeting held yesterday afternoon in a Bible class room. The devotional service was led by Mrs. Morris Zook.

An interesting feature of the meeting was the presentation to Mrs. Susan T. Wilson of a "Friendship Calendar" for 1912. Mrs. Reuben Knox, the president, made the presentation in a charming little talk about the compilation of writers, who will thus be kept in mind during Mrs. Wilson's residence West, where she is planning to go in the early part of January. Mrs. B. J. Shreve followed with expressions of appreciation, and the "Mizpah" farewell was given in concert, preceding the singing of the hymn, "Blest Be the Tie That Binds."

An informal tea concluded the afternoon, Mrs. Zook presiding at the tea table and Mrs. Robert Lowry and Mrs. Arthur M. Harris assisting.

FINK IS SUPERVISOR OF UNION CO. ROADS

The Union Board of Freeholders, which was authorized under the law, to create a new office paying a salary of $1,2000 a year, has obtained permission to change the title of one of the present employes of the board and to broaden his duties to include those which would fall to the incumbent of the other office.

The State road aid act makes it mandatory for a county to have a supervisor of roads. He is given entire charge over the thoroughfares of the county. Union county has an inspector of roads, Joseph W. Fink, of Westfield, and while his duties embrace many of those of a road supervisor under the road aid measure, the appointment of another officer was permissible. Mr. Fink's salary is $1,200 a year.

The Board of Freeholders, following inquiry from the State regarding the failure of Union county to have a supervisor of roads, petitioned to have the title and duties of the present road inspector changed to fulfill the demands of the State.

Word has been received from State Road Commissioner Stevens stating that the wish of the freeholders has been granted.

Mr. Fink therefore, is supervisor of roads. There would have been several applicants for the new position had the freeholders followed out the letter of the State road act.

THE STRANGER TONIGHT, WILTON LACKAYE STARS

Wilton Lackaye will appear tonight at the Plainfield theatre in "The Stranger," a comedy drama in three acts, which has won the endorsement of every city in which it has played and has proven another popular success for Mr. Lackaye. In the character of "John Marshall" of the piece, he has given new and convincing proof of his versatility, playing with apparent ease and fine art the powerful and dramatic scenes of the play equally as well as the light comedy situations.

The story of the play is as far removed from the conventional comedy drama as it is possible to imagine. The author has combined an absorbing dramatic story with frequent touches of refreshing humor and shows Mr. Lackaye in stage art at its best.

The scenes of "The Stranger" are laid in Danville, Virginia, where "John Marshall" (Mr. Lackaye), a traction magnate from New York, formerly a poorhouse boy of Danville, who left there years before to win his way to independence and happiness, suddenly returns to his native city in quest of a franchise to operate an electric car line to Richmond, as a rival of the old-fashioned line owned by "Judge Carter," Danville's most influential citizen. The parentage of "Marshall" is supposed to be a matter of serious question, and the younger "Carter," who is in love with "Mary Warrington" (for whom "Marshall" also avows his devotion), by treachery and deceit seeks to convert this fact into a business and social asset. "Marshall," however, wins out in the end and succeeds in proving that the younger "Carter" is the illegitimate son instead of himself,—in this scene the acting is followed with breathless interest.

It is planned to make the organization a stock company for the Bijou, and after the run of "The Stranger," several plays by foreign authors will be produced, the American rights to which Mr. Lackaye acquired while abroad last summer.

L. S. Sire, the producer of the play, has furnished exceptionally fine stage settings for the piece, and surrounded the star with a cast of unusual merit.

Surrounding Mr. Lackaye is a cast containing the names of Frank Sheridan, A. S. Byron, Malcolm Williams, Howard Hall, Louis Thomas, William Frederic, Henry Hall, Harriet Brent, Ouida Bergere and Muriel Starr.

Lee; junior warden, William McD. Coriell; treasurer, Clarence Goss; secretary, Robert Kinney; trustees, L. B. Woolston, Robert A. Meeker and Charles A. MORE EXCITEMENT

Scotch Plains Keeps at High Tension Even Though Burglar Scare is Over.

CHIEF HENGLER THE HERO.

Reorganized Police Department Leads Posse to the Lair of Three Interlopers—Much Gun Play at Battle of the Fur Mill.

The people of Scotch Plains are so accustomed to excitement in some form or other that the bona fide residenter counts that day lost which produces no thrill. Years ago when the Jersey Central shifted its tracks over Fanwood way and deprived the villagers of their 5 o'clock mail train monotony breaker, they learned how to frame up blood-tingling episodes long before the advent of the trolley with its Saturday afternoon baseball riots, hot-coppered Sunday visitors and fly-by-night minstrel performances in Excelsior Hall. Cocking mains were the real thing for a decade or so, after which rival fire company elections kept all ages and sizes on tiptoe. These gave way the past fall to a burglary epidemic and when the usual crop of three or four a night gave out, it was up to somebody to get things agoing.

Al Hengler, the energetic new head and body of the Scotch Plains police force, leaped into the intermission gap Monday night. He was pounding the pavement on upper Park avenue shortly after milking time when he detected three men skulking along the North Plainfield shore of Green brook and sneak into the old fur mill just across the bridge. Al is a white ribboner and sleeps during the day instead of painting houses or digging gardens off duty like some cops we know, and had no reason to doubt that what he noticed was anything else but three life-size Raffleses or some other law breakers.

"Land sakes" said Chief Hengler to himself and the Stanbery barn, "here's where I show the taxpayers I ought to have a raise in pay. Now for it."

The bluecoat hit up third speed for the village business district, sounding an alarm as he cantered along. By the time he reached the liberty pole and backed up he had brought out fifteen citizens bearing bale hooks, barrel staves and horse pistols. An effort was made to get Landford Herman Frowery and his death-dealing blunderbuss but the Inn proprietor had just melded a thousand aces and could not be disturbed. Hengler made up for the loss by telephoning the North Plainfield police department to hurry out the reserve squad. Both of them were despatched on the run.

The order to march was passed along the line whereupon the posse headed for the fur mill. The building was surrounded and Chief Hengler in stentorian tones called upon the three ruffians to surrender. The only response came from a disturbed hoot owl. Again Hengler ordered the hidden men to emerge, adding that whatever they had to say would not be used against them. A nervous fingering of pistol triggers and perceptible "thump, thump," from somebody's cardiac organ alone broke the silence.

At this critical juncture "Teetie" Walpole startled everybody by declaring he saw a man crawling up the roof of the mill. All hands yelled at once to come down or suffer the consequences, but still no answer came. The next instant twelve guns barked as one and a torrent of lead rattled against the cupola. The first rank of skirmishers charged into the building before the smoke had lifted, clambered up the rickety stairs and poured through the scuttle to the roof in expectation of finding a corpse. None was found but so many bullet holes were noted in the shingles, the structure's interior will be flooded during the next shower. Somebody passed a remark about "Teetie" seeing an optician and only cooler heads prevented rebellion in the ranks of the Scotch Plains Lanciers.

Every nook and corner of the mill was poked into without revealing a trace of Hengler's quarry. The squad finally gave up the search and wended its way back to town, muttering scandalous things about the overzealousness of some people. Hengler pretended not to hear but its dollars to doughnuts he'll hand it back to a few of the talkers one of these fine nights.

"A cop's only human," he said to a sympathizer later as loud guffaws could be heard in the direction of the Inn's bar room, "and if any of these fellows think they can do better'n me, let 'em try it."

Al's resignation is not yet in the hands of the township committee and if it does get there, the Plains will have a merry row, because Mr. Hengler has a lot of friends who will stand by him.

HELD ON SUSPICION OF KILLING WITH AUTO.

Lying in the gutter in Halsey street, near Court street, Newark, the lifeless body of an unidentified man, about fifty-five years old, was found by Patrolmen Skillman and Deering, of the First Precinct Station, yesterday morning. It is believed the man was struck by an automobile, and two autoists are now under arrest.

The men under arrest are George P. McEvoy, twenty-seven years old, of 37 West Kinney street, and Russell De Vausney. Both are chauffeurs and former employes at the Newark Isolation Hospital. They deny being in any accident. When arrested they were riding in an automobile belonging to the Public Service Railway Company. De Vausney is a chauffeur for the corporation.

Deering and Skillman were on their way to the station-house when they saw the body of a man lying in the gutter about thirty feet in from Court street. At first they thought the man was under the influence of liquor. Deering leaned over and shook the form. He then saw a large cut on the forehead of the man and called to Skillman.

The man gave no signs of life, and while Skillman hurried to the station-house to summon an ambulance, Deering started to work over the body. When the City Hospital ambulance arrived the surgeon pronounced the man dead.

RACE CIRCUIT PLANS INTERESTING HORSEMEN.

Members of the Plainfield Driving and Riding Club are interested in the plans to organize a trotting circuit for next season which will include Westfield, Plainfield, New Brunswick, Flemington and Woodbridge. A meeting to discuss the plans is scheduled to be held about the middle of January. It is probable that the session will be held in New Brunswick.

The chief object of the promoters is to encourage rivalry among horsemens of the towns interested. Should the organization materialize there will be inter-town events and at the close of the season a suitable trophy will be awarded the club having the most points. It is also proposed to have a special prize to be awarded the most successful driver.

CENTENARIAN GETS A 'PHONE.

So People Can Call Her Up on 100th Birthday Anniversary.

Mrs. Priscilla A. Inslee, of George street, New Brunswick, who today is celebrating her 100th birthday anniversary, had a telephone installed in her home yesterday to that persons unable to go to see her may send their greetings by wire.

Mrs. Inslee says she has lived so long by obeying three rules: "Never worry,' forget nerves, and trust in God."

Mrs. Inslee has spent her whole life in Middlesex county. She was born on a farm near Woodbridge, where the family wove their own linen and cloth. She is possessed of all her faculties. She can eat mince pie and pork chops, and her breakfast often consists of pancakes and sausage and other things that give younger people indigestion. She is a member of the First Baptist church in New Brunswick, which she joined in 1837.

CHICAGO BLAZE ROUTS 1,000 HOTEL PATRONS.

Fire, which started early yesterday, wrecked the open Board of Trade building, one of the landmarks of the Loop district, Chicago, routed 1,000 guests in three big hotels and destroyed the records of the Chicago Federation of Labor and of a score of unions housed in the open board building. The monetary loss is estimated at $200,000.

After four hours' hard fighting, the fire department declared there was no further danger to adjoining buildings. A report that three furnace stokers had lost their lives was found to have been untrue, all the employes of the building being accounted for.

The flames had gained such a start when the first of the firemen arrived that there was little hope of saving the building, and the department devoted most of its efforts to arousing the guests of the Kaiserhof, the Stafford and the New Victoria hotels and to preventing a spread of the flames.

The open board, which is an organization for transactions in small lots of grain and provisions, was only a few days ago cut off from receiving quotations of the regular Board of Trade, having been charged with countenancing operations in puts and calls, a form of business prohibited by the State laws. It was announced the open board would be opened in the Traders' building next door.

ELECTION LAW CONFLICTS WITH CONVENTION RULES.

The attention of Republican State leaders is being directed to the fact that the privisions of the Geran election law with reference to the selection of delegates to the National conventions, conflict with the rules of the Republican National Committee. The question is whether the operation of the Geran law is likely to shut out the delegates to the Republican convention, which will be held during the week of June 18, 1912.

Rules of the Republican National Committee provide that no delegates will be recognized who are elected before the convention call is issued, or later than thirty days before the convention. The Geran election law provides that the primary election for the choice of delegates to the National Convention shall be held on the fourth Tuesday in May in each Presidential year, from 1 to 9 p. m.

FATHER CARROLL APOINTED.

Succeeds the Late Monsignor Kelly as Rector of Hoboken Church.

At the meeting of the diocesan consulters at the home of the Right Rev. John J. O'Connor, in South Orange, Monday, Father Eugene P. Carroll, rector of St. Bridget's church, Newark, was appointed to the irremovable rectorship of Our Lady of Grace church, Hoboken. The pastorate was made vacant by the death of Monsignor Charles Kelly.

Father Carroll was born in Morristown and was educated in St. Benedict's College and Seton Hall College, South Orange.

Prison for "Beauty Doctor."

Reno H. Krantz, generally referred to as the "Beauty Doctor," who recently was convicted under the "white slave" act, was sentenced in Newark Monday by Judge Martin to not less than three years nor more than seven years in State prison.

TEN YEARS FOR HEAD OF THE SHILOH CULT.

Portland, Me., Dec. 20.—Ten years in the federal prison at Atlanta, Ga., was the sentence imposed Monday upon Rev. Frank W. Sandford, leader of the Holy Ghost and Us Society of Shiloh for causing the deaths of six persons upon the yacht Coronet.

Sentence was pronounced by Judge Clarence Hale in the United States District Court. The Shiloh leader was sentenced on the first of six counts of the indictment, which charged manslaughter in causing the death of six of his followers by neglect in failing to provide the necessaries of life on the recently completed seven months' cruise along the shores of three continents.

The other five counts were continued without sentence on motion of District Attorney Whitehouse. The court proceedings occupied only six minutes, and were followed by immediate adjournment.

Sandford, who sat in the front row of the seats occupied by spectators, made no demonstration and did not address the court. When the district attorney moved that the five counts be continued, a suspicion of a smile spread over his face, but it was visible for only a moment, and again he assumed the appearance of passive interest.

PEAPACK MAN CAUGHT BY NEW YORK POSSE.

A man of giant build, who gave his name as Vernon Kragon, of Peapack, N. J., applied Monday at the home of Mrs. Robert Myers in Oneonta, for something to eat. He was given food and then attacked Mrs. Myers, who is sixty years old. Securing an axe she drove her assailant from the house.

A posse started in pursuit and Kragon was captured. For a time the crowd appeared ready to wreak quick vengeance on the prisoner. Kragon said he was twenty-three years old, a native of Peapack, and admitted he had served time in a New Jersey reformatory for shooting a man.

He was sentenced to three months in the penitentiary.

TWO CHILDREN DEAD AS RESULT OF BURNS.

Two children, each five years old, died Monday as the result of burns. The victims were Gertrude Zimmerman, of 706 South Park street, and Mabel Simon, of 432 Court street, Elizabeth.

The Simon girl received her burns a week ago. Monday Gertrude was playing about the store during the temporary absence of her mother, when her clothing caught fire.

It was while playing with matches that the Simon girl was burned. Both children expired in St. Elizabeth's Hospital.

"TAR PARTY" MEMBERS FINED $200 AND COSTS.

Lincoln Centre, Kan., Dec. 20.—Sherrill Clark and John Schaidt, under conviction for complicity in the tarring of Miss Mary Chamberlain, the Shady Bend school teacher, were each fined $200 and costs by Judge Grover yesterday.

The defendants will stand committed to jail until the fines and costs are paid.

COMMISSIONS TO WAGE STATE-WIDE MOSQUITO WAR.

With election of officers to serve during the second year of its activities, members of the North Jersey Mosquito Extermination League, at a meeting in the rooms of the Board of Health, Newark, Monday night, also named a committee to frame rules and regulations for the organization and to give the league a legal status.

At the same time unanimous approval was given to the draft of a bill which it is proposed to introduce at the coming session of the Legislature for the purpose of making the present campaign against the pest a regularly organized fight in each county, under State auspices.

The bill in question got a first reading in the form of a rough draft presented by the legislative committee. It was originally drawn by William B. Delaney, of Jersey City, and as read contained two amendments offered respectively by Spencer Miller and Edward Loomis, both of South Orange.

Before presenting the bill for legislative action it is proposed to secure its adoption by the local boards of health of every municipality in the State, and thus obtain the indorsement and co-operation of these bodies.

The essential features of the bill provide for the appointment in each county of a mosquito commission, to consist of three members, upon whom the work of directing the campaign against the mosquito nuisance in their respective counties will devolve. The appointments, it is provided, are to be made by the judges of the Court of Common Pleas and are to be for three years after the initial appointments, which shall be for one, two and three years, respectively.

The members of such commissions are to serve without compensation, but the funds necessary for the prosecution of their work are to be provided by requisition upon the boards of freeholders. It is further stipulated that the director of the State experiment station shall be an exofficio member of each county commission, and in this connection provision is made for the co-operation in the work between the State Board of Health, the State geologist and the State experiment station.

ORANGE-MONTCLAIR LINE OPEN.

Cars on New Trolley Spur Connect the Two Towns.

The boon of a trolley line connecting Orange and Montclair, which has been sought for many years, became a reality Monday when the first cars were sent over the new North Park street spur, connecting the Orange road line of Montclair and the Orange and Passaic Valley line, which runs across Orange, from Scotland road, near South Orange, to Bloomfield.

The new line passes the Montclair Normal School and follows Valley road nearly to Paterson. It is expected that extensions will be completed before many years, so that Orange and Paterson will be linked by a direct line and travellers between the two cities will not have to go around by way of Newark. The distance from Orange to Paterson is ten miles.

ALL THREE TAKEN BY PLAINFIELD ELKS

In full view of a large delegation of ardent rooters from the county seat last night, the local antlered pinners took three straight from the Elizabeth Elks bowling team in the first meeting between them in the Elks' League. By this winning Plainfield climbed into second place in the league standing, tying Rutherford. New York managed to hold first position by winning one of the series played with New Brunswick at that place.

For the first time this season, Stout was in the lineup for the locals and while not rolling anywhere near his old time form, managed to return scores equal to those of the regulars. Campbell and Nash bowled steady and consistently as indicated by their marks. The second game was the best rolled and it was not until the last pin had fallen that the winners were known. The difference of six pins was most too close for comfort so on the last game Plainfield took the lead and held it, winning by 75 pins.

Easy for Jeannette.

In what was scheduled to be an eight-round fight at the Southern Athletic Club, Memphis, Monday night, Joe Jeanette, of New York, knocked out Al Mitchell, of Oklahoma, in the fourth round with a right hand punch to the stomach, though Mitchell was heavier and taller than Jeannette. It was evident from the beginning that he was no match for the New Yorker. In the third round Mitchell was on the floor completely out when the bell rang bringing the round to a close. During the minute's rest his seconds worked hard to revive him and just barely got him in shape to respond for the fourth round. After that Jeannette with a well-directed punch to his mid section knocked him out completely.

Fred Clarke to Stay on Bench.

Fred Clarke, manager of the Pittsburgh National team, was in Chicago long enough yesterday to wager nineteen suits of cloths that he will not participate in a single baseball game as a player next season. Clarke declares that this means he will not step to the plate even as a pinch batsman. He called on President Murphy, of the Chicago club, and related to him the fact that he had bet eighteen suits. The West Side magnate suggested that Clarke would lose all of the clothes, whereupon Murphy was the nineteenth "victim."

Outlaws Break Out Again.

According to an announcement plans are being perfected for the establishment of a new "outlaw" baseball league, to have clubs in Brooklyn, Newark, Paterson, Reading, Washington, Baltimore and Richmond. Leagues protected by the National Commission have teams in all of these cities. The new organization is a revival of the "outlaw" Union League, which had a brief existance in 1908, and is to be called the Atlantic League.

ENGINEER ON TRIAL FOR MANSLAUGHTER

William F. Hartmann, of Metuchen, engineer of the Central Railroad flier which ran down and killed three persons at the Elizabeth avenue crossing of the Long Branch division in Elizabeth, on the night of April 16 last, is on trial in the Court of Quarter Sessions on a charge of manslaughter. He is being tried on an indictment brought in by the May grand jury charging him with being responsible for the death of Mrs. Ann Eliza Stone. Mrs. Stone's daughter, Mrs. Hannah Cosgrove Colyer, and Edward Saunders, a baggage master, also met death under Hartmann's train on the night in question.

Assistant Prosecutor Walter L. Hetfield, in opening the case for the State, told of the events leading up to the death of Mrs. Stone. He said that a southbound local train had just stopped at the Elizabeth avenue station and Mrs. Stone, with others, was about to board it when a fast northbound train, known as the Lakewood Express, of which Hartmann was the engineer, came along and struck her. She was killed instantly.

We will show, said Mr. Hetfield, "that Hartmann's action in running his train past the local on a northbound track was one of negligence and carelessness. He did not attempt to stop until the express was between 400 and 500 feet from the local. He violated one of the most important rules of the company, which prohibits one train to pass another at a station unless there are safety applances bewteen the tracks."

Samuel Schleimer, of New Brunswick, who has been retained to defend Hartmann by the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, admitted the primary facts of the case. He admitted that Mrs. Stone was killed by a train and that Hartmann was the engineer of the train which caused her death, without argument. After the admission of these facts by the defense, the State dismissed witnesses who had been produced to prove them.

The defense, according to a statement made by Mr. Schleimer, will be that the engineer was acquitted by the coroner's jury; that the engineer was not warned that the local was standing at the station, and that no provision was made by the railroad company for the protection of passengers at the Elizabeth avenue station.

ASKS $10,000 FOR BEING ASPHYXIATED

Asking $100,000 damages from the Public Service Gas Company, Anton and Antonia Sturma, of Bound Brook, went before a jury in Judge Lloyd's court at New Brunswick, yesterday, and declared that they had been nearly killed by a leaky gas pipe. They demanded compensation for the suffering they underwent and from the effects of which they testified they are still suffering.

The case is an unusual one, and brought out a notable display of legal talent and a consequent display of legal acumen. Senator George S. Silzer and John A. Coan appeared for the plaintiffs, while for the defendant company appeared Howard MacSherry, formerly of New Brunswick; L. S. Hoffman and Clifford I. Voorhees.

There were two separate suits, tried together. Mrs. Antonia Sturma is suing for the injuries she claims to have received from partial asphyxiation. Anton Sturma, her husband, claims damages for his injuies and for the loss of his wife's services while she was suffering from the attack.

LAWMAKERS' PLAN

would not be surprising if he were made chairman of this committee. Some of the holdover Assemblymen who will be given some of the more important committee places are: White, of Burlington; Coles, of Camden; McAllister, of Cumberland; Adams, of Mercer; Pikaart, of Passaic. Essex county, with its solid Republican delegation, will doubtless claim some of the important committee places.

Several committees in each house such as the judiciary, corporations, municipal corporations, and revision of laws, have committee clerks, and this clerk is usually named by the chairman of the committee, so that the chairmanship of these commitees is a post of considerable importance.

REV. DR. POCKMAN TO PREACH 900TH SERMON.

The Sunday school will assemble in the chapel and march to the church in a body, where they will assist in the Christmas.

GETTING MARRIED PROVES PROFITABLE AS A BUSINESS.

New York, Dec. 20.—A bridegroom, very nervous, and a bride, very diffident, have been getting married frequently of late in various parts of the city, to the pecuniary embarrassment of clergymen and their own advantage.

The Rev. W. S. Kenney, of 33 West Twenty-sixth street, complained yesterday that he married "Mr. and Mrs. Keller," receiving in payment for the $10 fee a check for payment on the Greenwich Bank. He gave the bridegroom $10 in real money and the check came back marked "No account."

The police are working on the basis that "Mr. and Mrs. Keller have been married twenty-two times in Manhattan, eleven times in the Bronx, three or four times in Staten Island, a few in Queens and thirty-five times in the borough of churches making a total of seventy-five weddings.

"Old Wives for New."

A letter in which he advised his daughter to read "Old Wives for New" and to discover in the principal character of that book a depiction of her mother was part of the testimony submitted against Alexander L. Pach before Vice Chancellor Stevenson yesterday in Jersey City when a suit brought by Mrs. Pach for separate maintenance was tried. Mr. Pach is associated. with Pach Brothers, at No. 935 Broadway.

HAVE THEIR SHROUDS READY.

In an account of the death, at the age of 104, of Lucy Hickey at Gloucester there appeared the interesting item, that she was buried in a shroud which she made for herself many years ago. "This may look strange to most people," said a resident of the East Side, "but not to the old-fashioned Jews. I am sure that if you go through any of the tenement houses in this part of the city you will find in the majority of homes the shrouds of all men and women who are married. It is an old custom to have the grave garments ready, and with some of the people it is considered a shame not to be properly provided in case of death. The garments are usually of fine texture and invariably 'hand sewed.'"—New York Tribune.

TROLLEYMEN'S WAGES INCREASED ON JAN. 1

A Christmas announcement of an increase in wages was made to the motormen and conductors of Public Service Railway today. The new scale will go into effect January 1 and will benefit every platform man in the company's employ. Hereafter new employes and those who have been working less than one year will receive twenty-three cents per hour; for those employed more than one year and less than two years the pay will be twenty-four cents per hour, and all who have been in the company's service more than two years will receive twenty-five cents an hour. The new scale of wages will mean an additional outlay to the company of about $125,000 per year.

This is the third increase in wages for motormen and conductors voluntarily made by Public Service within two years. In December, 1909, the first year men were receiving twenty cents an hour, a continuous service of five years was necessary before this rate was raised to twenty-two cents and not until after ten years had passed was the pay made twenty-three cents an hour under the old schedule. Beginning January 1 the one year men will be getting what used to be paid only to the ten year veterans and the maximum pay of twenty-five cents will be given to every platform man upon the completion of two instead of ten years of service. The difference btween the old and the proposed rates is the result of successive raises effective January, 1910, January, 1911, and the coming new year.

To provide the extra amount needed to meet the increased payroll Public Service will have to turn over to the 2500 or so employes the receipts from approximately 2,500,000 passengers each year not including any who ride on transfers.

ASK LEGISLATURE FOR APPROPRIATION

Looking to legislation to make possible the purchase of a tract of land at Washington's Crossing and the erection of a monument there by the time of the P. O. S. of A. National Convention at Trenton in 1913, the committee of fifty named by John Franklin Fort, while Governor, for such a purpose, will meet December 30. The meeting will be in the rooms of P. O. S. of A. on North Broad street, Trenton, and a bill will be drawn which will be introduced in the Legislature asking for an appropriation sufficient to cover the cost of land and the erection of a suitable monument to be unveiled during the national session in Trenton in September, 1913.

L. V. Silver, a prominent member of the organization, is much interested in the movement and in conference with Governor Wilson, has been assured of the endorsement of the chief executive to the proposition.

It has not been decided just what sum the Legislature will be asked to appropriate for the purchase of the land and the erection of a monument, but this will very likely to decided upon at the coming meeting of the committee.

The Trenton Chamber of Commerce will have prepared and sent broadcast placards announcing that the national convention of the P. O. S. of A. will be held there and also pamphlets telling of Trenton.

ELOPEMENT TO HOBOKEN ENDS IN AN ANNULMENT.

The elopement of seventeen-year-old Hannah Gens and Milton Harold Levy, driver of racing automobiles, to Justice of the Peace Waring's in Hoboken in November, 1910, where they were married at 11 o'clock at night, was recited by the bride before Justice Davis in the Supreme Court in New York yesterday, in her father's action to annul the marriage. Mrs. Levy's romance was dissolved and she's Hannah Gens again.

Let Costly Gowns Burn.

Sacrificing $700 worth of costly gowns to save the house from destruction, Mrs. Thomas Winans, one of Trenton's most prominent women, confined a fire at her home in Trenton yesterday to the closet of her room until the arrival of the firemen. When she discovered the blaze Mrs. Winans at once closed the door of the closet and then sent in an alarm. All of her clothing, including many costly gowns and furs, were burned, but little damage was done to the room.

Good—But Not Too Good.

Freddie's mother was very much pleased when she told him that the kind man who lived across the street thought him such a good little boy that he intended to remember him at Christmas.

"I hope, ma," replied Freddie, a shade of doubt clouding his face, "he doesn't think I'm such a good boy that I don't like Indian stories."

JAMES WHITE RETIRES FROM G.O.P. COMMITTEE

Resolutions of appreciation of the services rendered by James White, of Elizabeth, as a member of the Republican County Committee were adopted at the regular meeting of the committee Monday night in the headquarters in the Dix building, Elizabeth.

Mr. White was a member of the committee for twenty-two years, during a greater part of which time he was sergeant-at-arms. He was chairman of the Elizabeth City Central Committee for a number of years, his successor having been chosen in September.

Mr. White resigned from both committees, as he is now under civil service. He is assistant postmaster, and it is only within the last year that assistant postmasters were placed in the civil service class. The resolutions, elaborately arranged in bound form, were presented to Mr. White.

The committee endorsed Robert Senkowsky, of the Twelfth ward, Elizabeth, for doorkeeper of the House of Assembly. Mr. Senkowsky, who is the proprietor of a barber shop in West Grand street, Elizabeth, was doorkeeper under the Republican House in 1910.

There was a large attendance at the meeting, and a general discussion took place on the political outlook. Confidence was expressed from the members from all sections of the county that Union county is safely in the Republican column for the Presidential year.

The resolutions on Mr. White's retirement follow:

"Whereas, The retirement of James White as a member of the Union County Republican Committee is made necessary by the regulations of the United States Civil Service Commission governing the office of Assistant Postmaster of the city of Elizabeth, which he now occupies; and

"Whereas, He has been a valued member of this committee for twenty-two years, during which time he has had many of its offices; and

"Whereas, As a result of his wide and practical experience he brought to the service of this committee tireless energy, excellent judgment and faithfulness to the political party whose cause he has espoused since early manhood; therefore be it

"Resolved, That we, the members of the Union County Republican Committee, in regular meeting assembled, receive the announcement of his retirement with sincere regret;

"Resolved, That we extend to Mr. White our sincere thanks and expressions of deep appreciation for his long and continued service rendered the committee, and his unselfish, unfailing and unstinted loyalty to the Republican party; and be it further

"Resolved, That these resolutions be spread in full upon the minutes of the committee; that a copy be suitably engrossed and presented to Mr. White; and be it further

"Resolved, That we extend to Mr. White and the members of his family our sincere best wishes for his continued health and increasing prosperity.

"JAMES C. CALVERT,
"HAMILTON F. KEAN,
"HERBERT BUXTON,

GOVERNOR WILSON NOT CURBING TRUSTS

"Fabulous capitalization of corporations" is the trouble with business, according to F. W. Kelsay, a business man and economic student, of Orange, who Monday addressed the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, which is investigating the trust problem. The profit of millions, he said, went into the hands of promoters.

"Some call these promoters 'captains of industry;' I call them 'captains of piracy,'" said Mr. Kelsay. He advocated a stricter regulation of corporations than is in vogue in most states.

Mr. Kelsay said he had suggested to both former Governor Fort and Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey that New Jersey, being the home for so many trusts which were causing trouble, should make its corporation laws more strict. He quoted Governor Wilson as saying "Yes."

"But so far he has done nothing," added Mr. Kelsay.

STRUCK BY RIFLE BALL INTENDED FOR SPARROW.

While he was shooting sparrows Monday, Peter Herenia, of Wallington, accidently struck Carlo Brocka, of the same place, with a rifle shot. Brocka is in St. Mary's Hospital, Passaic, with slim chances of recovery, and Herenia is locked up in the Hackensack jail, where he will be held pending the outcome of Brocka's injuries.

Brocka was driving a wagon across the Second street bridge at the time he was shot. Constable Chrystline was in front of Cook's Hotel, when the wagon came up Wallington avenue. He was attracted to the rig by the driver, who was lying down on the shafts. He stopped the horse and carried Brocka into Dorbin's drug store nearby. A physician was summoned and Brocka was taken to the hospital.

Brocka explained to Mr. Chrystline how the shooting occurred, and the constable started out to find Herenia. He caught him in a strip of woods, where he wandered after shooting Brocka. He was unaware of what he had done, and became excited when told. Chrystline took him back to the drug store, where Brocka identified him.

FIGHTS ON AGAINST ELIZABETH LICENSES.

Several Elizabeth saloon proprietors who have been under police ban will apply for renewal of license at a meeting of the Board of Excise Tuesday night.

Anton Belesky will apply for a license to conduct the place at 82 Bond street, of which Anthony Patrick was proprietor for several years. Patrick was placed on trial last May, charged with allowing and encouraging gambling in the place and violating excise regulations. He was found guilty, fined $500 and his license revoked.

George Ferrance, proprietor of a saloon at 500 Bayway, will apply for a renewal of license. He was indicted by the October Grand Jury on a charge of Sunday selling, but has not been tried. Soon after the returning of the true bill he was summoned to appear before the Excise Board and show cause why his license should not be revoked on police charges of Sunday selling. His counsel, William R. Wilson, contends that the board should not take action before his client had stood trial in the courts and has obtained two postponements pending action on the indictment.

INTRODUCER OF ZITHER INTO U. S. IS DEAD, AGED 82.

John William Lieb, the first man to bring the zither into general use in the United States, and an accomplished musician, died at his home, 22 Chestnut street, Newark, Monday, at the age of eighty-two years. Death was due to general debility.

Mr. Lieb had beed a resident of Newark since 1850, and was well known in German musical and social circles. He was born at Wurttemburg, Germany, April 23, 1829, and came to this country in 1847, residing in New York city until he moved to Newark. He was a charter member of the New York Turn Verein and one of the first members of the Eintracht Society, Newark, when it was a singing society. He was also an early member of the Newark Turn Verein.

For a number of years Mr. Lieb was a member of a well-known quartet that had a wide acquaintance in various German societies. As the first player of the zither in this country Mr. Lieb gained considerable distinction in musical circles.

ELIZABETH SOCIALISTS TO ELECT COMMITTEES.

Elizabeth Socialists will hold an adjourned meeting in their headquarters, Proctor's Broad Street theatre building, tonight, when several committees will be elected to serve the coming year.

The party believes that better results are obtained by having the committees elected, rather than appointed by the presiding officer.

MARY'S CAKE.

Use one pound and a half of flour, half a pound of sugar, two ounces of candied peel, three-quarters of a pound of currants and raisins mixed, a quarter of a pound of butter, a quarter of a pound of lard, three eggs, half a pint of milk, one teaspoonful and a half of baking powder.

Rub the butter and lard into the flour, add the dry ingredients, lastly the well-beaten eggs and the milk. Beat all thoroughly and bake about two hours.

Shocking Discord.

"There is one discordant note in your garden, my dear madam," remarked the aesthetic landscape architect.

"What is that?" asked the lady much alarmed.

"I notice," he replied, with a shudder, "that you have dogwood planted near some pussy-willows."—Baltimore American.

Renaming Indians.

Some years ago in order to make their inheritance of land more simple and secure our government commissioned Dr. Charles A. Eastman, a Sioux Indian, to rename more than 15,000 Sioux with their family names. The task was a tremendous one and full of difficulties. Where possible Dr. Eastman kept the original Sioux name of some member of a family, as in bestowing the name "Matoska," meaning "White Bear," on the family of that chief. Sometimes the combination of wife's name and husband's name has produced a musical result, such as "Winona Otana." The favorite name for women means "she who has a beautiful home," which Dr. Eastman has Anglicized in the patronymic "Goodhouse." But by far the hardest task was in finding new names for the absurdities of Indian nomenclature. "Bobtailed Coyote" was a young Indian who has come to prefer himself as "Robert T. Wolf." After a long struggle with "Rotten Pumpkin" Dr. Eastman at last recorded the owner of the name on the tribal records under the noncommittal title of "Robert Pumpian."

Sherlock Holmes' Original.

Sir A. Conan Doyle often recounted incidents regarding Dr. Joseph Bell, the distinguished Scottish surgeon from whom his character of Sherlock Holmes was drawn. One of the most remarkable was this:

Dr. Bell was lecturing to his class in surgery, of which Doyle was one, when in regard to the subject he remarked:

"Of course this man has been a soldier in a highland regiment and probably a bandsman."

The man had the soldier's swagger, but was too short to be anything but a bandsman, the doctor explained. The man vehemently denied this and said he was a shoemaker. Dr. Bell, still confident that his powers of reasoning and deduction had not led him astray, had the man stripped and on the left side of his chest found a little blue "D" branded on the skin. The doctor then declared to his class:

"This man was a deserter. This is the way they were marked in the Crimean days, though it is not permitted now."

When the Duke Scrubbed.

When the Duke of Coburg-Gotha was a very young royal highness he was taken by his mother, the Duchess of Albany, to Mr. Wesley's school for boys. Before taking in the royal youngster the master stipulated that the new pupil must conform to all the rules. This was agreed.

One day his royal highness upset a bottle of ink on the floor. "Get a bucket of water and wipe it up," said the master.

"But," objected his royal highness, "you don't mean me to scrub it up, do you?"

"Yes, indeed."

"But you must forget my grandmother is the queen?"

"On the contrary," said the master, "I remember it very well. Get the water."

Whereupon his royal highness the Duke of Coburg-Gotha scrubbed.—Chicago Tribune.

How the Dust Gets In.

When the barometer falls the air around expands into a larger volume, and the air inside the bookcase, the clothes closet and the cupboard also expands and forces itself out at every minute crevice. When the barometer rises again the air inside the cupboard, as well as outside, condenses and shrinks and the air is forced back into the cupboard to equalize the pressure, and along with the air in goes the dust. The smaller the crevice the stronger the jet of air, the farther goes the dirt. Witness the dirt tracks so often seen in imperfectly framed engravings or photographs. Remember, whenever you see the barometer rising, that an additional charge of dust is entering your cupboard and bureau drawers.

Keeping It Dark.

The black sheep of the Warywalk family had distinguished himself again.

"This is the last straw," groaned his respectable brother. "I'm goin' to 'ave it put in the papers that I've changed my name from Warywalk to Wobbleway, cos of my brother's disgracin' the name. I'll 'ave it printed on 'andbills an' distributed by the thousand. I'm determined nobody shall suspect that I'm related to 'im."—London Ideas.

Vigilant and Speedy.

"There's nothing slow about Jones."

"I guess you never loaned him money."

"Oh, yes I have. That's what made me speak that way. I loaned him $10 six months ago and I haven't been able to catch him since."—Boston Transcript.

Force of Character.

"I thought your wife forbade you to marry again when she died?"

"So she did, but now I'm going to show her who is master in this house."—London Opinion.

The Laziest Man.

"Went to bed at 8 o'clock last night."

"Why so early?"

"My shoe came untied, and I thought I'd save the trouble of tying it again."—Pittsburgh Post.

Fretfulness.

Do not give way to fretfulness. It takes the fragrance out of life and leaves only weeds where a cheerful disposition would cause flowers to bloom.

Dost thou love life? Then do not squander time, for time is the stuff life is made of.—Benjamin Franklin.

POPE EXPRESSES HIS LOVE FOR AMERICA

Rome, Dec. 20.—The Pope yesterday received Cardinal O'Connell in farewell audience, at which he again expressed his love for America and assured the cardinal that he was sure he had done the wisest thing for Catholicism in America by granting a larger number of cardinals to that country.

He said he knew the good work done by the Federation of Catholic Societies, of which he heartily approved. He has accounts of the work of the federation read to him from the Pilot, which, he said, had become an authoritative journal in Rome and was read by many of the cardinals, among them Cardinal Martinelli, prefect of the Congregation of Rites and chamberlain of the Sacred College.

The Pontiff said that the last pastoral letter of Cardinal O'Connell was admirable. He said also that it must be a pleasure to work in a country where the relations between all parties and sects were so good.

The Pope inquired as to Cardinal O'Connell's plans and wished him health, peace and success. He invited him to return soon to the Eternal City and imparted the apostolic blessing to himself and the faithful in his diocese.

Cardinal O'Connell then visited Cardinal Merry del Val, with whom he stayed about half an hour conferring on certain questions connected with the diocese of Boston and receiving some words of advice. Cardinal Merry del Val expressed his great regret at the departure of the American cardinal, but remarked that Cardinal O'Connell had had but little rest during his sojourn. He wished him the compliments of the season and hoped to see him again shortly.

NEWSBOY SAVES AGED MAN AT RISK OF LIFE.

George Hackett, aged eighty-nine years, of 580 Madison avenue, was run down in Broad street, Elizabeth, last night by a horse and wagon owned by P. Bauman, a Spring street butcher, and said to have been driven by John McCarthy, of Bond street. Only for the heroic action of Louis Barr, a newsboy, he would have been killed. Barr, at the risk of his own life, dragged the old man to safety just in time to prevent the horse from trampling on his head. The aged victim was then taken to a nearby office and sent home in a cab.

A physician was summoned and it was found necessary to take several stitches in Mr. Hackett's arm, where a long gash had been made by the tire of the wagon. It is feared that his hip is broken.

Mr. Hackett has been a resident of Elizabeth for fifty years and for more than forty years was master car builder for the Central Railroad of New Jersey.

REJOICES BECAUSE PRICE OF BREW ISN'T RAISED.

Elizabeth has 275 saloons, which is prima facie evidence, as the lawyers says, that there are a dozen or so beer drinkers in the city. And this dozen or so—with the accent on the so—are giving praise today, following the announcement that, despite the increased cost of production, the ambrosial amber fluid, which is slang for "brew," will remain at a nickel, 5 cents, the glass, schooner, shell, scoop, Fifth avenue or whatever receptacle may be preferred.

It had been feared that beer, along with the other "necessities of life," would either go up in price or down in size, but the Elizabeth saloonkeepers and brewery officials have quieted all such dread fears and Elizabeth's beer-drinking element is breathing — and drinking — easily again.

HYDRANT INSPECTORS IN ELIZABETH APPOINTED.

Four hydrant inspectors for the winter were appointed last night by the Elizabeth Board of Fire Commissioners. They are: John Lavin, first district; William Kerr, second district; John J. McKenna, third district, and John Macauley, fourth district. All are call men in the department. Nine bids for a motor truck and motor fire engine, to be installed in the two new firehouses now being built, were received. Eleven bids were expected. To permit the other firms to submit bids action was delayed.

Plan For State Convention.

Plans for a State convention are being made by the men's clubs and brotherhoods of the Presbyterian churches. The sessions will be held in the Westminster church, Elizabeth, February 22. Following are the chairmen of committees: Executive, Charles Rollinson; music, Thomas Wilson; reception, J. B. Noe; ushers, D. B. Bauermann; dinner, N. M. Corbet, and publicity, J. A. Frazer.

Harvard-Yale Track Meet Off.

The Harvard track team will not meet Dartmouth and Yale next spring in dual contests, as in former years. There will be no Southern trip, and the winter carnival will be held in Cambridge instead of in Boston, as last year.

Christmas Club Conditions

You can't go wrong joining this club when we sell the pianos on such conditions as these:

1. Every instrument is guaranteed without reserve for five years. There isn't an "if this" or an "if that" in the guarantee—just a straightout guarantee as strong as we know how to make it in writing.
2. If, after thirty days' trial, you find the piano to be unsatisfactory we will give you your money back.
3. If the piano is satisfactory after 30 days' use, the Club Member has eleven more months in which to satisfy himself as to the character of the piano. If it does not then prove to be everything that he expects he has the privilege of exchanging it without one penny's loss for any other instrument of equal or greater value that we sell (and we sell many different representative makes).
4. A beautiful stool to match the piano and cover is included without extra cost.
5. There will be no charge for drayage.
6. The piano will be tuned the first year without charge.

The pianos we secured for this Christmas Club are worthy a place in any man's home—good substantial pianos in which the real value is put on the inside rather than in fancy cases with a lot of ornamentation on them—pianos that come from one of the best factories in this country, supervised by the famous

Christmas Club Pianos Easy to Buy

Just think of it—$5 down—hardly enough to pay the cartage—one-fourth the amount that would be asked you in any piano house in the country on the purchase of an instrument of equally high character, and then only $1.50 a week to pay thereafter, with no charge for cartage, and no charge for the first year's tuning, with privilege of returning the piano within thirty days, or exchanging it within one year, if in any way you are dissatisfied with your bargain.

The Joys of Christmas Time

By Kennett Harris

Hark! the merry chimes are warning us that this is Christmas morning,
And it's time that we were rising,
though the hour isn't late.
Still, the kidlets will be flocking, each
to overhaul his stocking,
And there's scads of things we've got to do that really cannot wait.
Yet, before we kick the clothes off (quite determined not to doze off),
Let's indulge in dreamy musing on this joyous Christmastide;
Let us, while the bells are pealing, get up some real Christmas feeling,
Fill ourselves with sweet emotions that are not quite cut and dried.
True, the minutes fast are gliding, but, consarn 'em, let 'em glide.

Think of these long weeks of waiting, all the glad anticipating
Of the gay and festive season that at last, at last is here;
Never resting, never stopping in our mad career of shopping,
Searching over the ideal, not too cheap and not too dear;
Crushed and elbowed in the reeking crowds, that like ourselves are seeking
Just the very thing of all things that their loved ones most desired.
Limp and draggled then emerging from the pushing, struggling, surging
Mob, with parcels overladen, reaching home at last, dog tired.
Those experiences may be best described as "most all-fired."

Yet no antiquated stoic showed endurance more heroic
Than we've manifested through the weary ordeal of that time;
We have stood the stress of barter with the courage of a martyr;
Now we find sweet compensation
list'ning to the Christmas chime,
Whose clear cadence, soft and mellow, seems to whisper to a fellow
That the worst is nearly over, that we soon may breathe again,
Soon may find surcease of sorrow, and that, maybe by tomorrow
Or the next day, may be lifted something of this mental strain,
That a blessed sense of rest may soothe the tissues of our brain.

We have done with haste and flurry, no occasion now to worry,
Lest some sensitive relation may have been quite overlooked.
All the lists of names are checked and all the walls with green are decked, and
Now within a few short hours the Christmas dinner will be cooked.
Hail to Christmas! happy season! There is some substantial reason
To be gleeful at thy advent—the beginning of the end.
As thou comest wreathed with holly, we can certainly be jolly,
Welcome thee with feast and wassail, and in general unbend,
For we know that we have spent for thee the last cent we can spend!

Now the door bell will cease ringing to the people who were bringing An endless string of packages from morn to dewy eve;
We no longer will be running to conceal those things with cunning,
And we'll lose our wonted air of having something up our sleeve.
There will be a deuced litter, when the gewgaws gleam and glitter,
Of waste paper, string and cotton, from the kitchen to the hall;
But, with consciences elastic, we will grow enthusiastic
And "wonder how they guessed," as on the donors' necks we fall,
Looking blissful over dewdads that we didn't want at all.

Ah, this blessed thing of giving! It is half the joy of living
To watch the looks of gratitude and pleasure and surprise
That, at least to outward seeming, are upon loved faces beaming—
As the loved one opens his parcel and digs out his gaudy ties.
And the gentle wife and mother her emotion tries to smother
When conducted by her husband, to some secret corner, where,
As a proof of fond affection, he has hid from her detection,
His gift to her, a cozy, costly, well-upholstered chair
(Of whose comforts, in the future, you may bet he'll get his share).

Now this Christmas spirit moves us to sense that it behoves us
To keep Poverty's bare platter and fill Destitution's cup.
Bring turk and pie and gladness to the homes of empty sadness!
To help out sweet Christmas charity who would not loosen up?
But it's highly aggravating not to say exasperating,
When we've given most nobly and without thought of stint,
To find out, as we expected, that the modest are neglected
And our princely benefaction hasn't found its way to print.
(Certainly we didn't ask it, but a man might take a hint).

But away with sad reflection! This is no time for dejection.
Merry Christmas, happy Christmas, as we said, has come at last!
All the many tribulations, all the trials and vexations
That have crowded thick upon us for the last six weeks, are past,
Not a protest shall be uttered, though the house with toys is cluttered
And the kids are all parading to the sound of horn and drum,
Lusty lung and larynx voicing the extent of their rejoicing.
We will have to stand the racket now that Christmas day is come.
(Later tone our nervous system at some sanitarium).

Thank the Giver if we're able to sit
'round a well-spread table,
Where the plump white-bosomed turkey sheds its savor through the room,
And pudding comes on smoking, and
there's no end to the joking,
And no heart that harbors malice
and no mind o'ercast with gloom,
Let us be profoundly grateful that we have at least a plateful,
Grateful for the pepsin tablets that correct our Christmas cheer;
Hold it as among our mercies if there's coin left in our purses,
Be thankful for those dear to us and those who hold us dear.
(And most supremely thankful Christmas comes but once a year).

CHRISTMAS IS A PROPHECY

It Forecasts the Perfect Social Conditions Which Will Fulfill the Promises of Christ.

Christmas is not only a fact commemorating the one sacred festival in the world's calendar, but the glorious prophecy of a coming day, surpassing all the brightest social dreams that have ever visited the most advanced human mind. He sprang, on His human nature side, from kings and peasants, from saints and sinners. He is yet to lift every peasant to the kingliest throne of character and transform the chief of sinners into the holiest of saints. He allied Himself with poverty and the common people. He is yet to banish poverty with all its ills, from the world, and to give to common humanity their rightful sovereignty. He worked with His hands for His daily bread. He is yet to dignify and glorify in the thought of mankind all honest toil. He honored woman with His sympathetic and appreciative regard. He is yet to relieve her from every form of serfdom created by the past ages. He took little children in His arms and blessed them. He is yet to make blessed the child life in every welcoming home. He gave His peace to His distracted disciples. He is yet to make wars cease unto the end of the earth. He united His brethren with Himself and His Father in one unbroken oneness. He is yet to make every man a brother to his fellow-man and at one with his Father in Heaven.

SECOND BODY OF FIRE VICTIMS FOUND IN RUINS.

Workmen employed in removing the debris of the ruins of the United States Express stables, at Jersey City, which were destroyed by fire, yesterday found the body of William Williams, the aged engineer, who was thought to have been burned to death in the big building. Much to the surprise of those who have been watching the removal of the several hundred carcasses of horses the body of Williams was not charred, and the features of the dead man were recognizable. The body was identified by Mrs. Timothy Collins, of 155 Pavonia avenue, Jersey City, with whom Williams boarded.

Apparently Williams had been overcome by smoke in the engine-room. The body was protected from the falling blazing timbers by a huge pillar. Both hands were clapsed about his breast. Patrolman Sheehy sent the body to Burn's undertaking establishment, 198 Pavonia avenue.

JERSEY OYSTERMEN SAY "FLOATERS" ARE ALL RIGHT.

Trenton, Dec. 20.—Prompted by rumors that Dr. Wiley, of the National Pure Food Department, would revive his order of a year ago against "floating" oysters the State Board of Health yesterday gave out a statement that the waters of Maurice River are not polluted and that the oysters taken therefrom are not unhealthy.

The oystermen of the State will confer here today to seek to prevent the revival of the "floating" order. The floating of oysters is a process of having them drink water to make them plump.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the German Reformed church will meet tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock at Mrs. Kaspar's home, 41 Harrison street, the borough.

PLAINFIELD HIGH GIRLS DEFEAT BETSYTOWN

In a fast and interesting game that was witnessed by a record breaking crowd of basketball fans, the girls' team representing the Plainfield High School traveled down to Elizabeth yesterday afternoon and took the Elizabeth High School girls into camp by the score of 6-3.

Not once during the forty minutes of play was there a dull moment as can be realized from the small scores made by both teams. The winning for the local girls is credited entirely to Miss Steward, the efficient left forward, who registered the six points for her team. Miss Adelberg, right forward of the Elizabeth team, scored the three points for her team.

All the players of both teams are deserving of credit, having put up an excellent game.

Won't Be Coroner.

Newton, N. J., Dec. 20.—Arthur N. Roe, of Branchville, the first nominee of the prohibition party ever elected to office in this county, will not accept the position of coroner, to which he was chosen in November. He said yesterday he would not qualify, because he had not looked upon a corpse in forty years and could not under any circumstances bring himself to look upon the body of a human being which had been mangled.

The first was in Somerville, and the other his present charge in Haddonfield. Mr. Smith is a graduate of Brown University and of Newton Theological Seminary. HUBBY LOOKED LIKE BULLDOG, SHE SAID.

Vice Chancellor Stevenson, sitting in the Court of Chancery at Jersey City, yesterday, granted to Mrs. Johanna Pach, of Irvington, wife of Alexander Pach, of 935 Broadway, New York, a decree of divorce with alimony of $1,300 a year. The husband made no defense and did not even put in an appearance in the courtroom. Counselor Charles Stewart, Newark, represented Mrs. Pach.

Mrs. Pach charged cruelty, that her husband beat her, that he used vile and offensive language about the house at all times of the day and night, drank heavily and made life unbearable for her. As a secondary result of spinal meningitis when a small boy Pach became very deaf and his wife and children and friends trained themselves in the sign language in order to converse with him. Members of the family and domestics testified that at times he acted like a maniac. The wife testified that at one time Pach chased her with a butcher knife.

"He looked like a bulldog when he came home at night," said Mrs. Pach. "At times he denied the existence of God and said he did not believe in the Bible."

She was granted alimony some time ago and she declares Pach failed to pay up and contempt proceedings may follow the decree of divorce granted Mrs. Pach yesterday.

BRUIN'S BANQUET.

It Was Long Drawn Out and Only Whetted His Appetite.

THE FINISH WAS EXCITING.

After the Pork Course Gave Out a Dessert of Cold Lead Ended the Feast, and the Unwilling Host Vowed Never Again to Fool With a Bear.

A teamster in the employ of one of the big tanneries in the west had a laughable yet trying adventure with a bear while on his way from the woods with a load of bark. As he emerged from the woods with his team he stopped to give the mules a breathing spell and to eat his dinner, which he carried in a tin bucket. He had scarcely opened his bucket and begun to eat when a bear came out of the woods on one side of the road, only two or three rods in the rear of the wagon. Bruin sauntered along, paying no attention to the team, but the teamster, desirous of seeing what the bear would do, threw a bit of salt pork in his way. The bear stopped, smelled at the pork and gulped it down greedily. Then the animal, noting the source of the morsel, came toward the wagon and rose on his haunches as if to say that another bit of pork would prove acceptable.

The teamster laughed and tossed out a second piece, which bruin devoured, and then he posed again. But the teamster wanted the rest of his dinner himself and paid no attention to the shaggy intruder. The beggar, seeing that the teamster was no longer aware of his presence, snorted sharply two or three times and walked back and forth across the road as if reconnoitering the situation. Presently he growled, but the teamster, thinking that the beast would go away if he got nothing further, continued his meal.

The bear ventured near and finally climbed up the load of bark at the hind end of the wagon. The man was unpleasantly surprised at this movement of bruin's, as he was wholly unarmed.

Accordingly he threw a bit of pork into the road, at the same time yelling to the bear to direct its attention to the meat. The bear dropped down and went and picked it up, but as soon as it was swallowed and there was no more forthcoming he made another charge upon the wagon.

The teamster started the mules onward, but knew that he could not hope to escape with his heavy load of bark. An idea struck him. He would coax the bear on by feeding the lunch to him until they should come to a friend's house a mile or two along the road. Then he would get a gun and shoot the old fellow.

The teamster sat on the bark, facing backward, his big dinner bucket at hand. When the bear came up with the wagon and threatened to climb upon the load the teamster tossed out a piece of pork. The supply of this edible was limited, so he tossed the beast a slice of bread, which fell butter side up. Bruin nosed it, then licked the butter off and left it.

The next slice fell butter side down, and the bear ignored it. Boiled eggs and cheese fared the same. Bruin wanted pork. The teamster dealt this out in small bits, which failed to satisfy, and the bear was growing ugly and aggressive.

At length the teamster saw his friend at work in a field and called to him to run for his gun. The man seemed to realize the state of the case and set off on a dead run for his house, a quarter of a mile distant. But the supply of pork was out before he returned, and the poor teamster was in a sorry plight.

The bear climbed upon the load. The teamster tossed him the last piece of pork and then jumped from his wagon and tore down the road. Bruin, probably thinking that the teamster was fleeing with a stock of coveted pork, started after him. The terrified man had a fair start, but he stumbled over a stone and fell full length, and the bear was close upon him when there came the loud report of a gun.

The friend had come at last. The teamster rose and looked round. There lay his late pursuer in the road, dead. The teamster declared that never again would he fool with a bear.—Harper's Weekly.

They Bumped.

A true happening which has been made the subject of a cartoon occurred at a fashionable golf club near London. A young man interested in golf solely for the sake of the social atmosphere one day decided to play a round. So he sauntered leisurely down to the caddy house, where he met a certain peppery lord. Not knowing the gentleman and barely looking at him, the somewhat foppish youth asked, "Are you the caddy master here?" Without an instant's hesitation Lord —— replied, "No, I am not, but I happen to know that he is not in need of any caddies this afternoon." It was some time before either recovered.—Boston Transcript.

Tongue Could Tell.

"Last night, George, you told me you loved me more than tongue could tell, and, oh, George, that wasn't true!"

"Why, darling, what do you mean?"

"I mean that it wasn't more than my little brother's tongue could tell. He heard it all!"

Ill patterns are sure to be followed more than good rules.—Locke.

Tuning the Furniture.

"Before a piano tuner can get good results he sometimes has to tune up the general furniture as well as the piano," said an expert tuner. "The other day I was sent for to tune a piano that had not been out of the factory six weeks. It was a fine piano, but every time I struck a note a noise like a battery of tin pans let loose sounded through the room. I worked all morning without making any improvement. Finally I examined the rest of the furniture, and pretty soon I discovered the cause of those jangling chords. A cabinet filled with old brass plates, platters and pieces of armor stood against the same wall. One leg was shorter than the others, and every time I struck the piano keys the vibrations caused a slight tipping of the cabinet and set the brass contents a-jiggling. I pointed out the uneven legs to the pianist.

"'What you want is a furniture mender, not a piano tuner,' I said.

"They got one in to add an eighth of an inch to that short leg, and the piano sounded sweet and true."—New York Sun.

Andalusian Girls.

Despite their attractions Andalusian girls only marry after very long engagements, sometimes lasting ten years. One girl who has been engaged four years has a lover who comes from a distance twice a year to see her, and yet he has never once mentioned matrimony. He lives with his mother and no doubt keeps her, for Spanish mothers have great influence over their sons. When at last a marriage takes place the bride has often to reside with her mother-in-law, to whom custom requires her to be most subservient. Extremely devoted to their own mothers, Andalusian girls are in no hurry to marry should their doing so require them to live at any distance from their old home. On the other hand, they do not appreciate having to wait ten years, but, as they say, "No hay remedio" (there is no remedy).—Seville Letter.

When Vapor Is Dry.

Mr. M. Mott-Smith points out in Science a popular misconception in the supposition that aqueous vapor and ice are wet. They are in themselves dry and become wet only when they turn to water. "So dry is aqueous vapor that it will dry any moist object that it comes in contact with." Superheated steam before it condenses is a dry gas. Ice feels wet if the temperature of the hand is sufficient to melt it. As ice it is dry. Another misconception is that the air can be either moist or dry. It is condensed aqueous vapor in the air that is moist, and it would be moist if there were no air. A given quantity of aqueous vapor confined in a given space will be wet or dry according to the temperature. At 32 degrees, for instance, it might be partially condensed and consequently wet, while at 70 degrees, owing to expansion, it would be dry.

Bug Power.

If asked to name the strongest animals most persons begin with the largest, the elephant, and continue with oxen, horses, etc. This is, of course, correct in so far as their total horsepower is concerned, but for real strength, proportioned to the size and weight of the animal, one must go to the insect world. Compared with insects, the strength of almost any large animal, and especially of man, is absurd. A man is considered strong if he can drag a mass weighing three or four times as much as himself, but the beetle will walk with 500 times his own weight. If a man were placed under a wooden box with five times his weight on top to hold it down he would remain there indefinitely, but to retain a stag beetle prisoner in the same way one must pile on top of the box at least 1,800 times its weight.

Oilcloth as a Cure.

Pretty soon after the new arrival had been assigned to his room he telephoned down to the office for two strips of oilcloth.

"Another one," said the clerk after assuring the guest that the oilcloth would be sent up immediately. "He is a somnambulist, I suppose. We keep strips of oilcloth in reserve for fellows like him. They spread it on the floor at either side of the bed. Stepping on cold oilcloth when he gets out of bed is pretty likely to awaken the most confirmed sleepwalker and prevent nocturnal wandering."—New York Press.

St. Dunstan and the Devil.

One of the most famous smiths of the Weald was St. Dunstan, archbishop of Canterbury. Mayfield, in Sussex, is the site of an ancient archiepiscopal palace, and here, according to some, took place the terrific encounter between St. Dunstan and the devil. At any rate, the anvil, hammer and tongs which are alleged to have belonged to the saint are still preserved at Mayfield palace.—London Tatler.

"You must have invested it very profitably."

"I did. I telegraphed home for money."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

WHEEL PROBLEMS.

Does the Edge of the Wheel Revolve Around the Axle?

"The wheel that turns under the locomotive or the car has a long and queer history," says a writer in the Railroad Man's Magazine, "but the mystery is still with us and whirls its hundred question marks before our eyes every minute of the day.

"Of course every one believes that the edge of the wheel goes around the axle. But does it? Take the end of any spoke near the tire or any part of the tire and on a still, windless night fasten a candle to it; then back off till nothing can be seen but that candle flame.

"Let the wheel revolve slowly, free from the ground. The candle flame makes a circle of fire all right and goes around the axle. Now lower the wheel until it rests on the ground and start ahead. The flame suddenly stops going in a circle and begins to make a wavy line, first high and then low. It goes around nothing at all.

"Men with clear minds can perform the experiment satisfactorily by tying a handkerchief around the tire in daylight, but to do this takes a keen mathematical imagination, because the eye is confused by other moving objects and is not able to see the handkerchief free from these other influences.

"At night the candle flame alone can be seen, so that is perhaps the best time to try the matter out. Tie a torch to a locomotive driver and then send the engine slowly back and forth while the observer is off some hundred feet distant in the dark. The torch does not move in a circle. It simply goes ahead somewhat like a flying machine rising and falling in the wind, coming to a dead stop at its lowest point and going twice as fast as the engine when at its highest point.

"The fact that the bottom of an engine wheel always stands still is more easy to learn than the fact that the top of the wheel moves just twice as fast as the train, but this can be proved easily with a piece of board.

"Take a piece of board, say, ten feet long and lay one end on top of the wheel. Now move the engine forward two feet and you will find that the board has gone ahead four feet, just twice as far as the engine. Lay down the board and tie two pieces of string to the wheel, one at the top and the other at the bottom, where it rests on the ground. Now run your engine forward two feet and see what happens. The bottom string has moved forward, too, but not nearly so far as has the top piece of string, although the ends were even at the start."

Plants Breaking Up an Island.

The layman would scarcely associate great strength with so delicate and fragile a thing as maidenhair fern, yet if its roots have not sufficient room they will break the pot in which the plant grows. Blades of grass will force the curbstones between which they spring up out of their place, and in a single night a crop of small mushrooms has been known to lift a large stone. Indeed, plants are on record as having broken the hardest rocks. The island of Aldabra, to the northwest of Madagascar, is becoming smaller through the action of the mangroves that grow along the foot of the cliffs. They eat their way into the rock in all directions, and into the gaps thus formed the waves force their way. In time they will probably reduce the island to pieces.—Scientific American.

Bathrooms In Paris.

An observant English journalist in Paris has—as a hot weather amusement—made a private census of bathrooms. He calculates that in all the flats and private houses of Paris there are about 2,800 bathrooms. And this writer, lying in his own bath and making another calculation, will bet a bathful of water that he could get up and pitch a cricket ball from the garden about his modest flat this way and that over as many bathrooms. It is a curious little difference of national architecture. And the quaintness of the difference comes with the fact that you see more people in London who look—yes—dirty than in Paris. Even the beggar in Paris is clean in face, finger nails and clothes.—London Chronicle.

He Didn't Know.

"I didn't expect any better treatment than this," said the lady on the pier scanthingly to the inspector whom she suspected of rudeness. "You can't make a silk purse out of a sow's ear!"

"As to that I don't know, madam," said the inspector placidly. "I do not recall any ruling of the treasury department on that point. If you are bringing in any of either you'd better declare them and leave the classification to us."—Harper's Weekly.

The Island of Hongkong.

Hongkong is an island about eleven miles long, with a width of from one to three miles, and consists almost entirely of a series of hills. There is a good road around a portion of the island on the sea front, but the grades up the mountains are too steep for practical automobiling, and the streets generally are not wide enough and not strongly enough constructed to permit the use of heavy cars upon them.

An Enthusiast.

Towne—Oh, yes, he's quite an enthusiast. He goes in for things in real earnest. Browne—Yes; if some one were to send him on a wild goose chase he'd speak of himself afterward as a sportsman.—Catholic Standard.

Evil is wrought by want of thought as well as by want of heart.—Hood.

The Kingdom Of Slender Swords

By HALLIE ERMINIE RIVES

Copyright, 1910, by the Bobbs-Merrill Company

That afternoon, with the passing of the rain, there had been held a neighborhood hanami, a "flower viewing excursion." The cavalcade had just returned afoot, since the trams had ceased running at midnight, the men merry with sake, the women chattering. A few children still wakeful scampered here and there.

The chauffeur leaned forward, with an exclamation—they had all but run down a hobbling figure.

"Keep your hands off!" snarled Bersonin. "Let them get out of the way!"

There was a small figure in the roadway—a six-year-old. Ishikichi had not gone to the hanami that day. For many hours that long afternoon, while his mother cared for the sick father, he had beat the tiny drum that soothed a baby's fret, comforted by the promise that he should be waked in the great hour when the crowd came home. Now, standing in the road, he heard the hum of the rushing motor, and a quick thought—born of that instinct of sacrifice for the parent that is woven, a golden thread, in the woof of the Japanese soul—darted into his baby brain. One of the big fire wagons of the seiyo-jin was coming. When the carriage killed Toru, his playmate, the foreigner had sent much money to Toru's house. He was not sorry any more, because the white faced man whom he liked, who lived in the temple, had told him what a fine thing it had been, for Toru's honorable father had been fighting with the Gaki, the no-rice-devils—it was almost like a war—and Toru had died just as the brave soldiers did in battle. A great purpose flooded the little soul. Was he not brave too?

So as Bersonin, with a snarl, shook off the hand of the chauffeur and threw the throttle wide open Ishikichi did not scamper with the rest. With his hands tightly clinched in his patched kimono, his huge clogs clattering on the roadway, he ran straight into the path of the hurtling mass of steel.

There was a sudden, sickening jolt. The car leaped forward, dragging something beneath it that made no sound. The chauffeur hurled himself across the seat on the gear, and the automobile stopped with a grinding discord of screeching pistons. A surge of people came around it—a wave without outcry, but holding a hushed murmur like the sea. Shoji were opening, doorways filling the street with light. A man bent and drew something gently from between the wheels.

"GO ON!" HE SAID SAVAGELY.

With a writhing oath the expert wrenched at the clutch.

"Go on!" he said savagely. "How dare you stop without my orders?"

The Japanese made no reply, but the arms that braced the wheel were rigid as steel.

Bersonin sank back in his seat, his massive frame quivering, his eyes glittering like flakes of mica.

The chauffeur swung himself from the seat into the crowd. An insane desire had been creeping stealthily on Bersonin. He had felt it coming when he faced the truth in Phil's cringing admission. The horrible compulsion to laughter was on him. The damnable man-hysteria had him by the throat.

His jaws opened. He laughed—a dreadful peal of merriment that echoed up and down the latticed street. And as he laughed he knew that he raised a peril nearer, more fearful even than that from which he had been flying.

There was an instant's shocked calm, like the silence which follows the distant spurt of blue flame from the muzzle of a Krupp gun; then, like its answering detonation, in such a menacing roar as might arise from the brink of an inferno, the silence of the quiet street burst into awful sound.

Ten minutes later but a single lighted shoji glimmered on the darkened thoroughfare. The roadway was deserted save for a soldierly figure in policeman's uniform who stood thoughtfully looking at a huddle in the dim roadway—a mixture of wrenched and battered iron and glass, in the midst of which lay an inert, shapeless something that might have been a bundle of old clothes fallen from a scavenger's cart.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

THE VOICE IN THE DARK.

BARBARA rested ill in her cabin bed that night. Confused dreams troubled her, mingling familiar thoughts in kaleidoscopic confusion, dragging her from one tangle to another in a wearying rapidity against which she struggled in vain. One thing ran through them all—the gold lacquer Buddha that had stood on the Sendai chest in her bedroom at the embassy, only it seemed to be also that lost image before which she had used to sit as a child.

She had no feeling of awakening, but all at once the visions were gone and she lay open eyed, swinging to the movement of the sea, feeling the night to be very long. There came over her a creeping oppression, a sense of terror of the night, of its hidden mysteries and occult forces. The darkness seemed to be holding some dreadful, stolid, lethargic things that sprawled from horizon to horizon.

A small, noiseless clock was hung beside the bed. She could see its pale face in the light of the thick ground glass bulb that served as night lamp. It was nearly 4 o'clock.

She twisted back the tawny brown surge of her hair, rose and dressed as hastily as she could in the lurching space. Then she opened the door and passed into the saloon. A roll of the yacht slammed to the cabin door and left her in darkness. She felt for the electric switch, but before she could find it another movement sent her reeling against a stand. She threw out her arm to stay her fall and struck something.

There was a clicking sound, a soft whir, and then the music of samisen filled the dark room. She realized that she had staggered against the phonograph in the corner and that the shock had started its mechanism. Wincing, she groped her way to a chair and sat down, trembling.

The music died away. There was a pause, a sharp click, a curious confusion of sounds, and then, husky and filmy, a human voice:

"Barbara!"

She caught her hands to her throat, her blood chilling to ice. It was the voice of Austen Ware speaking, it seemed to her, from the world beyond. She crouched back, breathing fast and hard, while the voice went on in strange broken periods, threaded by a whir and clamor that seemed the noise of the wind outside.

"What is that I knocked over? It's buzzing, and wheels are turning in it, or is it the pain? Can't you stop it, Barbara? No; I know you aren't here really. I'm all alone. I must be light headed. How stupid!"

The strange truth came to her in a stab of realization. What she heard was no supernatural voice. In its fall that night the phonograph's spring had been released, and the samisen record had registered also the delirious mutterings of the dying man. She felt herself shuddering violently.

"I can't go any farther. You—you have done it for me, Phil. It was the second blow. It seemed to crash right through."

Barbara's heart was beating to bursting. "Austen, Austen," she whispered to herself, in an agony. "Tell me! Was it Phil? You can't know what you're saying!"

"No one must know it. The law would—no, no! What good would it do now? He's a bad egg, but I—I was always proud of the family name. Barbara! Remember, it wasn't Phil! It wasn't Phil!"

She fell on her knees, her hands clasping the arms of the chair, thrilling to the truth beneath that pitiful denial. Phil, not Daunt! The man she had loved had no stain of blood on his soul! She sobbed aloud. With the whir of the machinery there mixed a grating, scratching discord, as though an automaton had attempted to laugh.

"How ridiculous it seems to die like this! Only this morning I was so near—so near to what I wanted most. It was your losing the locket that checkmated me. Why couldn't I have found it instead of Phil? Did I tell you I was there that day, Barbara—behind the shikiri, when you followed the Japanese girl into the house? I could see just what you were thinking. I would never have told you the truth—never."

With a faint cry Barbara dragged herself backward. In the illusion everything about her for the instant vanished. The yacht's walls had rolled away. She was on a gloomy hillside, and a stricken man was speaking—confessing.

Again the ghastly attempt to laugh.

"A contemptible thing, wasn't it? I knew that. I've—I've felt it. I never seemed contemptible to myself before, but I should have had you, and that would have repaid. It was all coming my way. Then, just the dropping of a locket, and—Phil—and now, it's all over."

Barbara felt herself engulfed in a wave of complex emotions. She was torn with a great repugnance, a greater joy and a sense of acute pity that overmastered them both. Then there rolled over all the recollection that what she now listened to was but a mechanical echo. The hillside faded, the walls of the yacht came back.

"I never believed in much, and I'm going without whining. Are you near, Barbara? Sometimes there are many people around me and then only you. I—I think I'm beginning to wander."

She was weeping now, unrestrained.

There was a long pause, in which the whir of the wheels rasped on. Then—

"Is it your arms I feel, Barbara? Or is it"—

That was all. The wheels whirred on a little longer, a click and—silence. Only the rush of the wind outside and the passionate sobbing of the girl who knelt in the dark room, her face buried in her hands, her heart tossed on the cross tides of anguish and of joy.

A long time she knelt there. She was recalled by a confusion on the deck above her—shouts and a hastening of feet. She lifted her face. The dawn had come; its pale, faint radiance sifted through the heavy glass ports and dimly lit the room. The shouts and running multiplied.

She sprang to her feet, opened the door and hurried up the companionway.

CHAPTER XXIX.

A RACE WITH DAWN.

IN that furious pace toward Aoyama Daunt had been consumed by one thought—that upon his single effort hung the saving of human lives, the covering of a shame to his own nation, the turning away of a foul allegation from the repute of a friendly empire. He knew that minutes were valuable.

On the long, dimly lighted roadways where the flying hoofs beat their furious tattoo few carts were astir, and the trolleys had not yet appeared on the wider thoroughfares. The rain had washed the air clean, the wind was dustless and sweet, and the stars were palely bright. Once a policeman signaled and the driver momentarily slackened speed—then on as before. The horses were white with foam when they reached the parade ground. Here Daunt leaped down and wrenched both lamps from the carriage. "Go home," he said to the betto and, running through a clump of trees, struck across the waste.

The Japanese stared after him mystified, then, with a philosophic objurgation, turned and drove the sweating horses home at a walk.

Daunt ran to a low door in the long garage. The key was on a ring in his pocket. He went in, locking the door behind him. There were no electric lights—he had been there heretofore only by day—and the carriage lamps made only a subdued glimmer that was reflected from the polished metal of the great winged thing resting on its carrier. He threw off his evening coat and set feverishly to work. After its single trial the new fan propeller had been unshipped for slight alteration, and the flanges had not yet been reassembled. There were delicate adjustments to be made, wire rigging to be tautened, a score of minute tests before all could be safe and sure. He worked swiftly and with concentration, feeling his mind answering to the stress with an absolute coolness.

At length the last attachment was in place, the final bolt sent home and one of the lamps lashed close in the angle of the wind screen. He took his place, and the engine started its familiar rhythm—pst-pst, pst-pst, pst-pst—as the explosive drop fell faster and faster. He leaned and broke the clutch which held the big double doors of the building. They swung open, and he threw on the gear.

And suddenly, as the propeller began to spin, in the instant the glider started in its rush down the guides Daunt was aware that some one had darted through the doors. He had a flashing view of a white, disheveled face, heard a cry behind him; then the prow of the glider tilted abruptly, the air whistled past the screens, the great flat field sank away, and he was throbbing steeply upward against the sweep of the wind.

Daunt threw himself forward. The bubble in the spirit level clung to the top of its tube. Rapidly he warped down the elevation vanes till slowly, slowly, the telltale bubble crept to the middle of the level. What was the matter? The engine was working well, yet there was a sense of heaviness, of sluggishness, that was unaccountable. He looked to either side, before him, behind him.

His fingers tightened on the clutches. Just forward of the whirling propeller he made out the figure of a man lying flat along the ribs of the glider's body clutching the steel guys of the planes, looking at him.

For a moment he stared motionless. It was this extra weight that had sent the glider reeling prow up—had made it unresponsive to control. The man who clung there had aimed to prevent the flight. Daunt leaned to let the full beam of the flaring lamp go past him. A quick intuition had told him whose were the eyes that had glittered across the throbbing fabric, but the face he saw now was infuriate with a new look that made him shiver. It was incarnate with the daredevil of terror. Phil had been a drunkard; he was drunk now with the calculate madness of overmastering fear. As he gazed a flitting, irrelevant memory crossed Daunt's mind of a day at college years before when by a personal appeal he had saved Phil from the disgrace of expulsion. And now it was Phil—Phil clinging there with desperate, hooked fingers, struggling to consummate a crime that must sink him for ever.

Pst-pst, pst-pst, pst-pst; on the glider drove. With a fierce effort Daunt crushed down the sense of unreality and swiftly weighed his position.

Somerset County Historical Society's Quarterly Magazine Makes Its Appearance.

A. V. D. HONEYMAN EDITOR.

First Issue Unusually Creditable—Both In Class of Articles and In General Typographical Appearance.

The first issue of The Somerset County Historical Quarterly has made its appearance and to express it mildly it is an excellent number such as what might be expected when it is known that A. V. D. Honeyman is the editor. Announcement is made that "this magazine of local history, biography and genealogy, relating for the present exclusively to Somerset county, New Jersey, will be of eight pages quarterly, issued in January, April, July and October. It is the official paper of the Somerset County Historical Society, whose offices are at Somerville, the county seat."

Why this publication comes into existence is best explained in this extract from the editor's foreword:

"The older generation is passing away; its members of half a century past could have thrown a flood of light upon Revolutionary and post-Revolutionary times in Somerset had such a magazine as this Quarterly been hitherto established. Soon there will only exist a generation whose knowledge of ancient affairs must be at second, thirrd or fourth-hand. Even the older tombstones in our many ancient farm and churchyard cemeteries are crumbling, and, unless soon transcribed, cannot be read. Some of the older church records are also not in a good state of preservation, and should be copied and published while it is possible to do it."

Editor Honeyman goes on to say: "Somerset county, as we all know, was long the special centre of the Revolutionary struggle. Many, but not all, of its fascinating incidents have been published in one form or another, although many of them appeared in newspapers that are no longer accessible to the general public. Occasionally new records of that struggle, in the shape of letters or old diaries, are found, and these should be printed where present readers residing in this vicinity, or belonging here but residing elsewhere, may peruse and preserve them."

From a purely local standpoint the article by Mrs. Charles W. McCutchen on "Washington Rock" is naturally the most interesting but Mr. Honeyman has made a splendidly well varied selection of topics for this first number and each contributor has wisely avoided getting into that rut of dryness which so often spoils publications of this class. Among the contributors are Justice James J. Bergen and Henry P. Mason. Here are the contents of the well edited and superbly printed initial number:

Introductory words by the Editor; The Original and Present Bounaries of Somerset County by Hon. James J. Bergen; Washington at Camp Middlebrook by Rev. T. E. Davis. The most succinct and clear account yet written of the occupation by Washington of the Camp on Middlebrook Heights; with observations on the first use of the American flag; The Indians of Central New Jersey, from the unpublished MSS. of the late Andrew D. Mellick, Jr., beautifully written, with just that touch of imagination which makes the real facts fascinating; The Author of "The Story of An Old Farm," a sketch of the life and literary work of the late accomplished historian, Andrew D. Mellick, Jr., with portrait. By the Editor. A fuller sketch than has ever appeared; Basking Ridge in Revolutionary Days, from an account of one then living there (the wife of Hon. Josiah Quincy, of Boston). The Second Somerset County Court House at Millstone; proceedings and addresses at setting up of marker; The Somerset County Historical Society—Some particulars about it, with list of members, etc. The Somerville Schoolhouses and Schools by Henry P. Mason; The Markers for the Six-Mile Run Courthouse, and of D. A. R. at Millstone; Somerset's New Courthouse; The Wallace House at Somerville; Sketches of the late Arthur P. Sutphen, Esquire, Prof. Martin Wyckoff, Stephen Voorhees and Rev. Dr. George W. Clack; Washington Rock by Mrs. Charles W. McCutchen; Notes and Queries on the families of Esmay, Beekman, Van Der Veer, Van Court and Brown.

WHAT RED CROSS SEALS REALLY DO

Every seal that is sold is a real bullet in the fight against tuberculosis. These seals last year helped to support thousands of needy tuberculosis patients and to give them a chance for life. They provided for many visiting nurses, whose hundreds of thousands visits brought instruction and cheer to numerous patients. They helped maintain dispensaries in dozens of citizens from the Atlantic to the Pacific, where many thousands of consumptive patients received treatment, aid and advice.

They provided the means to purchase millions of copies of circulars, pamphlets and other literature, with which the public has been educated about tuberculosis. They have established and helped to maintain more than 40 open air schools for the children who needed open air treatment. These are just a few of the ways in which the $300,000 received last year was expended. This year a million dollars is needed. Surely anyone can help by buying at least ten seals. Red Cross stamps may be obtained at the Charity Organization Society rooms in the Babcock building and at The Daily Press office.

WATCHUNG HUNT CLUB RIDERS FOLLOW HOUNDS.

The Watchung Hunt Club resumed its chases yesterday, following a bad spell of weather. The hounds were met at the kennels and the chase led over the Fowell, Henrick, Boshen and Wooden farms, where a check was made. The hounds were again thrown in and the chase continued over the Mundy, Smith, Dunham, Randolph, Westcott, Griscome, Endicott and Smalley farms, the finish.

A number started in the hunt, but only four riders finished as follows: Rufus C. Finch, M. F. H., on "All Aboard;" Lawrence Smith on "The Chancellor;" R. H. Towner on "Sunlight," and Huntsman Henry Watkins on "All Alone."

What's in a Name.

Owing to the similarity of names, Miss Carrie Beam, of East Seventh street, has been confused with Miss Cassie Beam, who was banished from the city several days ago. To make the situation more confusing, the young woman companion of the banished one and sent away with her, went under the name of Lucy, which is also the first name of a chum of Miss Carrie Beam. Considerable embarrassment has been caused both young women by the similarity and Miss Beam called at The Daily Press office yesterday to see if an error in the names had not occurred. When assured that there had not, she asked that the foregoing explanation be made public.

MUSICAL FOR CHARITY AT MRS. SCHWED'S HOME.

Mrs. William Victor Goldberg, of New York, gave a delightful musicale at the home of Mrs. Isaac Schwed on Evergreen avenue, the proceeds of which were given to the work of the Anti-Tuberculosis League. The affair was arranged by Mrs. Schwed and she invited Mrs. Goldberg to come to Plainfield. There were about one hundred guests present and the league will receive about $100 for its work.

Mrs. Goldberg gave a selection from Humperdinck's opera, "Hansel and Gretel," also singing excerpts from the opera and giving a graphic description of the same. She is a finished artist and her work which was of the highest order, called forth hearty applause throughout the rendition of the operatic selections.

South Plainfielder Astray.

Martin Chamadin, a Spaniard, residing at South Plainfield, came to town last night to do some Christmas shopping and acquired a heavy load of wet goods. Patrolman Vanderweg found him prostrate on Park avenue and Judge William G. DeMeza in the city court this morning suspended sentence with a lecture.

BORO HIGH SENIORS GIVE ENTERTAINMENT

The senior class of the North Plainfield High School gave a Christmas entertainment for other members of the school and their friends in Debele Hall, last night. The affair was largely attended and the program proved to be an enjoyable one throughout. The first part was devoted to a sketch entitled "The Dressing Gown," which the young people presented in an excellent manner. The cast was as follows:

"Peter Peabody," who makes the length of the gown an excuse for a short temper, Carroll C. Taylor; "Mrs. Peabody," his wife, who makes the gown shorter and excuses nothing when her personal property is attacked, Miss Elsie Schmidt; "Miriam," the daughter, who also curtails the tail of the gown and whose excuse is her heart, Miss Ella Maller; "Angus Kirk," her lover, who is the excuse of all excuses, Edmund J. Kenney; "Cumber," the butler, who helps shorten the gown and whose temper is shortened by the shortness of others, Lawrence H. French; "Sarah," the maid, always punning, who also assists in shorting the gown—and the butler's temper, Miss Florence Daly. The coach was Prof. Paul A. Mertz.

The above sketch was followed by another one entitled "Monday Morning in the North Plainfield Police Court." William P. Taylor was the judge, Lawrence H. French, the clerk, and Edmund J. Kenney the balliff. The various ones arrested and arraigned as prisoners were convicted of some crime committed while they have been in high school. The prisoners were all members of the senior and junior classes, while the presidents of the sophomore and freshmen classes received the "knocks" for the classes as a whole.

After the presentation of the two sketches, dancing was enjoyed until a late hour. Music was furnished by Paroubek's orchestra. The heads of the committees in charge of the affair comprised the following:

Knocks, Edmund J. Kenney; play, Louis N. Bennett; program, Guy D. Peck, Jr.; music, Carroll C. Taylor; ticket, Louis N. Bennett; general manager, Lawrence H. French; floor manager, Benjamin J. Phelps.

WORDS OF EXPLANATION MADE BY MR. WILLIS.

The following self-explanatory letter is cheerfully given the prominence it deserves:

Editor, The Daily Press:

In your issue of the 19th inst., under heading "Revoke Licenses," I feel that an inference might be drawn by the public that I was accustomed to take out in my hack the two women referred to in your article.

I wish to say that I have been engaged in the hack business in Plainfield for nearly four years, and have always conducted myself in an orderly, upright manner; and that I have never taken either of the women in question out in my hack.

I wish you would give this letter as much publicity as the article in question, because I feel that in justice to myself and my business the public should know the facts in the case.

Respectfully yours,
WILLIAM WILLIS.

PASTOR ON TREATY

Rev. Dr. Herring Commends President's Action in Abrogating Agreement with Russia.

PERSECUTION OF HEBREWS.

"The Christianity of Russia Is of Very Poor Quality," Minister Tells His Congregation.

"Russia and the Jews" was the timely subject of a talk by Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring at the prayer meeting at the First Presbyterian church, last night, in which he referred to the fact that the treaty with Russia had been abrogated. In part Dr. Herring spoke as follows:

"The abrogation of the treaty with Russia is another evidence of the President's great desire for the establishment of peaceful relations among nations. One of the recent editorials in the New York Times was headed 'The Awakening in Russia,' and it is believed that the recent discussions in this country regarding the equality 'of our citizenship without regard to race or religion have had an influence upon public opinion in Russia.' The Russia, a semi-official St. Petersburg newspaper, prints this editorial, 'Progovernment Russians cannot confine themselves to attacks upon and blind hatred for the Jews, etc.' We are glad to see this gleam of light, for in its treatment of the Jews, the Russians have acted as they did in the dark ages. They deprive them of the right to attend libraries, museums, schools. They deprive them of the privilege of a synagogue unless there are at least 800 Jews in a town. It is no wonder that the Jews grasp eagerly the opportunities which are presented them in this land for an education. Fifty per cent. of the students in Columbia University are Jews and 83 per cent. of the students in the College of the City of New York are sons of Russian refugees.

"The Christianity of Russia is of very poor quality. It is really a parody of Christianity, for it possesses very little of the Christ spirit, and if a man or a nation 'possesses not the spirit of Christ, he is none of his.' "Why," says the Talmud, "was there but one Adam at the beginning? In order that all men should have the same father." This is similar to the Lord's words to Abraham: "In thee, shall all families of the earth be blessed." The ideal of Israel is blessing for the world. The ideal of the Christian is "on earth, peace, good will toward men." Are the ideals not one. Why not then strive honestly and earnestly to realize this great ideal?"

KINDERGARTEN DEPARTMENT HAS ANNUAL EXERCISES.

The kindergarten department of St. Stephen's church Sunday-school were entertained at the annual Christmas exercises, yesterday afternoon. They were held in the parish house where games were enjoyed from 2 until 5 o'clock. At that hour, the children, fifteen in number, marched into the large room, where a big Christmas tree stood lighted. Each child received a present from the school and exchanged others among themselves.

Mrs. Elory G. Bowers was in charge of the exercises and distribution, while Rev. Mr. Bowers assisted.

Use Red Cross Stamps.

The people of Plainfield and North Plainfield are once more reminded to use the Red Cross stamps in sending out their mail and Christmas packages, and thus help in the work of stamping out tuberculosis. A percentage of the money received from the sale of the Red Cross stamps is used for the work. Be sure and place the stamps on the back of letters, as the government will not permit them to be used on the side used for the address.

INJUNCTION REFUSED IN PARTY LINE DISPUTE

The application for an injunction against Louis Kadish, of Somerset street, asked for by Carl Silbert, was refused by Vice-Chancellor Howell in chambers in Newark yesterday after a hearing at which a number of witnesses from this city testified. The injunction was asked on the ground that Kadish in altering the building at 17 Somerset street, is encroaching on Silbert's property or infringing on a party wall between the two buildings.

The witnesses for Kadish were Chief T. O. Doane, Blanchard Fosgate and Morris Robinowitz, the contractor who is doing the work. Harry C. Runyon was counsel for Mr. Kadish. Judge William Newcorn represented Silbert, whose witnesses were F. A. Dunham and Marcus Silbert, brother of the plaintiff. After hearing all the testimony on both sides, the Vice-Chancellor dismissed the bill praying for the injunction on the ground that the facts as set forth in the bill had not been substantiated.

NO NUMBER ON HOUSE HE APPEARS IN COURT.

The first arrest for violation of the city ordinance requiring all residences to be properly numbered was made yesterday when Alfred Johnson, of Grant avenue, had a complaint lodged against him by Street Commissioner Andrew J. Gavett and was arraigned this morning before Judge William G. DeMeza in the city court. Mr. Gavett said that notice has been served on all residents whose houses are not properly designated by numbers readable from the sidewalk and where the house remains unnumbered by the expiration of the time allowed, the resident will be arrested.

Judge DeMeza read the ordinance to Mr. Johnson and upon his promise to comply with its requirements at once sentence was suspended. In cases where the resident does not know the proper number for his house, he may obtain it by application to the street commissioner's office on North avenue.

REFEREE'S FINDING SUSTAINED BY COURT.

Judge William Newcorn in the District Court this morning sustained the finding of Harry C. Runyon as referee in the suit for $500 brought by Kussel Sachar against Ralph Luria, of Spooner avenue. Mr. Runyon found there was no cause for action. When the suit was brought in the District Court, Judge Newcorn declined to allow the court's time to be taken up with the minor details. The two men had been partners for some time and all of their transactions have more or less bearing as the basis of the suit. Harry C. Runyon was appointed as referee.

Testimony was taken during the summer by Mr. Runyon. It covered more than 200 closely typewritten pages. This mass of evidence was filed with the referee's report in which he stated that there was no cause for action.

D. and D.

William Morris, of East Fifth street, the young man who gained notoriety last August by being shot for a robber by a brakeman on a Chicago and Northwestern passenger train, and who returned to his home in this city after recovering from the wound in a Belle Plain, Iowa, hospital, was arrested last night for the second time in two weeks on the same charge—drunkenness and panhandling. When arraigned before Judge William G. DeMeza in the city court this morning, young Morris appeared indifferent as to what disposition was made of him and to allow further investigation he was remanded until tomorrow morning.

TO PRESERVE ROCK

Mrs. Charles W. McCutchen Tells of Plans For Marking Historic Site.

POPULAR SUBSCRIPTION FUND.

Continental Chapter, D. A. R., to Interest the Public—Sketch of How Rock Figured in Revolutionary War.

In the current issue of the Somerset County Historical Quarterly appears an instructive article written by Mrs. Charles W. McCutchen on "Washington Rock—Its History and Future." From this rock, which is on the southern slope of the Watchung mountain back of Dunellen, Washington watched the movements of the Hessian troops. To save it from possible vandals, Mr. McCutchen has bought the historic site and says that he will hold it in trust for the people. Continental chapter, D. A. R., has raised a considerable amount towards a fund to place a memorial tablet or other mark on the rock and the public generally will be invited to contribute to that end.

Following is Mrs. McCutchen's article:

"When the new-comer in Plainfield has first pointed out to him the rather curious, grey, twin rocks which stand out from the foliage near the mountain top, a little northwest of the town—not half so prominently, to be sure, as in the days when old John Laing treated them to an annual cost of whitewash, but still easily discerned—the question that naturally arises is, 'Why Washington's Rock?' What was the connection between the Father of his country and these two lone and rather inaccessible abutments of the Watchung range? Was there any real foundation for the name in fact, or was the story of a piece with those of the beds (almost as plentiful as the Mayflower cradles and chairs) in which he slept, or the tables at which he dined?

"The line where history fades into tradition is often very blurred and difficult to trace, but, in this instance the facts are here, few but authentic.

"The earliest reference to Washington Rock which I have been able to find is in a volume entitled "Historical Collections of the State of New Jersey," by John M. Barber and Henry Howe, published in the year 1844. It appears at the close of a chapter describing Westfield, Scotch Plains, Plainfield, all, by the way, at that time in Essex county.

"'At an elevation of about 400 feet on the brow of the mountain in the rear of Plainfield stands Washington's Rock. It is one of very large size—being about 25 feet in height and from 30 to 40 in circumference. The bold projection which nature has given it from the surface of the eminence, renders it a fine position for taking an extensive view of the country below.

"'In the summer of 1777 the American Army was stationed at various places on the plain below—at New Market, Middlebrook, etc.

"'After the retreat of Sir William Howe from New Brunswick—and upon his movements and marching from Amboy toward where Plainfield now is—Washington retreated to the heights in face of the enemy. The advance guard of Howe's army fell in with Lord Stirling's division. A skirmish ensued, and, upon the approach of the column under Cornwallis, Stirling was obliged to retreat. Howe pursued him to Westfield, and on the next day returned to Amboy. Washington was at this time on the Rock, inspecting the operations of the armies on the plain.

"'At various times he resorted to this place to ascertain the movements of the enemy. This circumstance has given the Rock a sacred character to the people of the present day, which, in connection with the beautiful prospect it affords, has made it a place of resort for parties of pleasure.

"'The scene is one of uncommon beauty. The whole country, apparently, lies as level as a map at the feet of the spectator, for a circuit of sixty miles. On the left appear the spires of New York city, part of the bay, Newark, Elizabeth, Rahway and New Brighton. Directly in front are Amboy and Raritan bays. To the right New Brunswick and heights of Princeton and Trenton; and far to the southeast the eye stretches over the plains of Monmouth to the heights of Navesink. Beautiful villages bedeck the plain; and 'cultivated fields, farm houses and numerous groves of verdant trees are spread around in pleasant profusion.'

"When we see to what flowery periods the view inspired these writers of nearly three-quarters of a century ago, we wonder why so many parties have never been to Washington Rock, and in fact hard-

The Rev. C. V. T. Richeson, accused of murdering Miss Avis Linnell, mutilated himself in jail; a quick operation saved his life and his trial will be held January 15.

County Prosecutor Frank P. Baker forcibly took Robert J. Foster, a detective, before an Indianapolis court and asked for protection; Baker was cited for contempt.

The Interstate Commerce Commission in its annual report to Congress defended its action in the mountain rate cases, thereby clashing with the Commerce Court's ruling on that question.

W. M. Wood, head of the American Woolen Company, praised the Tariff Board report on Schedule K and said it showed the cloth manufacturer's profit on a $20 suit was only 30 cents.

The federal government instituted suit in Philadelphia against the Keystone Watch Case Company, declaring it an unlawful combination in violation of the Sherman act and asking that it be dissolved.

President Taft received calls from William Barnes, Jr., Samuel S. Koenig and many others, did a little Christmas shopping and left New York city at midnight for Washington after speaking at several dinners.

Counsel for the defence in the trial of the meat packers in Chicago moved to dismiss two counts in the indictment; the action came as a surprise, and court took a recess until this morning, when the judge will rule on the motions.

Congress—Taft's message transmitting the report of the Tariff Board was read in both branches. House: The Senate resolution approving President's Taft's action in denouncing the treaty of 1832 with Russia was adopted.

Tang Shao-yi, delegate for the imperialists at the Shanghai conference, admitted that it was too late to save the dynasty and expressed his conviction that the establishment of a republic can alone prevent further wholesale bloodshed.

A witness testified that Martin W. Garvey, on trial in New York for the murder of Stern, a jeweller's clerk, following a robbery, was with him in a saloon at the time of the murder; but a new witness identified Garvey as the man who did the shooting.

WIFE'S MARK FOR EGGS AND HOT COFFEE, OTT SAYS.

Citing the throwing of eggs and coffee, William Ott, a shoe salesman, of Jersey City, in answering the divorce petition of Mrs. Louise H. Ott, assigns numerous domestic clashes and "too much mother-in-law" as the reason for his marital troubles.

Unkind treatment was alleged by the wife in her complaint, and in his answer Mr. Ott gives instances in which he says he was the victim.

Coffee throwing was one of the things cited by Mrs. Ott in her petition, but Mr. Ott gives a different version and declares that he was the recipient of the coffee, which was used as a missile.

One clause of Mr. Ott's answer follows:

"That had not the mother of petitioner interfered to counsel and advised her daughter, defendant has no doubt that petitioner and himself would have lived peacefully together."

Explaining that he had ordered his mother-in-law from the house, Mr. Ott continued:

"After defendant ordered petitioner's mother from the house, petitioner refused to prepare any breakfast for defendant, outside of a cup of coffee; that defendant upon remonstrating was told that he would get nothing better in that house, and on several occasions defendant had to procure his breakfast in restaurants or else go without it because of his wife's refusal to prepare any breakfast; that one time while sitting at the table at the evening meal the defendant took from the plate upon which petitioner had just placed some bread, two slices, which seemed to anger petitioner, and she struck defendant across the nose with the knife she had in her hand cutting the bread. Shortly after this the petitioner, while the defendant was chastising their child, took a poker and struck defendant across the arm, the scar to this day remaining upon defendant's arm.

"On one occasion while defendant was at breakfast he stated to his wife that the eggs which she had prepared seemed to him to be bad, at which she became very angry, and, rising up, shoved the eggs and a cup of hot coffee into his lap. Upon defendant arising to disentangle himself she rushed to the stove, and, picking up the pot of boiling coffee, threw it and its contents at defendant, the contents falling all over defendant's clothes and body."

DIVORCE DECREE NOT FOR UPTON SINCLAIR.

The petition of Upton Sinclair, the author, for a divorce from his wife, Meta Fuller Sinclair, was denied yesterday by Supreme Court Justice Davis, of the New York Supreme Court. This ruling was made despite a recommendation that the decree should be granted.

The recommendation came from Referee W. S. Kelley, before whom testimony in the action was taken. Kelley was in favor of an absolute divorce, but the court nullified his indorsement.

Sinclair based his petition on the ground that Mrs. Sinclair committed a statutory offense with Harry Kemp, a poet, formerly of Arlington, N. J., but now of Kansas. The petitioner now will be forced to go through the whole case again before another referee.

Denial of the petition was made by Justice Davis on the ground that the referee had permitted Sinclair to exceed the legal limitations in giving his testimony relative to the relation he claimed existed between Mrs. Sinclair and Kemp.

WANTED TO HEAR WILSON ON COMMISSION GOVERNMENT.

Governor Wilson had to decline Tuesday afternoon an invitation to speak at a commission government banquet in Lancaster, Pa., Wednesday evening, January 17, owing to the fact that he already had an engagement for that evening to speak in Michigan.

The invitation was brought from Lancaster by a delegation composed of H. S. Williamson, a director of the Chamber of Commerce; Dr. John Wallace Cooper, chairman of the municipal affairs committee, and W. M. Nixdorf, secretary of the chamber. They also represented the allied civic bodies of Lancaster. They were entertained by members of the Trenton Chamber of Commerce, who escorted them to the State house.

The visitors told the Governor there was to be a State convention in Lancaster, January 18 and 19, in the interest of commission government for third class cities, and the dinner the evening of the seventeenth, at which it was desired Governor Wilson should speak, was to be the opening feature. They referred to the part the Governor had taken in the passage of the New Jersey commission government law, and said their eyes were now all on Trenton. Governor Wilson said he was sorry he would have to decline. Then he added:

"But with commission government as your object I will be with you in spirit."

KILLED RUNNING FROM COAL YARD WATCHERS.

Running from railroad watchmen in the Lehigh Valley coal storage grounds, at Perth Amboy, Michael Birdos, ten years old, of that place, fell from the tracks forty feet to a bin and was instantly killed Tuesday night. Practically every bone in his body was broken.

The lad, with a number of other boys, was gathering coal when the watchmen approached. He tripped as he ran, and fell between two bins into an empty one.

MISSOURI SENTIMENT STRONG FOR WILSON.

That there is a strong underlying sentiment among the Democrats of Missouri favorable to the nomination of Governor Wilson as the candidate for President was the belief expressed by Assemblyman James N. Coil, of Missouri, Tuesday afternoon. Mr. Coil called at the State house, Trenton, and had a brief chat with the Governor, after which he discussed the political situation in his own State.

"DRY" NEW YEAR'S EVE.

Excise officials declare that New York will have a dry New Year's celebration this time. It has been the custom in the last two or three years for hotel and restaurant men to apply for a special all night license to take in New Year's eve. This year the thirty-first of December comes on Sunday, and the State law provides that no licenses may be issued for the period between midnight Saturday and midnight Sunday. The Mayor has accordingly directed that all applications are to be denied.

PLANS FOR A JOINT SEWER ARE ADOPTED.

The Rahway Sanitary Commission and the Cranford Township Committee held a conference Tuesday evening to consider the question of sewage disposal. A plan was adopted to build a trunk line sewer to care for Cranford and Rahway, which will empty into a disposal plant below Rahway. The adoption of this plan will enable Cranford to comply with the order of the State Board of Health to stop polluting the Rahway River.

Clyde Potts, of Morristown, sanitary expert and expert for the city of Rahway, and Edward Mosher, township engineer, rendered a tentative report upon this plan, which indicated by the maps the proposed trunk line, which could be so constructed as to drain the entire Rahway Valley section and care for Cranford, Garwood, Kenilworth, Westfield and Rahway.

The engineers recommended that the officials of Westfield, Kenilworth and Garwood be called together to confer with them on the subject of a joint trunk line sewer. The evening of January 24 was set as the date for such a meeting, and Township Clerk Denman was instructed to issue the call of the meeting to the several municipalities.

DIVORCED WOMAN GETS HUSBAND'S INSURANCE.

Although divorced, Mrs. Maggie M. Rogers, of Cranford, will receive the bulk of $3,000 under a claim against the Independent Order of Foresters, made by her upon the death of her husband, James Rogers, July 5. Vice-Chancellor Stevens decided Tuesday that the woman was entitled to seven-eighths of the money and a minor child one-eighth.

At the time Rogers died he had a second wife living, Anne Lord Rogers. The Forester's certificate for the death benefit claim was made out in favor of the divorced wife and had never been changed. The woman, in claiming the money, declared herself to be Rogers' wife.

Learning of the divorce, the Foresters obtained an injunction preventing the divorced wife or the surviving wife from suing the lodge, agreeing to pay the money into court for distribution.

Mrs. Maggie Rogers came into court yesterday with a release from the second wife to any claim on the money, and the vice-chancellor then ordered the distribution. He also ordered the divorced woman to pay all court expenses attending the settlement of the case.

$15,000 FIRE AT HOPATCONG.

Fire caused by a defective flue, destroyed the summer cottage of William P. Hardenbrook Tuesday night. The building was valued at $5,000 and contained a library estimated to be worth $10,000. Nothing was saved.

The family of Mr. Hardenbrook had taken possession of the cottage Tuesday and proposed to spend the Christmas holidays there. Mr. Hardenbrook resides during the winter in Brooklyn. He is a retired army officer.

The cottage was situated at the mouth of the River Styx. The family barely had time to pick up their wraps lying in the hall before the entire lower floor burst into flames. An hour later nothing remained but the foundations and a part of the chimney.

To Locate Dividing Line.

The exact location of the line dividing the municipalities of Fanwood and Westfield is to be determined by the engineers representing both towns, and the line is to be marked with monuments, so that there will be no dispute over the matter in the future. For more than a quarter of a century there has been a standing dispute over the exact direction of the line, which is mostly across farms that have to be assessed in both places. The assessors of both sides have been making the acreage on their side of the imaginary line as great as they could, with the result that one farm, for which the deed claims sixty acres, is assessed for ninety-two, counting the acreage claimed each side of the line. The records on file in Essex and Union counties will have to be consulted in order to accurately determine the original line.

CHINESE BASEBALL TEAM TO VISIT COUNTRY.

A Chinese baseball team will invade the United States next spring, according to plans announced last night by Robert Yap, a resident of Chicago. The team contemplating the trip is the Chinese Athletic Club of Honolulu, and will be the first Chinese baseball club to visit this country.

Mr. Yap Tuesday received a letter from his brother, who is vice-president of the Chinese Athletic Club, to the effect that the citizens of Honolulu had subscribed $6,000 toward the trip. The team is composed of students and former students of Hawaiian colleges. Mr. Yap will confer with Pat Page, pitcher of the University of Chicago team, who managed the Japanese baseball team which played in this country last year. He hopes to book contests for the Chinese players throughout the country.

Tim Jordan is in Demand.

Tim Jordan, who two years ago delighted the Brooklyn fans with home run swats, is much in demand among the majors again. Charley Ebbets sent Timothy to Toronto of the International League last year, and he whacked the pill so savagely in the land of the Canucks that big leaguers in need of a first sacker are tumbling over themselves to buy him from Manager Joe Kelley, of the Maple Leafs. Pittsburg is said to be hot after him, and so is Detroit. This suits the management at Toronto, for Tim was not drafted, and the only way he can be secured is for the club desiring his services to outbid the other, all of which will help the treasury of the International League team. Of course, Marty O'Toole figures will not be in demand, but something in the neighborhood of $7,000 may secure Big Tim.

Huff to Scout for Americans.

President Ban Johnson, of the American League, has stolen a march on President Murphy, of the Chicago National club, by signing George Huff, considered one of the best scouts in the country, who has been acting in that capacity for the Cubs for many years. President Murphy, of Chicago, expects to engage the veteran Billy Hamilton as scout in place of Huff. So far as is known neither has Plainfield on his list.

Globe-Trotting Motorists.

Dr. Charles G. Percival, New York editor, and George D. Brown, of Detroit, globe-circling motorists, arrived in St. Louis yesterday afternoon, after an eight-day trip from Kansas City. They have covered 39,200 miles in the last seventeen months. The car has averaged 115 miles a day for sixteen months and has made 11.5 miles on each gallon of gasoline.

REFUSES TO ACCEPT $2,000 WHICH IS DUE HIM.

For ten years Benjamin Flusser, of Newark, has not seen his brother, and now that he has found him he has had him committed to Bellevue Hospital, Manhattan, for observation as to his mental condition, because the brother refused to accept $2,000 which belongs to him.

When Benjamin accidentally discovered his long-lost brother, Joseph Flusser, shoveling coal into a cellar in Grand street, New York, Monday, and told him he wanted to give him his $2,000, Joseph smiled and said:

"I don't want nobody's money. Give away the money, and please go away and let me work."

"Now," said Benjamin, "my brother cannot be in his senses. He will not sleep in a home and has a place under the Williamsburg Bridge. He hates to be in a home and won't work in a store. I want to give him a good home, and I could get him a good job, but he will stay with nobody. He runs after wood and coal carts until they are ready to be unloaded and then he helps.

"Sometimes they give him ten cents, sometimes fifteen and maybe a quarter. They say he will not take a quarter, saying he does not want anyone's money, while lots of times he works and then goes away without looking for any money or waiting for it."

The money-hating brother is forty-four years old and came from Austria. Before leaving Europe he was one day leaning over a bridge watching bathers below, when the rail against which he leaned snaped and he fell on his head many feet below, striking a pile of lumber. After that he was semi-conscious for six months and did not recover his mental or physical strength for a year. That was twenty-eight years ago.

New Rahway Police Chief.

LINING OF EGG SHELLS SUBSTITUTE FOR SKIN.

Discovery by Dr. Max Staller, surgeon at Mount Sinai Hospital, Philadelphia, that the white lining, or membrane, of egg shells can be used with success as a substitute for human skin in grafting operations, may revolutionize the methods of treating burns and scalds.

Experiments have been made at the hospital for a period of more than three months, and in every case the victims of burns have been benefited. In one case a woman was so fearfully burned that doctors believed she would not live through the operation. The new treatment proved successful, and she will soon be able to leave the hospital.

The lining of egg shells is really the skin of embryonic chickens, and contains cells similar to the human skin. When placed on a burned surface the cells multiply and the membrane becomes larger and larger, until it joins with the other pieces placed on the flesh at distances of an eighth to a quarter of an inch apart. In the course of weeks the surface is covered with new skin.

It has long been the custom in cases of serious burns to graft skin from a healthy person to the affected part of the patient. In many cases it has been impossible to find persons willing to give their skin, and as a result the patients have died. If the new method is adopted in general practice, it is believed that many lives will be saved.

TRUST GIVES $500,000 TO ITS EMPLOYES.

Five hundred thousand dollars has been appropriated by the executive officers of the International Harvester Company for Christmas distribution among 2,000 employes of the company.

The officials said the gift is in no sense a Christmas present—merely a sharing of the year's profits of the organization's worthy workers. "Length of service or position will not entitle employes to participate," said George A. Ranney, assistant treasurer. "Special merit is the sole basis for recognition."

From Convent After 20 Years.

Four Carmelite Sisters left the mother house, at Caroline and Biddle streets, Baltimore, recently to establish a new convent at Davenport, Ia. Three of them have been stationed at the convent for more than twenty years, and this is the first time for them to set foot outside of the convent walls since the day they entered. The Carmelite order is the most austere in the Catholic church, and having once taken the vows of the sisterhood, the members are never allowed to leave the convent except in such a case as the founding of a new institution.

HERMIT'S ESTATE SHRINKS WHEN INVENTORY'S TAKEN.

The fortune of Henry H. Richards, who formerly lived in a hut in Elizabeth avenue, Cranford, and who died at the home of his niece, Mrs. Bishop, of Salem avenue, Elizabeth, has dwindled from $100,000 to about $30,000.

According to his will Mr. Richards left $2,000 to Mrs. Bishop and Miss Annie Ayres, of Elizabeth. Both are to have the interest on this sum during their lifetime and at Miss Ayres' death the $2,000 will go to the First Presbyterian church, of Springfield. The sum of $100 was left to Mrs. H. H. Richards, who is now contesting the will.

The balance of the estate goes to Gertrude and Harry Darby, children of William Darby, of Mountain avenue, Westfield.

TO WHEEL HIMSELF AROUND WORLD IN INVALID CHAIR.

William M. Graff, unable to walk a step, is staying in Elizabeth prior to starting on a tour around the world, wheeling himself in an invalid chair. He has just completed a tour of the United States upon which he wheeled himself over 22,000 miles. He makes his living by selling postal cards.

SPIKING IS ABSOLETE.

One reads in the war news that the Italians found the guns in the Tripoli forts "spiked." If that is meant literally, they must have been guns of mainly antiquarian interest.

The expression "spiking guns" is a survival from the day when all that was necessary to put a gun out of action (provided, of course, that you had access to it) was a large nail, or spike, and a hammer. You simply drove the nail into the touchhole at the breech. If the nail was long enough to turn round at the end, on the bottom of the bore, so much the better.

It is just as simple, perhaps simpler, to put a modern gun out of action. All you want is a hammer. The breech block of the modern gun is held closed by screw threads, after the breech block is shut on the shell, a turn of two or three inches engages the threads. By knocking a burr on these threads you prevent them engaging. Any attempt to fire the gun without the breech block being perfectly closed would, of course, be of material assistance to the enemy.—Manchester Guardian.

Girl Objects to Word Obey.

"I wouldn't promise to obey any man," Mrs. Mabel Walter Hough, of Portland, Ore., told her fiancee, Henrich Rouseau, when he proposed to her several weeks ago. So the fiancee bought two tickets for Elgin, Ill., where Police Magistrate George R. Thompson has revised a wedding ritual in which the clause "cherish and protect" is substituted for "obey." The couple were married later in the day.

MANY FOREIGNERS IN THE STATE PRISON.

The statistics concerning the inmates of the State prison at Trenton, recently made public, contain much interesting data. Of the prison population on November 1 of 1420, no less than 229 were Italians, compared with 314 from all other foreign countris and 355 born in New Jersey.

The nationality that comes nearest to the Italian is Austro-Hungary with 93; Germany coming next with 64. While the Italian convicts have increased in ten years from 52 to 229 the number of Jersey-born convicts has decreased by 22 in that period. The Irish-born represent only 23 of the prison population.

ANOTHER WOMAN ON BOARD.

Montclair Mayor Appoints Mrs. T. H. Taylor to School Berth.

Mayor Ernest C. Hinck, of Montclair, who on Tuesday appointed his sister a member of the new Board of Education, yesterday announced the appointment of another woman, Mrs. Jettie E. Taylor, to the Board, which will have a membership of nine. Mrs. Taylor is the wife of Thomas H. Taylor, of No. 109 Llewellyn road. She is a graduate of the Omaha (Neb.) High School. Mrs. Taylor is prominent in the Montclair colony of New England women. Two sons and two daughters of Mrs. Taylor were students at the Montclair High School and two of them afterward were graduated from college. A third son is a student in the Montclair High School.

DEMOCRATS NAME MARTIN.

Assemblyman Thomas Martin, of Union Hill, was chosen as the candidate of the Hudson county members of Assembly for minority leader at a caucus last night. The vote was 7 to 5, Charles M. Egan, of Jersey City, being Mr. Martin's opponent. Twelve members out of the twenty-three that will compose the Democratic minority in the next Assembly the Hudson delegation will be in control, and unless some of the members from Hudson bolt Mr. Martin is assured of election.

Montclair Street Singers.

The old English custom of street minstrels will be revived in Montclair on Christmas Eve if the plans of the members of the Christian Union Congregational church are successful. It is hoped to establish this practice as an annual feature of the Christmas celebration. To signal the singers to stop and serenade houses it has been arranged that lighted candles be placed in the front windows. It is proposed to have a number of bands of minstrels.

Miss Christena Broek, of Grand Rapids, Mich., who has been visiting her brother, Rev. John Y. Broek, for the past week, expects to return to her western home on Saturday.

HOLIDAY ON 'CHANGE TO BE A TRIPLE ONE.

After keeping the street in suspense since the last regular meeting of the governing committee a week ago the Stock Exchange authorities announced yesterday that the Exchange would be closed on Saturday, making a triple holiday over Christmas. The action was taken at a special meeting of the committee called to act on the petition of the members for the extra holiday, which was sent down to the floor again after last week's meeting for more signatures.

Every other Exchange in the financial district has decided to close, and of course the Curb market will follow suit. The English markets and most of the Continental Exchange will also be closed, as will the Chicago Board of Trade and the principal markets in this country outside of New York, making the period from Friday afternoon to Tuesday morning a world's holiday in the financial and commodity markets.

Welsh; vice-councilor, George VanOrden; recording secretary, J. L. Bennett; assistant recording secretary, J. G. Bicknell; conductor, L. C. R. Dunham; examiner, A. T. Stryker; inside protector, C. S. Wilson; outside protector, F. L. Soper, Sr.; representative to State Council, G. E. Thomas; organist, George F. Watts. The installation will take place January 3.

Death of Miss Debbie.

Miss Katherine Debbie, daughter of Justice S. P. Debbie, of Murray Hill, died at her parents' home this morning. She had been ill ten days with a complication of troubles. The young woman was twenty-one years old and had many friends in this section. She is survived by several brothers and sisters.

Seventh Annual Ball.

The Young Men's Hebrew Association at its meeting last night made arrangements for its seventh annual ball to be held in Sebring's Hall on New Year's night. Charles Suhr's orchestra will furnish the music.

The sewing and cooking classes of Warren chapel will be omitted for two weeks. The next day of meeting will be Saturday morning, January 6.

The Jr. O. U. A. M. Councils of the city have leased Columbus Hall as a meeting place and will take possession April 1 of next year.

HOW TO TREAT CARBOLIC VICTIM.

One of the most frequent irritant poisons used for suicidal purposes is carbolic acid, and a more agonizing death could not be selected. Why anyone should select this poison it is hard to understand unless on account of the fact that it is cheap and easily obtainable. This form of poisoning can usually be easily recognized by the odor, which is well known, and by the white burns or marks on the lips and mouth which are typical of carbolic acid poisoning.

Send for the nearest physician, and in the meantime, as carbolic acid kills quickly, the first aid treatment must be prompt in order to get results. If possible cause the patient to vomit, by giving an emetic, such as ipecac or salt and water, a tablespoonful to a pint of warm water. This, however, frequently fails to work on account of the irritated condition of the mucous membrane of the stomach. One of the best chemical antidotes is epsom salts in solution. Another good chemical antidote is alcohol—the only trouble with this remedy being that it cannot be given in a pure form. It has to be diluted with water, and for that reason loses its efficiency. Just exactly why alcohol counteracts the effect of carbolic acid is not known, but if, for instance, carbolic acid is splashed on the hands if they are at once immersed in absolute alcohol there will be no resulting burn.—National Magazine.

SKIRTS RUFFLED TO THE WAIST.

Another evidence, besides fringe, that the mid-Victorian era is inclined to influence the present clothes question is the adoption of ruffled dress skirts—ruffles to the waist being made with scant fullness and edged with satin bindings, or very narrow Tom Thumb fringe, or a line of beads, or, possibly, ball fringe. Frequently these scant ruffles are made of marquisette chiffon, lace or other diaphanous material that gives a stylish voilage to a contrasting satin foundation and the effect is truly excellent.

Another smart way of using ruffles is to make them of gathered Valenciennes lace, about an inch wide, set on with a line of soutache or rat-tail braid in a color. An afternoon costume treated in this way was most effective. The skirt of silver gray satin was overhung with a straight-around skirt of self-colored marquisette, modified at the hips by pin tucks to achieve a close fitting, and lapped down the left side of the front with purple satin buttons to a little distance below the knee, where it spread slightly for walking, revealing the inner skirt lining of purple chiffon.

A trimming of seven rows of gathered Valenciennes lace, each headed with narrow, purple rat-tail braid, was set around to knee height, there being about two inches of space between the ruffles. The peasant bodice of all-over Valenciennes lace, made small purple buttons, had a flat frill of the lace edging, headed with purple rat-tail, set at the neck and sleeves. The notable style feature, says Vogue, however, was the smart little coat of silver gray satin, which had large Venise lace revers, edged with an inch-wide band of purple satin cord defining the waist line. A high Pierrot hat of white Tagal, with a purple velvet brim and an upstanding trimming of white wheat, was altogether stunning, as also was the purple velvet parasol, shirred on the outer edge of each panel in the new "palm" style.

It has been asked why the suffragettes broke a tea shop window. The answer is simple; it must have been because they were aiming at something else.—London Opinion.

Dry Cleaning

like everything else, is cheapest when you get the best, for your garments are cleaned and pressed better—and therefore the work lasts longer and is better for your clothing or household furnishings.

Besides a saving, good cleaning is sanitary. Since this is so, get the best, for handwork in small tubs is sure to carry some dirt along from other clothing belonging to other people.

You don't experience anything of that nature in a first-class place.

TO PRESERVE ROCK

ly know of its existence. But in the old days people had leisure for something beside the views from the Jersey Central trains and the subway.

"The time referred to in this narrative is undoubtedly the summer of 1777, the latter part of that famous campaign back and forth across the Jerseys, when, as some writer observes, 'Washington played his masterly game of tag with the British, but managed to be always It.' It was about the end of May that he broke up his camp at Morristown and shifted it to Middlebrook(now Bound Brook) ten miles from Brunswick:

"'Sullivan with his division was stationed on the right at Princeton,' (I am quoting Washington Irving). 'With the rest of his force Washington fortified himself in a position naturally strong among hills in the rear of the village of Middlebrook. His camp was on all sides difficult of approach and he rendered it still more so by intrenchments. The high grounds about it commanded a wide view of the country around Brunswick, the road to Philadelphia and the course of the Raritan, so that the enemy could make no important movement on land without his perceiving it.'

"The object of this move was, undoubtedly, to keep a close watch on Sir William Howe, whose army had been in winter quarters at Amboy and New Brunswick, and to prevent his recrossing the Delaware and moving on Philadelphia. He had not long to wait, for—

"'On the night of June 13th General Howe sallied forth from New Brunswick, as if pushing for the Delaware, but his advanced guard halted at Somerset Courthouse(now Millstone village) eight or nine miles distant. Apprised of this movement Washington reconnoitred the enemy from the heights above the camp.' (With the heavy timber growth of those early days, what spot more likely than Washington Rock?) 'The enemy, however, instead of giving battle rested on their arms, took up a strong position, having Millstone Creek on their left and the Raritan all along their front, and proceeded to fortify themselves with bastions.

"'It was a question with Washington whether their action was a real move towards Philadelphia, or an attempt to lure his little army from their strong position.'

"After several moves and countermoves the before mentioned skirmish with Lord Stirling (whose division by the way, was said to be waiting at the "Metuochin Church") took place. He was obliged to fall back to the heights, and was followed as far as Westfield by the British, where they halted, disappointed in the main object of their expedition, i. e., to draw Washington into a general engagement. The British commander reported:

"'Pursuit continued as far as Westfield only, the day proving so intensely hot, the soldiers could with difficulty march no further." (We who know what the plains of Jersey can be on a sizzling June day cannot, under the circumstances, but compassionate the scarlet-clad British soldier; nor do we wonder that he was glad to retreat, via Spanktown—now Rahway—to Amboy, board his ships and sail away, so closing the campaign in the Jerseys. A proceeding, we are again told, that Washington watched from the heights.)

"The other reference Ihave chosen to prove the claims of Washington Rock to our interest and protection is even more to the point, because more intimate and local. It is an extract from a letter dated November 25, 1897, written by the late George W. Fitz-Randolph to Mrs. John F. Harmon; Mrs. Harman having written him at the request of the Continental Chapter of the D. A. R.

"'In the year 1777 or '78 Washington, with 6,000 men was encamped on the Ridge at Middlebrook near and west of Bound Brook. The British army were encamped at New Brunswick, Rahway and Perth Amboy, making incursions in the surrounding country. Doubtless with an intent of guarding against a serious incursion or surprise, Washington was on his way to the top of the mountain back of Green brook. Be that as it may, he, with an aide-de-camp, mounted, rode in the gateway and up to a group of men standing between the house and the barn on the farm, now known as the Jonah Vail farm. Washington said: "Can any of you gentlemen guide me to some spot on the mountains from whence a good view of the plain below can be obtained?" Edward Fitz-Randolph, one of the group, said: "I know of the best point on the mountains for that purpose" and added that, if he had his horse, he would take him to it. Thereupon the General requested his aide to dismount and await his return. Fitz-Randolph, mounted upon the aide's horse, piloted the General to the Rock, which today bears the historic name of "Washington's Rock."

"I have given the above nearly word for word, as given to me by Ephraim Vail, who died a few years since, aged 90 and over, on the farm where he was born and raised. Josiah Vail gave me the same version of the incident; indeed any of the old residents of Green Brook would corroborate the same were they alive. All these Vails were Quakers, owning adjoining farms, and their word is as reliable and authentic as are similar facts which, in the same way, make up history.

"'Edward Fitz-Randolph (my grandfather) mentioned above, was at the time a young man, unmarried, living with his parents at Piscataway, and was visiting his friends at Green Brook; on this particular day he was visiting John Vail,(grandfather of Josiah Vail, whose son now lives on the farm. He, Fitz-Randolph, was an ardent Quaker and sat with Ephraim Vail and others on the facing seat in the old Meeting House by the depot, which he, being a mason, helped to build in 1788.

(Signed) "Geo. W. Fitz-Randolph."

"This, then, is the story of the Rock. It cannot be called tradtion, for the history quoted was written at a time hardly more distant from the Revolution than are we of today from the Civil War, and the local evidence was given almost viva voce.

"By both of these it seems to be clearly and easily proved that here at our doors is an historic site—one of far more beauty and interest than hundreds that have, in the last quarter of a century, been marked and dedicated all over our country. Why has Plainfield and neighborhood taken no interest in it? Why have we done nothing to put these facts into concrete and lasting form and make it the heritage of our children? We hesitate to charge Plainfield with lack of public spirit or patriotic zeal. It has been shown that from time to time attempt has been made to mark the rock in some suitable manner. Why have these failed? Well, largely, perhaps, because of the uncertain ownership of the property. A monument there today—a stone crusher or real estate boom tomorrow. No certainty of the permanency of any contemplated memorial. That, of itself, was enough to take the life out of any schemes.

Now this condition is changed. The Rock has been purchased by Charles W. McCutchen, and will be held in trust for the people of Plainfield and North Plainfield that it and its associations may become the heritage of their children.

To the Continental Chapters of the Daughters of the American Revolution has been entrusted the task of providing some suitable memorial to mark the spot, and make permanent its historical significance. The Chapter has a nucleus in the funds raised by them a number of years ago for the purpose, but it is their desire, as well as the earnest wish of Mr. McCutchen, that the marking of the rock shall be the work and privilege, not of their organization alone, or of fifty or a hundred "prominent citizens," but that all the people of Plainfield and North Plainfield shall have part and lot in this heritage, and that, for the sake of their civic pride, their veneration for the past, their interest in the future, they shall so write upon it its story, that it may be preserved for their children's childrens."

COURT UPHOLDS THE FRANCHISE TAX ACT.

Justice Trenchard, in the Supreme Court at Trenton yesterday upheld the constitutionality of the Voorhees franchise tax act, levied on a basis of gross receipts as applied to railway companies doing interstate business.

The suit was brought by the Phillipsburg Horse Car Company against the State Board of Assessors to have set aside the franchise tax levied upon the company in 1910, as unconstitutional. The company maintained that its receipts should be divided into interstate and intrastate classes and the tax applied only to the latter, but the court did not take this view of the matter.

GUNNER IS SHOT.

Constantino Dall'Ava Injured Near Dundee Lake.

Constantino Dall'Ava, proprietor of a hotel at No. 240 Dayton avenue at Passaic, is in a critical condition in his home with a bullet wound in his thigh, which he received late yesterday afternoon while shooting at Dundee Lake, near Passaic.

With Louis Bondonno he was walking on the edge of a large farm owned by John Hillman. According to their story, a man ran toward them and fired several shots. Mr. Dell'Ava fell and the man hurried away. Two bullets passed through Mr. Bondonno's coat.

Mr. Bondonno carried the injured man through the woods a distance of half a mile and then took him home in a wagon.

TEAR DOWN HOUSE, FIND GOLD.

In tearing down an old house at Egg Harbor laborers found secreted in the walls pot of gold and silver coins amounting to $1,000.

From one of the town's older residents it was learned that a Mr. Hud, who had served in the Civil War, formerly occupied the house. After the war he had a pension, and instead of placing the money in a bank he secreted it in the walls of the house, fearing burglars.

LACKAWANNA DENIES COMMUTER CHARGES

Trenton, Dec. 21.—The Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad Company filed with the Supreme Court Tuesday its reasons under which it expects to upset the order of the Public Utilities Commission when it issued an order compelling the railroad companies to sell commutation tickets to and from points in New Jersey to Jersey City, Camden and other terminal points.

Some of the reasons follow:

"There was no evidence before the said board showing that the prosecutor is engaged in intrastate commutation service from points in New Jersey to Hoboken.

"There was no evidence before said board responsibly to support a finding or conclusion that the prosecutor subjects any passengers or the inhabitants of the city of Hoboken to any prejudice or disadvantage in the failure to grant commutation and other special rates for intrastate journeys to and from Hoboken.

"Said board did not find or determine that the prosecutor subjected any passengers or inhabitants of New Jersey to any prejudice or disadvantage in the failure to grant commutation or special fares to and from Hoboken.

"The said order is not relevant to the inquiry stated in the notice of the said board of the institution of the proceedings relating to the order hereinabove referred to.

"The making of said order in the form and substance in which it was made is not within the powers of the said board.

"Said board had no power or jurisdiction to order the sale of tickets for commutation service or the sale of tickets at special rates between Hoboken and other points in New Jersey."

STATE TEACHERS WILL HOLD ANNUAL SESSION.

Atlantic City, Dec. 21.—Extensive preparations are being made for the fifty-seventh annual meeting of the New Jersey Teachers' Association, which convenes here Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of next week in the High School auditorium.

Governor Woodrow Wilson has been invited to attend and will make an address at the opening session on Wednesday afternoon. Philander P. Claxton, United States Commissioner of Education, is also numbered among the speakers.

Professor Charles Boyer, superintendent of public schools of this city, and Principal Henry P. Miller, of the local High School, are each slated for an address.

The officers of the State association are as follows:

President, Powell G. Fithian, Camden; first vice president, George Morris, Bloomfield; second vice president, Miss Elizabeth Stringer, Newark; secretary, Charles B. Boyer, Atlantic City; treasurer, H. J. Neal, Bridgeton; railroad secretary, Miss S. Ida MacMahon, Trenton.

SAYS CITY WILL SAVE BY BUYING AUTO WAGON.

The purchase of an auto hose wagon for Hose Company No. 1 was recommended to the Summit Common Council Tuesday night by the Board of Fire Chiefs.

The board reported that the killing of one of the hose company's horses in a runaway one month ago made it necessary to purchase another horse and in the opinion of the members of the board it would be more economical to purchase an auto hose wagon, as the cost of the driver of the team of horses and their maintenance amounts to about $110 monthly, while the estimated cost of operating an auto apparatus would be but $65 monthly.

ROBBED WHILE HE WAS PREACHING.

While the Rev. Frederick Uhl was leading a prayer meeting in the Beverly Methodist church last night thieves broke into the parsonage adjoining, stole three watches, some jewelry, a pocketbook and some other valuables. The pastor discovered the theft when he returned from church.

The police have been unable to find any clue to the identity of the robbers, who gained an entrance to the parsonage by using a jimmy to wrench off a rear shutter. A month ago the parsonage of the Beverly Presbyterian church was robbed while the Rev. Arthur Phillips was conducting a service in the edifice adjoining.

WANTS PIECE OF THE MAINE FOR A CITY MONUMENT.

Mayor Morrison, of New Brunswick, announced yesterday that he will make application for a piece of the hull of the battleship Maine to be used as a monument in that city. Three New Brunswick young men were killed by the explosion of the Maine and that city erected a monument to their memory in Court House Park several years ago.

FRESH COCOANUT TOOTHSOME.

Although the dessiccated kind sold in packages has its uses, it is often sold when stale, and one cannot be as sure of it as of the fresh nuts.

When selecting a cocoanut choose one in which the "milk" can be heard when it is shaken. Punch open the small spots at the end of the nut to let out this liquor and then break it open with a hammer. The thin rind after breaking the shell away from the meat can be peeled off neatly with a French cook's knife.

A cocoanut can be grated in quantity at home and dried with sugar. It will keep fresh a long time and will not lose its delicate flavor. Grate the white meat on a platter and sprinkle with the sugar. Place it in the oven with the door open, so that it will dry slowly. The heating closet under the oven has been used in this way to advantage. The smallest cutter of the meat grinder may sometimes be used instead of the grater, and if it can it will save much time and patience. Some choppers cut the cocoanut into tiny lumps, which are not attractive. About one cupful and a half of grated cocoanut can be obtained from one nut rather under medium size. Fresh cocoanut grated in this way is also nice if slightly browned, but if a gas range is being used care must be taken not to place the cocoanut too near the flames, as it catches fire easily. Custards, bonbons and other sweets are improved by a sprinkling of this browned cocoanut.

Grated cocoanut may take the place of meringue on a pie and some palates will like it better. A few flakes should be folded through the filling and the covering should be delicately browned. Apple tarts treated in this way are very attractive. Fill the baked shells of puff paste with sweet apple sauce, sprinkle liberally with snowy cocoanut and put the tarts into the oven for five or ten minutes or until the filling has thickened and the cocoanut is a delicate brown.

Fresh, grated cocoanut may be used to advantage with strawberries in various desserts and other sweets. A cocoanut blanc mange, for example, is delicious if each plateful is served with a large spoonful of very ripe, mellow berries.

No two flavorings combine as well as orange and cocoanut. Sliced sweet oranges are often sprinkled with cocoanut and served for a dessert for a supper. Sliced bananas may be served with a snowy coating of sweetened whipped cream and sprinkled with a little fresh cocoanut. For a tutti frutti put sliced oranges and bananas in layers, sprinkling between with sugar and grated cocoanut and arranging over the top a decoration of maraschina cherries or very ripe strawberries rolled in powdered sugar.

A LOST WAGER

A passenger who recently came over on one of the smaller boats relates this incident. There was a chap on board who was much given to boasting about his skill with the rifle. The captain thought he'd take the boaster down a peg, so he said: "I don't think you could hit this bottle placed on the rail at twenty yards distant." The other replied that it would be mere child's play, whereupon the captain said: "I'll bet you ten dollars you don't hit three times out of six." The boaster promptly took him up and the test was made. At the first shot he hit the bottle and it disappeared in fragments in the sea. "Trot out another one," cried the shooter, triumphantly, getting his rifle ready. "Not at all," replied the captain. "The conditions were that you should hit that one three times out of six. You have to hit it twice more."—Boston Transcript.

Not What He Was After.

"You can take that ax and get up an appetite for a little dinner," said the farmer's wife.

"Lady," replied Meandering Mike, "what I was applyn' for was food: not physical culture."—Washington Star.

SAYBROOK WANTS TO BE PART OF ELIZABETH.

Annexation to Elizabeth was the principal topic at the annual meeting last night of the Saybrook Improvement Association, held in the headquarters, North Broad and King streets, Elizabeth. The sentiment of the members seemed to be that there was much to be gained by the project and it will be considered more fully in the near future. It is possible that some definite action may be taken shortly after the first of the year.

In the event of the annexation of Saybrook, which now seems quite probable, the city line would be extended from King street to the Lehigh Valley tracks, which divide that town from Lyons Farms, and the population of Elizabeth would be increased by 1,200.

The success that has attended the joining of Elmora with Elizabeth was one of the chief arguments advanced in favor of the project at the meeting last night. It is believed that if Saybrook is annexed Lyons Farms, which is wrestling with conflicting desires for municipal, township and borough forms of government, would soon follow suit.

SEEKS STATE AID FOR REPAIRS TO THREE ROADS.

State Road Commissioner Stevens will visit Elizabeth tomorrow for the purpose of investigating the request of the Board of Freeholders that Westfield, Rahway and Newark avenues, which were recently taken over as county roads after they had been under jurisdiction of the city for many years, be made State aid thoroughfares.

Commissioner Stevens consented to visit Elizabeth after he had been waited upon recently at his Trenton office by a committee from the Elizabeth board. At first he refused to consider the proposition, but after much persuasion, consented to give the matter his consideration.

All three streets are badly in need of repaving and are much used by automobile traffic. It was only when this fact was called to his attention that the commissioner consented to do what he could in having the State bear a part of the cost of repairs. Under the plan now being considered, the State will pay one-third of the total cost, with the remainder being met by Union county.

KUHN IS ACQUITTED OF MURDER CHARGE.

Jersey City, Dec. 21.—Charles Kuhn, the young man who shot and caused the death of Louis Foster in a lunch wagon at Garfield and Communipaw avenue a month ago, and who pleaded self-defense at his trial yesterday in Judge Carey's branch of the Hudson County Court of Oyer and Terminer, was acquitted. The jury was out less than fifteen minutes.

Enoch Abel, owner of the lunch wagon, had been placed under arrest for shooting a revolver near his wagon and was taken to the Communipaw avenue police station. He left Kuhn, a typist, in charge of the wagon. It appeared at the trial, according to Kuhn's testimony, that Edward McDermott, James J. Butler and Foster entered the lunch wagon and, after eating, refused to pay their bills. Kuhn remonstrated with them and a cup was thrown at him. He said this was followed with what he thought was an attempt to shoot him, and he seized a revolver and fired.

MINISTER WHO CONDUCTED GARFIELD FUNERAL DIES.

Long Branch, Dec. 21.—Word was received here yesterday of the death in New York late Tuesday night of the Rev. Dr. Charles J. Young, pastor of the Church of the Puritans, and for several years a pastor here. Death was due to heart disease. Dr. Young officiated at the funeral of President James A. Garfield at Long Branch on September 22, 1881, and for years conducted the gospel meetings at Norwood Park.

Dr. Young was 73 years old and is survived by a widow and four children. He was born in Scotland. For seven years he was pastor of the First Reformed church here, and later of the Elberon Memorial church.

Loses Voice Through Grief.

Grief over the loss of his two little daughters, Ethel and Flossie, who were killed Sunday when their sand pit playhouse caved in, physicians believe, has destroyed the power of speech of Andrew Hutchinson, of Kansas City, Kan. Hutchinson, a well-digger, suffered from an injury several years ago and for the last year has worked only a small part of the time. When the cave-in occurred, he ran to the sand pit and looked at the bodies of his daughters. He has been mute ever since, and physicians fear he will never speak again.

Raritan Canal Is Closed.

Bordentown, Dec. 21.—The Delaware and Raritan Canal closed to navigation yesterday morning at 7 o'clock. All boats which entered the canal before that hour will be allowed ample time to get out and then water will be drawn to the low level maintained during the winter.

The Kingdom Of Slender Swords

By HALLIE ERMINIE RIVES

The other was directly in front of the propeller, a perilous place. Only the guy wire was in his reach. Between them was a shuddering space. To land in the darkness to rid the aeroplane of that incubus was impossible. He must go on. Could he win with such a terrible handicap? He set his teeth. Tilting the lateral vanes, he soared in a wide serpentine, peering into the deep, resounding dark below.

Tokyo lay a vast network of tiny pin pricks of fire. He had never been so high before, had been content to sweep the treetops. To the left a bearded scimitar of light merged by blackness marked the bay. Daunt swung parallel with this. Pst-pst, pst-pst, pst-pst. The wind tore in gusts through the structure, the planes vibrating, the guys humming like the strings of a gigantic harp. His clothing dragged at his body. He was too high. He leaned over the mass of levers, and the glider slid down a long, steep descent till in the starlight he could see the blue gray blur of roofs, the massed shadows of little parks of trees. Now he was passing the edge of the city; now below him was the gloom of the ricefields. A low sobbing sound came in the wind. It was the bubbling chorus of the frogs, and across it he heard the bark of a peasant's dog.

To the right a dark hill loomed without warning, with a dim congeries of red tea houses. It was the famous Ikegami, the shrine of the Buddhist saint Ichiren, famed for its plum gardens. It fell away behind, and now far off a score of miles ahead grew up on the horizon a misty blotch of radiance. Yokohama! He swerved, heading out across the lagoon straight as the bee flies for the shimmering spot. Pst-pst, pst-pst—faster and faster spat the tiny explosions. The glider throbbed and sang like a thing alive, and the hum of the propeller shrilled into a scream.

Tokyo was far behind now, the pale glow ahead rising and spreading. To the right he could see the clumped lights of the villages along the railroad, Kamata — Kawasaki — Tsurumi. He dropped still lower, out of the lash of the wind.

Suddenly a flying missile struck the forward plane, which resounded like a great drum. A drop of something red fell on his bare hand, and a feathered body fell like a stone between his feet. A dark carpet, dotted with foam, seemed to spring up out of the gulf. Daunt threw himself at the levers and rammed them back. The glider had almost touched the sea—for a heartbreaking instant he thought it could never rise. He heard the curl of the waves and a cry from behind him. Then, slowly, slowly breasting the blast, it came staggering up the hill of air to safety.

The sky was perceptibly lightening now. Daunt realized it with a tightening of all his muscles. It was the first tentative withdrawal of the forces of the dark. Should he be in time? With his free hand he loosened the coil of the grapnel. Suddenly the chances seemed all against success. A feeling of hopelessness caught him. He thought of the two men he had left behind, waiting—waiting. What message would come to them that morning?

The engine was doing its best, every fiber of tested steel and canvas ringing and throbbing. But the creeping pallor of the night grew apace. Kanagawa—the glider swooped above it, left it behind. The misty glow was all around now; lights pricked up through the shadow. Yokohama was under his feet, and ahead—the darker mass toward which he was hurtling—was the bluff.

Slowly, with painful anxiety, he swung the huge float in to skirt the cliff's seaward edge. There was the naval hospital with its flagstaff. There beyond was the familiar break in the rampart of foliage, and there, flapping in the wind, was the awning on the flat roof of the Roost. In the dawning twilight it seemed a monstrous, leprous lichen, shuddering at the unholy thing it hid. Daunt threw out the grapnel.

He curved sharply in, aslant to the wind, flung down his prow and swooped upon it. There was a tearing, splintering complaint of canvas and bamboo; the glider seemed to stop, to tremble, then leaped on. Turning his head, Daunt saw the awning disappear like a collapsed kite. He caught a glimpse on the steep, ascending roadway of a handful of naked men running staggeringly, one straggler far behind. The thought flashed through his mind that these were the cadets from the Naval college. But they would be too late! The sun was coming too swiftly. The sky was a tide of amethyst—the dawn was very near! He came about in a wide loop that took him out over the bay, making the turn with the wind. For a fraction of a second he looked down on the squadron of battleships, a geometrical cluster of black blots from which straight wisps of dark smoke spun like raveled yarn into the formless obscurity. A shrill, mad laugh came from behind him.

Daunt was essaying a gigantic figure of light whose waist was the flat bungalow roof. It was a difficult evolution in still sunlight and over a level ground. He had now the semidarkness, and the sucking down drafts of the wind that made his flight, with its driving falls and recoveries, seem the careless fury of a suicide. Yet never once did his hand waver, never did that strange, tense coolness desert him.

As he swept back like a stone in the sling of the wind he saw the thing he had come to destroy. It had the appearance of a large camera set on a spidery tripod near the edge of the flat roof, its lens pointing out over the anchorage. Landing was out of the question. To slacken speed meant to fall. He must strike the machine with the body of the glider or with the grapnel. To strike the roof instead meant to be hurled headlong, mangled or dead, his errand unaccomplished, down somewhere in that medley of roofs and foliage. The chances that he could do this seemed suddenly to fade to the vanishing point. A wave of profound hopelessness chilled his heart.

With Phil's mad, derisive laughter ringing in his ears he dropped the glider's stem and drove it obliquely across. The grapnel bounded and clanged along the tiling, missing the tripod by three feet. On in an upward staggering lunge, then round once more, wearing into the wind.

There was no peal of laughter now from the man clinging to the steel rib. With the clarity of the lunatic Phil saw how close the swoop had been. The scourge of the wind and the rapid flight through the rarefied air had exalted him to a cunning frenzy. He had no terror of the moment—all his fear centered in the tomorrow. To his deranged imagination the black square on the tripod represented his safety. He had forgotten why, but Bersonin had made him see it clearly. It must not be touched. Daunt was the devil. He was trying to send him to the copper mines, to work underground with chains on his feet as long as as lived.

The glider heeled suddenly and slid steeply downward. Daunt gripped the levers and with all his strength warped up the forward plane. He felt a pang of sharpened agony. He, too, would fall! The crash was almost upon him. But the glider hung a moment and righted. Farther and farther he twisted the laterals till she swam up, oscillating. A jerk ran through her after framework; he turned his head. Clinging with foot and hand, his hair streaming back from his forehead, his lips wide, Phil was drawing himself inch by inch along the sagging guy wire toward him.

For a rigid second Daunt could not move a muscle. Then, caught by the upper wind, the perilous tilting of the planes awoke him. He swung head on, wavered and swooped a last time for the roof.

Pst-pst, pst-pst—crash! The curved irons of the grapnel tore away the coping—slid, screaming. A jolt all but threw him from his seat. There were running feet somewhere far below him, a battering and shattering of glass in the piazza. He felt a sudden clearance, and the big aeroplane plunged sidewise out over the bay, with a black, unwieldy weight that spun swiftly hanging on its grapnel.

A shout tore its way from his lips. Heedless of direction, he wrenched with his fingers to unship the grapnel chain. At the same instant the first sunbeam slid across the waves and turned the misty gloom to the golden blue glory of morning.

And with it, as though the voice of the day itself, there went out over the water, above the sweep of the wind, a single piercing sweet note of music like the cry of a great splendid bird calling to the sunrise. Fishermen in tossing sampan and sailors on heaving junk heard it and whispered that it was the cry of the kaminari, the thunder animal, or of the kappa that lures the swimmer to his death. An icy blast seemed to shoot past the glider into the zenith. Staring, Daunt realized that one of the great planes, the propeller, the after framework, with the man who had clung to it, were utterly gone; that the glider, like a dead bird caught by the thudding twinge of a bullet, was lunging by its own momentum—to its fall. Had Phil fallen or was it—

Suddenly he felt himself flung backward, then forward on his face. The spreading vanes, crumpled edgewise like squares of cardboard, were sliding down. He saw the shipping of the bay spread beneath him, the twin lighthouses, one red, one white, on the ends of the breakwater; the black Dreadnoughts, a steamer with bright red funnels, a fleet of fishing sampan putting out. All were swelling larger and larger. The wind blowing upward around him stole his breath, and he felt the blood beating in his temples. He heard ships' bells striking, and across the sound a temple bell boomed clearly. A mist was coming before his eyes. Just below him was a white yacht; it seemed to be rushing up to meet him like a swan.

Thoughts darted through his brain like live arrows. The battleships were saved! No shameful suspicion should touch Japan's name in the highways of the world. What matter that he lost the game? What did one—any one—count against so much?

He thought of Barbara. He would never know now what she had been about to tell him that night at the Nikko shrine. He would never see her again. But she would know—she would know.

The sound of the sea—a great roaring in his ears.

* * * * * * *

On the deck of the white yacht the captain rose to his feet. The battle fought on that huddle of blankets for the life of the man so hardly snatched from the sea had been a close one, but it had been won. His smile of satisfaction overran the group of observant faces at one side, the bishop watching with strained anxiety, and the girl, who pillowed in her arms that unconscious head with its drenched, brown curls.

"Don't you be afraid, Miss Fairfax," he said, with bluff heartiness. "He'll be all right now."

The assurance came to Barbara's heart with an infinite relief that he could not guess. At the first sight of the huge birdlike thing slipping down the sky she had known the man clinging to its framework was Daunt. The stricken moments while the wreck of the great vanes lay outspread on the water, the launch of the yacht's boat and the lifting of the limp form over its gunwale, the cruelly kind ministrations that had brought breath back to the inert body—these had seemed to her to consume dragging hours of agony. A thunder of guns roared across the water, but she scarcely heard. Her eyes were fixed on the face to which the tide of life was returning.

Again the roar, and now the sound pierced the saturating darkness. It called the numbed senses back to the sphere of feeling, to a consciousness of an immense weariness and a gentle motion. It seemed to Daunt as though his head rested on a pillow which rose and fell to an irregular rhythm. He stirred. His eyes opened.

Memory dawned across them. Haru's story, the windy flight on the glider, the sick sense of failure, the plunge down and down and the water leaping toward him! Had he failed? A third time the detonation rang out. He started, made an effort to rise. His gaze swept the sea. There, flags flying, bands playing, a line of Dreadnoughts was steaming down the harbor.

"The battleships!" he said, and there was triumph in his eyes.

He turned his head and saw the bishop, the silent crew, the relieved countenance of the captain. Realization came to him. Soft arms were about him; the pillow that rose and fell was a woman's heaving breast! His gaze lifted, and Barbara's eyes flowed into his. He put out a hand weakly and whispered her name.

She did not speak, but in that look a glory infolded him. It was not womanly pity in her face. It was far, far more—something wordless, but eloquent, veiled, yet passionately tender. He knew suddenly that after the long night had come the morning, after the pain and the misunderstanding all would be well.

HER DEAR ARMS WERE LIFTING HIM UP.

For an instant he closed his eyes, smiling. The darkness was gone forever. His head was on her heart, and it was her dear arms that were lifting him up into the sunlight, the sunlight, the sunlight.

THE END.

TO HER LOVER.

Oh, love me well—
But love me not alone!
Love the hot sword, the banner and the song,
The crowded way of sorrow and of wrong,
The dream no tongue can tell,
The enemy prone!
Yea, love not me alone—
But love me well!

Oh, serve me well,
But serve not me alone!
Serve all who will, the oppressor and the oppressed,
Serve all who will not; bare thine
aching breast!
Even though thou hear love's knell
Go bravely on!
Yea, serve not me alone—
But serve me well!

Paint that Stays Painted

That has been my slogan for years. I aim to do the best possible painting—using only the best materials that the manufacturers can furnish, and employing the most skilled mechanics that can be procured. I stand back of every job I do, and when I am allowed to use my own judgment in regard to the best method of doing it, I will gladly make good any work that by any chance proves defective.

The juniors defeated the seniors in a lively game of basketball at the Plainfield High School, yesterday afternoon, the final score being 24 to 7 . The juniors outplayed the upper classmen in both periods of the game. Heron was the star for the junior five, throwing baskets from all angles. Manley and Phillips did the best work for the seniors, scoring five and three points respectively. The lineup:

BURGLARS GET BUSY IN TOWN OF WESTFIELD.

Through the activity of burglars last night two houses in Westfield were entered, more than $200 worth of silverware taken and the intruders made good their escape without leaving a clue as to their identity. The houses entered were those of Clarence Smith, of South avenue, and William Brown, manager of the Westfield Water Co. Entrance to each house was gained through rear windows which were jimmied open, breaking the fastening. Once inside the burglar closed the window and opened the rear and front doors presumably so that in case he disturbed the residents he would have less trouble in escaping. These doors of both houses were found open when the occupants arose this morning.

At the Smith home a thorough search was made and the silverware taken. Something must have frightened the intruder at the Brown house before he had completed his hunt. A number of valuable Christmas presents were overlooked and so far as the family knew this afternoon nothing of value had been taken.

Mr. and Mrs. George A. Chapman, of West Seventh street, and their son, Percy Chapman, of New York, are registered at Atlantic City.

Invitations have been sent out by Mrs. Frederick Goodhue Mead, Miss Mead and Miss Fredericka Rutherford Mead for an "at home" on Friday, January 5, from 4 to 7 o'clock at Sunnyside, East Front street.

COUNCIL'S ROUTINE

Much Business of Minor Importance at the Adjourned Meeting.

SOME MATTERS REFERRED.

Astor Place Commission's Report Accepted—Contractor Granted Extension of Time—Water Resolutions.

Elliot T. Barrows, William A. Garrigues and J. Fred MacDonald, commissioners appointed to assess benefits and damages in the matter of laying out and improving Astor place, made their report to the Common Council at the adjourned meeting last night and it was confirmed by a vote of the members. The total cost of this improvement was determined to be $505.86, and according to the commissioners the city's share will be $36. The balance has been assessed on the property-owners.

Several tax appeals were referred to Corporation Counsel W. M. Stillman, and in this connection Mr. Stillman reported back about sixty appeals referred to him and he advised that the assessment in each case be allowed to stand.

Charles A. Peterson, who has a contract for sewer extension work, and Mobus & Burke, who have a contract for street improvements, were both granted an extension of time to May 1, 1912, to complete their work, owing to bad weather conditions.

The petition of Henry L. Hall and others for an electric light at Woodland avenue and Rahway road, was granted on motion of Councilman Clay, chairman of the light committee, and the petition of Walter Martin and others for two lights on Everitt place, was referred to the committee.

The Plainfield-Union Water Company informed the Council that the two two-way hydrants ordered had been installed. The State Board of Health in a communication stated that it had received the plans for the proposed improvement of the local sewage system, thanking the members for the same. A public hearing will be granted on this proposed work at Trenton on Wednesday, December 27.

Street Commissioner A. J. Gavett reported that eight sewer permits were granted the past month, and the report of Overseer-of-the-Poor A. D. Ayers was filed.

Councilman F. E. Mygatt presented a resolution, which was adopted, confirmatory of the action of the special committee, F. E. Mygatt, George S. Clay and F. L. Holt, in making an offer to the Plainfield-Union Water Company for its plant in this city. The city offered approximately a half-million dollars for the plant, and this action was take to make it official.

Councilman Herbert Buxton, chairman of the finance committee, explained that the police board tried to keep within its appropriation this year, but was obliged to exceed it by $125, and he offered a resolution which was adopted appropriating that sum out of money on hand. Councilmen Mygatt and Clay voted against the resolution, which led Mr. Buxton to thank the members who voted in the affirmative.

Mr. Buxton reported back a communication from the Plainfield Dental Society expressing its disappointment in not getting an appropriation for a dental clinic and in answer to a question, informed the society that the society could again make application for the money in January.

Mr. Buxton referred a number of petitions and communications in his possession to the 1912 Council. These included propositions of Patrick McDonough, W. R. Way and George W. Cole for the purchase of property in the city; the papers of Judge Gilbert Collins in the Kensington avenue opening matter and other legal matters attended to by him as special counsel; several matters of a legal nature attended to by W. L. Hetfield, Jr., and Judge W. A. Coddington. Mr. Mygatt also referred to the 1912 body several communications pertaining to garbage disposal and Board of Health matters. Mr. Clay also referred petitions in his possession to the 1912 body. Following a recess of fifteen minutes to consider an appeal case in the poor department, the Council adjourned to December 28. This will be the last meeting of the present body this year.

The State Trust Company will be open on Saturday evening from 8 to 9 o'clock for the convenience of business men who do not wish to carry their deposit over until Tuesday. 12 21 2

POST OFFICE RUSH

Three Big Mail Wagons Are Called Into Service For the Christmas Rush.

SCHOOL BOYS PUT TO WORK.

Extra Help In Various Departments—The Mail Matter Being As Promptly Handled As At Other Seasons.

Postmaster E. H. Bird is fully prepared to handle the holiday rush at the postoffice having a full complement of assistants in all departments. This morning three wagons were put into the service, being in charge of Charles H. Weaver, Frank Keller and A. B. Dunham. Their helpers are Burnett Doane, James Buckle, Jr., Gordon Moy, Raymond Kling, Ashley Burner and L. J. Krom, all Plainfield High School boys. With this force there will be no delay in securing a prompt delivery of the mail in the city and borough.

Everett G. Smith, who has been engaged to help in the registry department before, has again been employed for holidays and A. H. Stiglitz has been secured for all-round work in the office. Postmaster Bird is using the two special messengers and A. E. LaPorte, Jr., to face up the mail and cancel the stamps, which gives an adequate office force together with A. E. LaPorte. George A. Bailey and Howard F. Miller, who do nothing but attend to the outgoing mail.

Daniel Clawson has charge of the registry division, assisted by James Conklin, and W. B. Sharp, who is superintendent of the money order department and the Postal Saving Bank, is able to render valuable service in the registry department. The stamp department is in charge of Clarence B. Rittenhouse and William H. Thorn, with Elmer Squiers as an assistant. Ernest A. Millard is in charge of the general delivery and Edward T. VanWinkle is kept busy as superintendent of letter-carriers, seeing that the mail goes out on time. The regular force comprises twenty-three letter-carriers, three rural free delivery carriers, eleven clerks, together with the postmaster and his assistant, James Martin.

Mr. Bird, in speaking of the holiday rush today, said that he thought it was about as usual, the incoming and outgoing mail being especially heavy the past few days. Persons sending mail abroad attended to that far enough in advance to relieve the local office of a rush in that direction just now and most of the mail sent out and coming in is for and from points in this country.

BOTH SHOPLIFTERS

Women Arrested Here Plead Guilty to Offense in Union County Court.

TO BE SENTENCED JANUARY 10.

A. E. Force's Prompt Action Results In Ridding the East of Two Professional Shoplifters—Caught With the Goods On.

The two women arrested in the White Store September 6 and charged by A. E. Force with being shoplifters, pleaded guilty when arraigned before Judge Atwater in the Union County court at Elizabeth yesterday. They will be sentenced Wednesday, January 10. They were arraigned as Mrs. Annie Smith and Mrs. Kate Miller, the names they gave when arrested, but which had been proven fictitious by the local police. Judge DeMeza had fixed bail at $1,000 each, to await the action of the grand jury, which returned indictments against them.

After investigating several stories told by the women sufficient evidence was secured to lead the police here to believe that they had made an important capture. All indications were that the prisoners were members of an organized gang of shoplifters with headquarters in Brooklyn. The second day of the women's imprisonment here, two Polacks came from Brooklyn and claimed the prisoners as their wives asserting that their names were Annie Pasloski and Kate Butkuska and that they lived at 141 India street, in that city. The men were unable to tell satisfactorily how they knew the women were under arrest here and this fact led the police to believe that the women were sent here to operate and when they did not return home the men assumed they had been arrested. Following the trail to the Brooklyn address resulted in the information that the women had been arrested on a similar charge in Rome, N. Y., Jersey City and elsewhere, in each of these places they had escaped with light fines.

When taken into custody here the women wore a bag like arrangement under their outer skirts, a fold of which concealed a pocket-like opening directly in line with a slit in the bag. A shirring string held the latter in position and it was the breaking of this string on the bag that the Miller woman wore that attracted the attention of J. J. Varley, manager of the store, who caused their arrest. When searched at police headquarters the women had a lot of stolen goods in their possession.

WHITE XMAS SERVICE AT THE FIRST BAPTIST

"A White Christmas Service" will be held at the First Baptist church tonight under the auspices of the Sunday school, of which Arthur M. Harris is the superintendent. At this service, which is now an annual affair, members of the school will make presentation of gifts to the poor and the offering will be given to The Day Nursery. Features of the service will be the presence of the Cecelia String Quartet, of New York, and Frank L. Brown, of Brooklyn, superintendent of the largest Sunday school in the world, who will make an address. The program follows:

Prelude, organ; instrumental selection, Allegro, con brio, Hayden, Cecelia String Quartet; invocation, G. H. Batchelor; Psalm, school; responsive Scripture reading; offertory, "Minuet," Boocherini, Cecelia String Quartet; proclamation, "A Legend of Cathay;" violin solo, Miss Josephine Hills; presentation of gifts by beginners and primary departments; instrumental selections, (a), "Declaration of Love," (b), "The Mill," Cecelia String Quartet; presentation of gifts by junior and intermediate departments; instrumental duet, "Serenade," Schubert, 'cello and violin; presentation of gifts by main school, men's class and officers; song, school; address F. L. Brown; instrumental number, "Weinachts fantasie," Cecelia String Quartet; benediction, postlude, organ.

The local stores keeping open on Saturday night are invited to avail themselves of this privilege.

OVER 400 CHILDREN ELKS' XMAS GUESTS

The rainy weather this afternoon did not prevent more than 400 children as the guests of Plainfield Lodge, No. 885, B. P. O. E., from attending a performance at Proctor's theatre. Although the doors were not open until 2 o'clock, long before noon the little ones began to arrive about the big iron gates in front of the theatre.

As the time for opening the doors drew nearer, the crowd became so great that a hurry call was sent to members of the order to assist the committee. Patrolman McDonald and the employes of the theatre also lent a hand in lining up the children along the curb. This arranged, the string reached from the White Store to the postoffice and when the doors opened the little ones were marched into the theatre and seated in an orderly manner. On their way out, after seeing the wonderful pictures, hearing the jokes and tuneful melodies of the special bill prepared by Manager Sanderson, the committee saw to it that each child received a box of candy, an orange and a ticket which may be exchanged for stockings, mittens and a cap at the store named on the coupon.

WENT TO GET EGGS, MET A CHICKEN THIEF

When Domonic Devio, of Cottage place, went to his chicken coop shortly after 5 o'clock last night to make all secure for the night, and by chance perhaps to find an egg or two, he was more than surprised to find a full grown, adult, colored man helping himself to the chickens. A bag nearby contained several and the man was in the act of stuffing another struggling pullet into the sack when Revio entered.

In the fast fading light the men came to a clinch. Revio was no match for his antagonist and after a short scuffle was thrown into a corner half stunned by a stinging blow on the head. Regaining his feet behind, the thief made his escape, going so hurriedly that his hat flew off. With this clue and three hens in the sack which are not his, Revio called at police headquarters and spread the alarm. The three hens in the sack made it evident that the chicken fancier had visited some other hennery before calling at Revio's. With visions of claims on the hens from poultry raisers in the vicinity soon coming in, the police went to work and are drawing a net about several suspects who answer the description of Revio's visitor.

Y. W. C. A.'S GLEE CLUB MRS. F. G. MEAD'S GUESTS.

Gathered around an open hearth fire at Mrs. Frederick G. Mead's home on East Front street, last night, the Glee Club and Orchestra of the Young Women's Christian Association gave an entertainment in the nature of a house-warming in the rebuilt portion burned by the disastrous fire several months ago. The Christmas decorations gave an atmosphere for carols of other days to be sung.

Between selections, all lights were lowered and E. T. Barrows gave an interesting informal talk on wood, the topic being suggested by the back log in the fire place. Refreshments were served and each guest received a sprig of mistletoe as a favor.

J. G. SHEA ASSEMBLY, K. OF C. DISTRICT TITLE.

Fourth Degree members of the Knights of Columbus of Elizabeth and Bailey Councils, Elizabeth, and Watchung Council, of this city, gathered last night in Watchung Council's rooms on East Front street in the first assembly meeting of district No. 1 and elected that John Gilmary Shea, Assembly No. 1, should be the name hereafter. Rahway is also in the district, but has not as yet any members qualified to become members of the assembly. The requirements of the degree rules providing that in order to be eligible third degree members must have been in that degree two years.

Matters of a routine nature aside from selecting the name came before the assembly and following the business session there was a banquet.

NEXT CITY CLERK?

Common Councilmen Confer as to Position Now Held by James T. MacMurray.

A RE-ELECTION IS PROBABLE.

F. H. Andrews, Robert L. Lee and W. R. Townsend Also Have Support—Overseer-of-Poor Talk.

Following the adjourned meeting of the Common Council, last night, the 1912 body held a conference to discuss the city clerkship and overseer of the poor for next year. All of the members were present, including the two Democrats, Fred Endress and F. J. Reville. According to several of them when seen today no decision was reached, but there are plenty of rumors as to the probable outcome.

One report today was that City Clerk J. T. MacMurray has the support of but four members for re-election, while another one was that he has six votes, sufficient to retain him in office. Among the reported candidates mentioned for the clerkship are F. H. Andrews, former Councilman Robert L. Lee and Tax Collector W. R. Townsend. One man who keeps in close touch with affairs declared today that if Mr. MacMurray, who has made a most efficient man and has given the greatest degree of satisfaction, is not re-elected, Mr. Andrews will be second choice.

The obstacle to harmony in the selection of a clerk is that many of the members want to insist that the man who holds the office shall give his time to it, that is be in the office during business hours, and for this reason it is said that if this is insisted upon, Mr. MacMurray could not retain the office.

Another member of the Council when asked today for the one best bet as to who would be the clerk for next year, hinted strongly that it would be Mr. MacMurray. It is well-known that the Democratic members cannot swing enough votes to elect a Democrat to office, although either one is sure to nominate a member of that party for the office. Who would be the choice of the Democrats is not known at present.

As for the position of overseer of the poor, practically nothing was done last night, according to the members who were interviewed today. An opinion was ventured, however, that Mr. Ayers had a sufficient number of votes in the Council to retain him in office. The plan talked of is to have the Council select Henry L. DeForest for the position, with the understanding that Mr. Ayers would be retained to do the actual work under Mr. DeForest's direction and draw the pay.

An official in speaking of the matter today said that he understood that the law required the overseer of the poor to be in the city, which could not be done if Mr. DeForest was appointed, he being engaged in the practice of law in New York. It was understood that should he be appointed he would sever his connection with the Charity Organization Society and also with the Board of Governors of the Muhlenberg Hospital. Another conference is to be held next week when the members hope that some decision will be reached before the 1912 Council goes into office.

Morris Pleads Guilty.

When arraigned before Judge William G. DeMeza in the city court this morning, William Morris, of East Fifth street, the young man suspected last August by a brakeman on a Chicago and Northwestern passenger train with being a robber and shot in the leg, pleaded guilty to the charge of drunkenness and panhandling. It was his second appearance before the court on the charge in two weeks. This morning his father was in court and promised that if allowed to take the wayward youth home, he would do so and in the future would see to it that there was no further cause for complaint. The court suspended a sentence of $20 or 60 days.

LAD LOOKS FOR SANTA, BUT POLICE GET HIM.

"It's pretty tough to keep awake all night waitin' for Santa Claus, but, gee, when you get arrested to boot, there ain't no fun in it, I can tell you."

Such was the plaint of the little towheaded youngster who was picked up before sunrise yesterday by Detective James Ward at Smith street and Elizabeth avenue, Elizabeth. The big plainclothesman was surprised to see the tiny chap standing on the corner, looking anxiously up and down the street. The diminutive watcher informed Ward that he was waiting for Santa, whom he believed to be somewhere in that vicinity.

"I heard some sleighbells when I was in bed and they seemed to be down this way, all right, so I got up and beat it right down here," he said. "There's a bunch of things I want for Christmas and I just wanted to put him wise to some of 'em. Say, you ain't seen anything of him, yourself, have you?" he asked with a note of hope in his voice.

The youngster was so excited that he couldn't tell his name nor where he lived so Ward took him to the Egenolf Nursery, where he was later claimed by a distracted parent. His name is George Benher, seven years old, and he lives at 632 Marshall street, quite a good many blocks from where he was found awaiting Kris Kringle.

Curtis charged that on the last registry day, October 24, he went there to register and found the election officers drunk.

The matter was thrashed out at a hearing before the County Board of Registry and Elections and Judge Atwater. At the hearing the board was exonerated.

Reilly, against whom Curtis made the most specific charges, then brought suit against him. The case was tried three weeks ago in the District Court.

HOBOKEN COUNCIL HELD UP MAYOR'S SALARY.

After a long fight between the Mayor of Hoboken and the Common Council, in which the former, George Gonzales, held up the salary appropriations made by the Council, the Council has turned the tables on the Mayor.

At a meeting of the Council Wednesday night a resolution was offered by the Committee on Finance and Salaries holding up all appropriations. Councilman Galuth then offered another resolution excepting the Mayor's salary from the provision, but when it was handed up to Chairman Anderson, the clerk pointed out that it had not been signed. Chairman Anderson smiled, and said: "Oh, well, if it hasn't been signed, we can't do anything with it at this meeting."

Accordingly, Mayor Gonzales will not receive this quarter's salary, amounting to $500, until after New Year's, when the Council again meets.

TERRIBLY BEATEN, MADE QUICK-CURE RECORD.

Surgeons and nurses at St. Joseph's Hospital, Paterson, declare that Joachim Kereluck, of Passaic, is entitled to the record for quick recovery from injuries that, to an ordinary man, might have been fatal. Kereluck was the victim of a savage beating during a brawl in the foreign quarter of Passaic. His skull seemed to be fractured in several places, his body was covered with bruises and a cut extended completely around his head above the ears. He was almost scalped.

In addition, Kereluck had been rolled about in the mud and his wounds were plastered with dirt. It was a sight to make a surgeon shudder at the certainty of wound infection. The wounds were washed, and then the surgeons closed them. "We couldn't stitch them up; we just basted him," said a nurse who knows something of dressmaking. Kereluck never flinched, and when it was over went to sleep. Not a trace of infection developed; not a complication of any sort, and he will be discharged in a few days.

SENTENCES OF SIX YEARS AGO VACATED.

Freehold, Dec. 22.—State prison sentences imposed six years ago upon Louis Huhn and Joseph Moore, of Long Branch, were vacated yesterday. Petitions were presented to Judge John E. Foster by Thomas P. Fay, asking clemency for the men. The petitions were signed by most of the ministers and many business men of Long Branch, as well as by Mayor E. W. Packer and the members of City Council. The sentences of one year in State prison were vacated, but fines must be paid.

Huhn and Moore, both young men just out of school at the time, were convicted for conducting a gambling house in the old Stockton house in Second avenue, Long Branch. Judge Foster sentenced them to one year in State prison and fined them $1,000 each. They appealed from the verdict and sentence, which the Supreme Court recently sustained.

In remitting the prison sentence, Judge Foster said he had made an independent investigation and found that both young men had led industrious upright lives since their conviction and he considered that they had suffered sufficiently.

MADE $10,000 RICHER BY UNSIGNED CODICIL.

Although Horatio Kretchmar, of New York, had made a codicil to his will in which he revoked a bequest of $10,000 to the Arthur Home for the Blind in Summit. It is likely that the institution will receive the money after all, the testator having failed to sign the codicil. This was declared yesterday morning by Mrs. Benjamin P. Holmes, a relative of Mr. Kretchmar.

Mrs. Holmes was the founder of the Arthur Home for Destitute Boys in Summit which property was later acquired by the managers of the Blind Babies' Home. She said that Mr. Kretchmar had for a long time given to a fund in the latter home for perpetuating a memorial crib for Julia Kretchmar, his sister.

The original will, which has been probated, provides that the $10,000 bequest shall be used for the erection of a stone chapel in connection with the home.

HACKENSACK REPEATER CONVICTED BY WOMAN.

Hackensack, Dec. 22.—Miss Mary E. Livesey, member of the Moonachie Board of Education, who so stirred up her associates in her efforts "to make things better and brighter," as she expressed it, and who was asked by the men members to resign, scored a triumph in the Hackensack courts yesterday when William E. Love, son of one of the two women janitors in the Moonachie schools, was convicted of attempting to vote twice at a school election August 26. Love is a brother-in-law of Mayor Robert L. Craig, and the Mayor is clerk of the Board of Education and a member of the board that asked Miss Livesey to resign. Mayor Craig aided Love's counsel, E. C. Irion, in the trial.

Miss Livesey testified that she saw Love vote soon after the election opened. Just before the polls were closed Love appeared and handed the teller a ballot.

A Vienna dispatch said Emperor Francis Joseph had only a cold and was in no danger.

ILLEGALLY WORN G. A. R. BUTTON CAUSES ARREST.

A warrant has been issued against Charles Davison, of Burnet street, New Brunswick, for wearing a Grand Army button without the right to do so. Walter J. Dey, of the Boggs-Janeway Grand Army Post, made the complaint before Justice of the Peace Charles W. Sedam. Davison declared the button belonged to his grandfather, Jonathan Davison, and no one could stop him from wearing it. Such an act is a misdemeanor under the State law and the officers of the post called Prosecutor T. B. Booraem's attention to the case.

Dire Extremity.

"I want a pair of gloves for my 'Enery," said the lady from Whitechapel, bustling into the outfitter's shop.

"About what price, madam?"

"About forpense."

"The cheapest we have in stock are one shilling a pair, madam."

"Oh, that's too much. 'Enery's going to a ball and 'e'll only wear them once."

"That's the best I can do, madam."

"'Aven't you any woolen ones at fourpence?"

"No, madam."

"Then there's no 'elp for it. 'Enery will 'ave to wash 'is hands, that's all."—London Telegraph.

Jordan to Stay in Toronto.

"Tim Jordan belongs to the Toronto Club. I know of no offer of $7,000 having been made for him by Barney Dreyfuss, owner of the Pittsburgh National League team, and unless I am away off, Jordan will be with the Maple Leafs in 1912." The foregoing was the statement made by Joe Kelley, manager of the Toronto Club, when he was asked what the chances were for the big first baseman joining the Pirates next spring. Kelley would not deny that Fred Clarke, the Pittsburgh chieftain, would like to nab Jordan to plug up the weak spot on his infield next season, but whether Pittsburgh would give such a handsome price as reported, he could not vouchsafe.

Pirates to Play Indoor Baseball.

Members of the Pittsburg Baseball Club who desire to take part in winter sports are not running any risk of being halted by the club officials. ENGINEER'S ACTION PREVENTS ACCIDENT.

Union Hill, Dec. 22.—The breaking of a drive-wheel and two driving rods of the locomotive of a Nyack express while that train was traveling at a high rate of speed came near causing a wreck on the Northern Railroad of New Jersey yesterday morning, the catastrophe being averted only by the quick action of Engineer William Johnson, who brought the train to a stop. Except for a shaking up no one was injured, but it was 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon before traffic was normal.

Due in New York at 10:45 a. m., the train, consisting of the locomotive and six coaches, passed through New Durham station at forty-five miles an hour. Johnson was devoting his attention to the signals when he felt a sudden jar of the engine. Instinctively he applied the air-brakes.

Fireman George Percell was on the left side of the cab of the locomotive, of the camel-back type, and when the jar came he rushed along the running board and flung himself down on the right side of the firebox.

When the train stopped Johnson found that one eight-foot drive-wheel and two connecting rods had broken away and were lying at the side of the track.

The accident necessitated the switching of all trains to the west-bound track, causing a considerable delay in traffic.

When the passengers found how narrow had been their escape they overwhelmed Engineer Johnson with their compliments for his presence of mind.

WINTER OFFICIALLY BEGINS AT 6 O'CLOCK

This is the shortest day of the year, and winter begins officially about 6 o'clock tonight, eastern time, according to the statement of the chief hydrographer of the navy.

Today is a few seconds shorter than yesterday, but the hours of sunlight are given as the same in the figures officialls given for yesterday and today as follows:

Sun rises 7:23 a. m.; sets 4:49 p. m., eastern time.

In years not leap years, December 22 is ordinarily the shortest day, with rare exceptions, due to the fact that the insertion of a day, called February 29, every four years, more than compensates for the actual amount of time in a year every 365 days of twenty-four hours' duration each. This remnant period is sometimes less than six hours. The result is that when twenty-four leap years have been added—or once a century—a leap year is skipped, and this keeps the official timers approximately straight in their bookkeeping.

Last year winter began at noon December 22, eastern time; in 1909 at 6 a. m., and in 1908 it was at midnight, December 21, making December 21 that year the shortest day of the year. Next year winter would normally begin at midnight on December 22. But next year February 29 is added, so that winter will begin at midnight December 21, eastern time.

The official figures computed by the chief hydrographer yesterday afternoon show today will be just six seconds shorter than yesterday. The sunlight yesterday is nine hours, forty-two minutes and thirty seconds. This applies to Washington.

"As you go north from Washington, the difference between yesterday and today increases. As you go south it decreases, until you reach the equator, where the days and nights are of the same duration."

COMPILED STATUTES OF STATE DELIVERED

The new compilation of the statutes of New Jersey authorized by an act of 1910 is completed and a limited number of copies of the work were delivered to John W. Weseman, custodian of the State House, Trenton, yesterday afternoon. The first set received by Mr. Weseman was delivered by him to Governor Wilson for his private office.

The compilation is entitled "Compiled Statutes of New Jersey, 1709-1910." It is in five volumes, bound in yellow buckram with red and gold title stamp. The fifth volume contains a copious index, list of acts repealed, list of acts omitted, etc. It was printed by Soney & Sage, of Newark, and the publication cost about $25,000. The act fixed the cost of publication at not more than $30,000 for five hundred sets.

The work contains all the acts of the Legislature to and including the session of 1910, of a general and permanent character in force at the close of the 1910 session, and is annotated with notes of the decisions of the courts of this State construing them. There is an appendix containing a table of the session laws from 1877 to 1910, inclusive, and another one containing a list of acts repealed at the time of the passage of the revised acts of 1874 and 1875. For facility of reference these repealed acts have been arranged in the order of the date of their passage. The work brings down to date the seventy-eight New Jersey law reports, the seventy-five New Jersey equity reports, the seventy-eight Atlantic reporter, the 185 Federal reporter, the 221 United States Supreme Court reports and the thirty-one Supreme Court reporter.

The work of the compilation had been undertaken several times since 1892 and the total cost to the State of the various attempts, including the money appropriated for this publication, has been about $145,000. The compilers, in the preface, give the following explanation of the delay in issuing the work:

"A new general statutes was authorized by the act of the Legislature in 1904 but, after considerable work had been done under the act, the Legislature, by act of 1908, repealed the act and authorized a revision of the statutes by a commission. This commission, after several years of effort, was compelled to abandon this plan as impracticable and impossible of completion within a reasonable time. This statement is made to the lawyers of New Jersey in explanation of the long delay in the publication of the work."

As provided by the act of 1910, the contract for the publication was made by the Governor, the chancellor and the chief justice, who were constituted a commission to do the work.

STATE IS THIRD IN MINERAL OUTPUT

In the annual report of the State geological survey State Geologist Henry Kummell will show that, considering the square miles, the State of New Jersey is third in mineral output. Figures he has been collecting for some time, based on the government census statistics and amplified from later and thoroughly reliable sources, show that the mineral production of Pennsylvania per square mile of territory last year was $12,254 in value; of Ohio, $4,705 per square mile, and New Jersey, third, with $4,278 per square mile.

The figures are amazing to the people who have never known or considered New Jersey as such a mineral-bearing and manufacturing State, and that she comes third in the value of her output in the form of manufactured products is astonishing to even commercial men acquainted with such figures.

The matter of manufactured articles had to be taken as a base for these figures, else ores carried from one State to another would have been mixed in the figures and might have been counted twice. This arbitrary arrangement for figures has some disadvantages, however, because all of the ore mined in Michigan and on the shores of the Great Lakes are counted in the mineral wealth of Pennsylvania, for it is manufactured into iron or steel in Pittsburg.

It will surprise people to know that the main mineral produced in this State is clay, the value of which is set down last year as $18,400,000. Zinc comes next, but it is small compared with the clay mines.

CADETS AND MIDDIES PUT ON AN EQUALITY.

Washington, Dec. 22.—Friends of the navy, who have long contended for legislation giving to graduates of the Naval academy at Annapolis the same consideration that has heretofore been given to West Point cadets namely, their mission at graduating at the end of the four year's course, had their efforts rewarded yesterday when the Senate passed the bill introduced by Senator Perkins at the extra session, which authorizes the issuance of the commissions as ensigns to midshipmen at the end of their four years' course at Annapolis.

Midshipment who shall be serving two years at sea, in accordance with existing law, shall have their commissions as ensigns immediately the act is passed. Midshipment of the class of 1909, who have completed their two years' service afloat, and are due for promotion, shall have their commissions take rank with other members of their class, according to their standing, as determined by the final mutiples, respectively, for the six years' course from June 5, 1911, the date of rank to which they were entitled prior to the passage of the act.

CHRISTMAS OBSERVED AT CITY HIGH SCHOOL

Christmas exercises were held at the Plainfield High School at 10:45 this morning, when an attractive program was presented. A feature was an address by Arthur Chute, of Nova Scotia, who spoke on the topic of "Peace." Mr. Chute gave facts and figures showing the enormous cost of war and then presented arguments in favor of peace, giving reasons why the people should ultimately expect peace among the nations.

The speaker said that he hoped the time would soon come when all nations would be at peace and that instead of war and rumors of war the peoples of the world would dwell in harmony. Mr. Chute is an entertaining speaker and his remarks were heartily applauded.

During the exercises Miss Helen Woolley presented to the school on behalf of the pupils, a fine picture entitled "El Capitan," and the gift was received for the school by Frank K. Cullen. Other features of the program included a vocal solo, "Nights of Nights," by Roy Titsworth; a violin duet, "Serenade," by Arthur Lewis and William Thorpe Phillips; also singing of Christmas carols by the school under the direction of Charles L. Lewis.

The second part of the program included the usual "roasts" between the seniors and juniors, after which the juniors gave the seniors a "spread" followed by a dance in the gymnasium.

STEAL UNDER LIGHTS.

With the flaming arc lights only a few feet away two daring robberies took place in Broad street, Newark, yesterday morning. The robbers smashed windows and in both cases got away with considerable loot. One of the places robbed was the jewelry store of the P. B. Levy estate, 641 Broad street, where goods valued at from $600 to $700 were taken. The other store entered was that of Truly Warner, 823 Broad street, where a number of hats were stolen.

Both robberies took place between 4:30 and 6 o'clock. At the Levy store a small stone was used to smash the window and a hole large enough to admit a man's hand was made in the glass. The robbery was discovered by Special Officer Cleary.

Named For Jobs.

The Democratic majority in the next Board of Alderman in Elizabeth caucussed last night and selected President Edward Nugent, of the board, for another term of one year. The other selections made were Drs. Higgins and Warncke, the present incumbents, as city physicians. Arthur Long, son of the late Police Captain John Long, was selected for page to the board.

UNITY LODGE CONDUCTS BIG PYTHIAS GATHERING

Unity Lodge, No. 102, K. of P., conducted a big Pythian rally in its castle hall in the Stillman building, last night. A delegation of sixty visitors from Henry Clay lodge, of Newark, together with Grand Chancellor Harry Keeler, who is one of its members, came over in special trolley cars. There were also representatives from lodges at Bound Brook, Somerville and other places.

The feature of the evening's program was the conferring of knightly honors on five candidates by the uniformed third rank team of Henry Clay lodge, considered the best in the State. The work was done in a most commendable manner, eliciting unstined praise from the spectators. The initiatory ceremonies were followed by a banquet, during which the grand chancellor and others made addresses.

Past Chancellor Jeremiah VanWinkle, Jr., was awarded a $5 gold piece offered some time ago by Past Chancellor Samuel Rothberg for the member who brought in the largest number of candidates. At the same time, Mr. Rothberg said he would introduce a candidate for everyone brought in by the lodge as a whole and kept his word. There is a waiting list of five for initiation at the present time. The members of Unity were warmly congratulated by Grand Chancellor Keller, who is greatly interested in the progressiveness of the Plainfield lodges. His visit last night was the third he has made to this city in the past two months. He urged the knights to continue their efforts to advance the order and promised his support at all times. Chancellor Commander Harry Moulton and other members of Unity made fitting responses.

Previous to the ceremonies the lodge met in regular session and nominated officers. The election will be held next Thursday night.

The committee in charge of the gathering was composed of Harry Werner, Charles DeGraw, Harry Moulton and J. H. VanWinkle, Jr.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

A new and original play this season—"The County Sheriff," by Lem B. Parker—will be the attraction at the Plainfield theatre, Christmas, matinee and night. O. E. Wee has given it a magnificent production and engaged an exceptionally strong cast, including Miss Irma Manning, Mabelle Severton, Kittie Melville, Joe Lyonell, Loftus Husband, Victor Bouvier, Bert James, Charles H. Brooke, Wallace E. Young and many others. The locale of the play is the most picturesque of all the Western States, namely—the Dakotas. It is a skillful bit of work, of admirably drawn characters, bubbling humor, intensely dramatic situations with a very pretty love story. Don't forget the date.

Dry Cleaning

like everything else, is cheapest when you get the best, for your garments are cleaned and pressed better—and therefore the work lasts longer and is better for your clothing or household furnishings.

Besides a saving, good cleaning is sanitary. Since this is so, get the best, for handwork in small tubs is sure to carry some dirt along from other clothing belonging to other people.

You don't experience anything of that nature in a first-class place.

HIGH SCHOOL PUPILS SUDDENLY DISAPPEARED

Howard Gross, aged sixteen, a student in the New Brunswick High School, has been missing since Tuesday, and his uncle, Edward Gross, of No. 90 Paterson street, New Brunswick, has asked the police to aid in the search for the boy. The youth was born in Budapest, Hungary, where his parents now live. When an infant he was brought to this country and his uncle offered to take care of him and have him educated. The parents agreed and the boy has been here ever since.

Last Saturday the boy went to visit his aunt, Mrs. Samuel Ryner, at No. 227 East 119th street, New York. He returned to New Brunswick on Sunday. On Tuesday he started for school and that was the last his uncle saw of him. But by others he was seen walking toward the Pennsylvania railroad station.

WOMEN SEEK PLACE WESTFIELD BOARD.

An agitation for representation in the Westfield Board of Education has been started by a number of Westfield women. Mayor J. Allston Dennis, who is also a member of the School Board, had said that if there are any "pedagogically inclined" women he would like nothing better than to see a representation of the fair sex in the School Board circle. After it became generally known that the Mayor made this utterance scores of "logical candidates" have "sprung up."

Mrs. Josiah T. Tubby, Jr., president of the Woman's Club, speaking in favor of such a plan, said: "It has been worked out successfully in New England and other parts of the country, and there is no reason why it shouldn't be a success in Westfield."

Mrs. J. W. Barr, recording secretary of the organization and a member of the committee on education and libraries of the New Jersey Federation of Women's Clubs, declared that the town would take a forward step by permitting women to serve on the board. To attain a position on the board, Mrs. Barr contended that women who are non-hysterical, public-spirited and well educated should be selected.

Mrs. George H. Gabler, president of the Parent-Teachers' Association, whose husband is a member of the school board, is also an earnest advocate for the cause.

PACKERS' ATTEMPT TO HALT TRIAL FAILS.

Chicago, Dec. 22—Federal Judge Carpenter yesterday denied the motion of counsel for the ten meat packers now on trial here for alleged criminal conspiracy that two of the seven counts in the indictments against them be dismissed. The defense excepted.

The decision insures the continuance of the present trial. The defense's attorneys alleged that the indictment was faulty, because it specified alleged unlawful acts occurring at a time when the statute of limitation operated to debar prosecution.

A further motion that the jury be instructed to disregard certain of the statements made by District Attorney Wilkerson in his opening address was also denied by Judge Carpenter.

Attorney George T. Buckingham began the opening statements in behalf of the defense. Buckingham spoke particularly for the Swift and Fowler groups of packing-houses.

WESTWOOD MINISTER PROMISES A SURPRISE

Rev. Carl F. W. Ahrens, the pastor of the Calvary Baptist church at Westwood, who has been asked by a few of his opponents to resign because he had bought an automobile and kept a secret from a few women of his church, said last night after a meeting of the Advisory Board:

"I will have a big surprise for a big congregation on Sunday night. I will tell how I came to go into the ministry, and will relate some of my experiences since I have been in it. Some of these experiences will be of a local nature and will be particularly interesting to a number of particular persons in Westwood.

"At the prayer meeting we had a good attendance, later, at the session of the Advisory Board, none of the opponents was present. One man who had been an active opponent came over to our side full of repentance. It was decided that I should not put the question of my resignation to a vote on Sunday night, as planned, and the board decided to allow the pastor to reserve his decision as to what course to pursue until Sunday night.

"My automobile, which is now familiarly known as 'the care of mercy,' will be at the disposal of those who miss the 9 o'clock train on Sunday night."

In his sermon last Sunday night Pastor Ahrens referred to his enemies in the congregation as hypocrites, Judas Iscariots, and traitors, and said other things in his own defense that made his hearers sit up and take notice.

STAYS GRANTED TO TRENTON PLACEMEN.

Trenton, Dec. 22.—Upon application of former Attorney-General Robert H. McCarter, Justice Trenchard, in the Supreme Court yesterday allowed writs of certiorari staying the operation of a resolution adopted by the City Commission yesterday afternoon in so far as it affects employees whose services under the resolution would be terminated December 31.

The writs were made operative as to Benjamin Godshalk and E. Clifford Wilson, members of the local Board of Assessors; Stephen Ziegler, assistant city treasurer; James R. Howard, clerk to the Board of Assessors, and Leon D. Hirsch, assistant secretary-treasurer of the Trenton water works.

The constitutionality of the Walsh act establishing a commission form of government was not directly attacked in the proceedings at this time, Mr. McCarter remarking that he supposed for the purposes of the cases this would be impossible in certiorari.

FALLS 40 FEET, SAYS "I FEEL ALL RIGHT."

Although he fell forty feet from a roof of a building yesterday and landed on a cement pavement Frederick Van Dien, a carpenter, in Paterson, received no other injuries, according to an examination made at St. Mary's Hospital in that city, than a broken nose and a few bruises and cuts on his body.

Van Dien was at work on the Goodatte Mill building., in Delawanna, repairing the roof of an extension, when in some manner he fell. He struck an extension about half way down, then landing on the cement pavement. Fellow workmen hurried to him expecting to find him dead or badly injured, and were surprised when he got up and said he felt all right.

WINDOW CLEANER GETS $2,200 OF HER GEMS

More than $2,000 worth of jewels belonging to Mrs. Laura Martin were stolen yesterday from her room in the boarding house of Mrs. Etta Van Wart, in Jersey City.

Mrs. Van Wart, reporting the robbery at police headquarters in Jersey City, said a man came to the house on Wednesday morning and asked if she wanted any windows cleaned. He said he worked for an agency down town, but displayed none of the accoutrements of the craft. She told him to come the next morning. He reported for work, and being furnished with pails and cloths soon was busily engaged. He finally reached Mrs. Martin's room, on the second floor, and threw up the windows. The room was soon so cold that Mrs. Martin picked up her jewel case, locked it in the top drawer of her bureau and went down stairs.

A few moments later the man appeared and asked Mrs. Van Wart for a screwdriver, saying he could not open one of the windows. Soon afterward he left the house saying he would return after dinner.

When Mrs. Martin returned to her room she found the bureau had been pried open and her jewels were gone. She said their total value was $2,204.

GAYNOR'S ASSAILANT INSANE THEY BELEIVE

Dr. George N. J. Sommer and Dr. Paul L. Cort, of Trenton, having been appointed by Judge Frederick W. Knichtel, of the Mercer court, have made a preliminary examination of the mental condition of James J. Gallagher, who shot Mayor Gaynor of New York and is now serving a twelve-year sentence in the New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, for assault on Street Cleaning Commissioner Edwards, of New York.

The result of their test will not be known until the final report is made to the court, but it is believed that they have found the man to be in an advanced stage of paresis.

Gallagher has been in the prison about a year and is said to have failed greatly, both mentally and physically. His ailment is not unlike locomotor ataxia, and he is unable to do any work, besides causing much annoyance because of his strange hallucinations. It is believed that he cannot live more than a year, and Head Keeper Osborne thinks he should be committed to the State Hospital for the Insane.

At Gallagher's trial Dr. Arlitz and Dr. McGill, of Hoboken; Dr. Sexsmith, of Bayonne, and Dr. Cotton, of Trenton, gave it as their opinion that he was a victim of paresis, while Dr. Allan McLane Hamilton and Dr. Carlos F. MacDonald, of New York, testified that he was mentally sound.

LOVE FOR CIGARETTES HAD A FATAL ENDING.

Fondness for cigarettes, which he smoked day and night, was responsible for the death of Andrew Wandolowki, whose burned body was found in bed yesterday in New Brunswick. Wandolowki lived with his brother-in-law, who was awakened early yesterday morning by a smell of something burning. Going to Wandolwki's room he found the bed in flames and Wandolowki unconscious.

Wandolowki was hurried to a hospital in the hope that he might be revived. Cigarette butts were found near the bed, and it seemed evident that they had started the fire. The sleeper had apparently been rendered unconscious before the heat awakened him.

IN MANSLAUGHTER TERM, COURT WARNS ROWDIES.

As an example to persons who while drinking lean to rowdyism, especially on street cars, Judge Atwater, of the Union County Court, Wednesday sentenced Joseph Flanagan, twenty-five years old, of Elizabethport, convicted of manslaughter, to State prison for not less than one year nor more than ten.

Notice of an appeal was given and Flanagan's bond of $3,000 was raised to $4,000, which was furnished. Flanagan was convicted of causing the death of John H. R. Miller, of Elizabeth, a trolley car inspector. He threw Miller off a moving car. Flanagan also fell, fracturing an ankle, so that he appeared for sentence on crutches.

SCALES OF THE EEL.

They Are Very Minute and Resemble Herringbone Brickwork.

In the ordinary acceptation of the term the eel is a scaleless fish. But it is due to the fact that its scales are very minute and imbedded in the skin. They form, as pointed out by a correspondent, very interesting and beautiful objects for the microscope. In size the scales of the eel vary from one-twentieth of an inch upward, according to the age of the fish. They are formed of two layers of a clear, horny substance, the upper of which is studded with crystals of calcium carbonate. These are so transparent as to look like empty cells. The scales vary in shape from a blunt to an elongated oval and are sometimes almost kidney shaped.

This is how the scales of the eel tell its age. On each may be observed at intervals several more or less clearly marked lines parallel to the margin. These mark lines of growth, one for each year of the life of the fish. Three years, nowever, must be allowed for the innermost ring, as the eel has no scales until the third year. The scales do not overlap to any extent and are arranged in series of small groups at right angles to each other, so as to resemble what is known as herring bone brickwork. Conger eels, however, are said to have no scales.—London Field.

BALKED THE BURGLAR.

It May or May Not Have Been a Low Down Game, but It Won.

The man with his coat collar turned up and his derby pitched down over his eyes who was slouching along in the shadow of the building suddenly beckoned to the man on the other side of the street. "Here's an easy one, Pete," he growled hoarsely.

"Where's an easy one?" snarled Pete.

"This here house. It's like taking gum from a stenographer that's fixin' her hair. Some chump has gone away an' left his latch key in this door."

Pete took a swift look at the house and began to back up. "You can go to it," he said. "I don't want to butt in on it."

"Are youse nutty?"

"Naw, I ain't nutty. But de feller wot lives dere is a low down sneak widout no feelin' fer nobody, an' I don't want nothin' ter do with 'im. No. I don't know him, but I'm next ter his game. He sticks that key in dere to ketch suckers like you. Dere's a wire on dat key an' a million volt battery attached to dat wire. I wouldn't touch it if yer'd gimme de First National bank. But go ahead—I'll be acrost de street watchin' wot happens."

Nothing happened.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Ancient Inkstands.

An inkstand that was probably in use 3,400 years ago is exhibited in a Berlin museum. It is of Egyptian make and is supposed to belong to the eighteenth or nineteenth dynasty, or somewhere about 1500 B. C., although its real age can be judged only approximately. It is made of wood and has two compartments, an upper one provided with two holes, one for black and one for red ink, and a lower one for holding reed pens. The black and red ink are certainties, for some still remains, in a dry condition, within the receptacles. Another ancient inkstand is supposed to have been intended for the use of a schoolboy. It would certainly hold ink enough for a schoolboy's needs, for it has no fewer than four ink holes. Both inkstands were found at Thebes.—London Globe.

Eased His Conscience.

Dean Buckland when at Westminster used to tell a curious story of a brown paper parcel which he received one day by post. After many wrappings had been unfolded he found a small black splinter of oak about an inch and a half long. The writer of the unsigned note accompanying the parcel said that when he was a boy, many years before, he had chipped the splinter off the coronation chair. As age advanced his conscience grew troublesome, and he asked the dean to be kind enough to restore the splinter to its place.—Pall Mall Gazette

Making It Clear.

Parson's daughter: "Good morning, Giles! Haven't noticed you in church for the last few weeks." Giles: "No, miss; I've been oop at Noocastle a-visitin' my old 'aunts. And strange, isn't it, I don't see no change in 'em since I was a child like?" Parson's daughter: "What wonderful old ladies they must be!" Giles: "I didn't say 'arnts,' miss; I said 'awnts'—'aunts where I used to wander in my childhood days like!"

Advice.

"Now that you've heard my daughter sing, what would you advise me to do?"

"Well," the music master replied, "I hardly know. Don't you suppose you could get her interested in settlement work or horseback riding or something like that?"—Chicago Record-Herald.

His Grievance.

Editor—We are sorry to lose your subscription, Mr. Jackson. What's the matter? Don't you like our politics? Mistah Jackson—'Tain't dat, sah, 'tain't dat. Mah wife jes' been an' dun landed a job o' wuk foh me by advertisin' in youh darned old papah!—Puck.

Where It Was.

"Johnny, run get the family Bible; I want to show it to the parson."

"Oh, maw, I can't move all those trunks and boxes!"—Baltimore Sun.

Serving His Country.

A certain public office has been the object of much satire because of the passive nature of the incumbent's duties—except when he is called by tragic occurrence into the thick of action. So very negative, indeed, is the work of this public servant that he sometimes serves his country most efficiently by being absent, as appears in this extract from Moses Coit Tyler's journal, written in Washington years ago:

"President Grant never starts a conversation, but when it is started he often says a neat thing. Last year there was an excursion down the Potomac. He was on board, with his cabinet and a quorum of both houses.

"'Mr. President,' said Mrs. Judd, who sat near him, 'it would be a pretty bad thing to have a great accident happen to this party. Nearly the whole government would be destroyed.'

"'Yes, Mrs. Judd,' assented the president, 'but you observe that the vice president has very prudently stayed at home.'"

Talking Canaries.

Talking canaries are a great rarity, but several authenticated instances are on record. At Norwood, England, in 1858 a lady had a canary bird which began by repeating a word which its mistress had often used to it—"Kissie, kissie"—and by following the word up by an imitation of the sound of a kiss. After a time the bird repeated other words until it had a large vocabulary of phrases, one of which consisted of five words. Again, in 1863, a talking canary was exhibited in Bath, with a vocabulary such as is generally taught to parrots, and another talking canary was exhibited for a few weeks in this country, but it unfortunately caught cold and died. In Germany and the Tyrol canaries are taught to imitate the notes of other birds and whistle simple tunes, and the words which it imitates may be regarded as a mere development or variant of its musical notes.

The Lerot and the Snake.

Every one has heard of the remarkable combats of the Indian mongoose with venomous snakes, in which little rikki-tikki-tavi comes off victor. The fact that the mongoose invariably survives has led to the suggestion that it is immune to snake poison. Other animals said to be immune are the pig and the hedgehog. The experiments of British naturalists show that an animal of the dormouse family must be added to the list of the immune. This animal is known as the lerot and is said to fight fiercely with vipers. Large doses of viper's poison were injected into one lerot, from which injection no ill effects followed. On one occasion a lerot was bitten badly in the eye by a viper, and no signs of poisoning occurred. There can, it is thought, be no doubt that the lerot is immune to snake poison.

Gold Beaters' Skin.

A cheap substitute is much desired for goldbeaters' skin, which is prepared from the outside membrane of the large intestine of the ox. It is said that goldbeaters first tried paper for inclosing the metal, and mulberry fiber paper is still used in China and Japan, but animal parchment has been mostly employed for two or three centuries at least. While a thinner leaf can be beaten out between paper parchment sheets, it is damaged by adhesion. A special German paper is coated with isinglass or albumen, and paper parchment of some kind is much used in the first stages, but goldbeaters finish their product between goldbeaters' skins, still pounding an ounce of gold into 200 square inches of leaf.—New York Tribune.

Swayed by a Bell's Tones.

The Church of St. Nicaise, in the city of Rheims, is surrounded with pillars. When a certain bell in the tower is rung the top of one pillar always sways to the extent of seven inches on each side, although the base is immovable, and the stones are so firmly cemented as to seem like a solid piece of masonry. Notwithstanding that each of the four bells is about the same distance from the trembling pillar none of the others has the slightest effect on it.

An Odd Bequest.

The following is one of the oddest bequests ever recorded in a last testament. It appeared in the will of a Bristol mariner proved in 1795. The old gentleman ordered his executors to "pay out of the first moneys collected, to my beloved wife, if living, one shilling, which I have given as a token of my love, that she may buy hazelnuts, as I know that she is better pleased with cracking them than she is with mending the holes in her stockings."

Chirography.

"Ethelinda writes a very peculiar hand," said Maude.

"Yes," replied Maymie. "It's just a lot of straight lines and angles. When you read it you have to guess at the spelling, the same as she does."—Washington Star.

An Explanation.

"Your nephew is a college graduate, isn't he?"

"Yes," confessed honest Farmer Hornbeak, "but in justice to the college I'll own up that he had no sense beforehand."—Woman's Home Companion.

The Giraffe's Neck.

"Why does the giraffe have such a long neck?" asks the teacher.

"Because its head is so far away from its body," hopefully answers the boy.—New York Press.

All in the Family.

A young New Haven man, returning home from a health trip to Colorado, told his father about buying a silver mine for $3,000.

"I knew they'd rope you in!" exclaimed the old man. "So you were ass enough to buy a humbug mine?"

"Yes, but I didn't lose anything. I formed a company and sold half the stock to a Connecticut man for $7,000."

"Y-you did?" gasped the old man as he turned white. "I'll bet I'm the one who bought it."

"I know you are," coolly observed the young man, as he crossed his legs and tried to appear very much at home.—Argonaut.

Feats of Archery.

In the days when the buffalo was found in vast herds on the western plains there were Indians who, while riding at a gallop, could send an arrow through a buffalo's body. Remarkable as this archery was, yet it did not equal that reached by the archers of ancient times. It is of record that the MacRaes of Gairlock, Scotland, were such skillful archers that they could hit a man at the distance of 500 yards. In 1794 the Turkish ambassador at London shot an arrow, in a field near that capital, 415 yards against the wind and 482 yards with the wind. The secretary of the ambassador, on hearing the expressions of surprise from the English gentlemen present, said the sultan had shot 500 yards. This was the greatest performance of modern days, but a pillar, standing on a plain near Constantinople, recorded shots ranging up to 800 yards. Sir Robert Ainslie, British ambassador to the sublime port, records that in 1798 he was present when the sultan shot an arrow 972 yards.—New York Press.

Mark Twain's German Coffee.

German coffee must have given Mark Twain a pain, judging from the following recipe which he gave for its concoction:

Take a barrel of water and bring it to a boil; rub a chicory berry against a coffee berry, then convey the former into the water. Continue the boiling and evaporation until the intensity of the flavor and aroma of the coffee and chicory have been diminished to a proper degree; then set aside to cool. Now unharness the remains of a once cow from the plow, insert them in a hydraulic press, and, when you shall have acquired a teaspoonful of that pale blue juice which a German superstition regards as milk, modify the malignity of its strength in a bucket of tepid water and bring up the breakfast. Mix the beverage in a cold cup, partake with moderation, and keep a wet rag around your head to guard against over excitement.

Clever Crows.

In a garden a dog was eating a piece of meat in the presence of four covetous crows. They evidently said a great deal to one another on the subject, and now and then one of them tried to pull the meat away from the dog, which he naturally resented. At last a big, strong crow succeeded in tearing off a piece, with which he returned to the tree where the others congregated. A long powwow now ensued, which ended in all four crows flying down to the dog, the leading crow dexterously dropping the small piece of meat within reach of his mouth. The dog immediately snapped at it, unwisely letting go the big piece, which was seized by two crows and carried to the tree, where it was devoured with much fluttering and hilarity, while the cheated dog walked away with every appearance of discomfiture.—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

A Notorious English Spendthrift.

Among the customers at Long's, the famous hotel in Bond street, was the last Marquis of Hastings, the most notorious of mid-Victorian spendthrifts. Hastings, according to one who knew him well, "gambled so that not even the Bank of England, backed by the Rothschilds, with the mines of the Transvaal as additional supports, could have withstood the strain."

Yet even he protested at Long's when charged 2s. 6d. for a whisky and soda. The proprietor declared that this had always been the charge. "About time it was altered, then," retorted the marquis. Just before his death Hastings remarked to a friend: "I've made a pretty hash of my life. About all the good I've ever done was to bring down the price of a whisky and soda at Long's."—London Express.

Henley and Stevenson.

W. E. Henley once met Robert Louis Stevenson and found his friend distressed because he was not a Voltaire or a Dumas, though he had an equipment which ought to have made him their peer. Stevenson put his "failure" down to the weakness of his lungs. "Perhaps you are right, Louis," said Henley. "I've always felt that if I had not been a blessed cripple I could have taken the earth in my hand and hurled it into the sun."

A Suspicion.

"I declare," said Mrs. Cumrox after making a round of calls, "all these butlers must have umpired baseball games."

"Impolite?"

"No; polite, but positive. They seem to have got into the habit of saying everybody is out."—Washington Star.

Professional Pride.

The Judge—Then you acknowledge having robbed the safe. Were you assisted by any one?

"No, indeed, yer honor. I've bin in the perfeshun for nineteen year, an' I ain't never collaborated with nobody."—Life.

Just a Shade.

"I come of a very old family. We have a family ghost."

"We have two."

"I guess that gives you a shade the best of it."—Washington Herald.

A Sure Cure.

"Doctor, I have for years been addicted to walking in my sleep. Is there any cure for me?"

"Yes. Adopt a baby."—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Blame.

He—Oh, but you mustn't blame me for my ancestors, you know.

She—I don't. I blame them for you.—Boston Transcript.

SOME OTHER VIEWPOINTS.

The Chicago protest against the arbitrary policy of refusing employment to men over 45 comes none too soon. Dr. Osler's was a poor enough joke, but too many business men having no sense of humor took it seriously.—Boston Transcript.

Many Senators are hastening to deny that they wrote the letter to Colonel Roosevelt offering to support him for the Presidential nomination next year. If this keeps up long enough it cannot fail to be known ultimately who did write.—Philadelphia Press.

All the Democratic party needs, the sharps tell us, is the right man in 1912. But somehow the party always gets a man who fans with the bases full.—F. P. A. in New York Mail.

A European commission has started out to study "modern methods of war." Simple—first select a weaker nation and then blow it off the map before it knows what you are about.—Harrisburg Telegraph.

While the New York Sun is about it why doesn't it twit Woodrow Wilson with the article he wrote once upon a time less than twenty-five years ago upholding the constitutional right of a State to secede from the Union?—Chicago Tribune.

Woodrow Wilson is acclaimed by a friend as "an intensely practical idealist." Next we shall hear that oil and water have been mingled or that Aviator Wright has discovered perpetual motion to be utilized in his flights without an engine.—Florida Times-Union.

We notice that the talented Washington correspondents now have the campaign leaders not only sounding the tocsin and blazing the trail, but actually taking up the gage, and probably it won't be long before they go the full length of pointing with pride and viewing with alarm.—Ohio State Journal.

As we expected, the king of Italy has selected Mr. Hearst's newspaper as the official means of communication between the throne and the Italians of this country.—Houston Post.

If Governor Woodrow Wilson's commission can lariat and hobble the New Jersey Telephone Trust Exhibit A will be ready for the Democratic National Convention.—Brooklyn Eagle.

TURNED THE BATTLE.

Impulse That Moved the British Lancers at Aliwal.

The Sixteenth lancers, than whom there is no more famous regiment in the British service, performed a fine feat at the battle of Aliwal, in the Punjab, in January, 1846.

The gallant Sikhs had thrown themselves into squares and in this formation for a time resisted the desperate charges of the English cavalry just as stubbornly as the British infantry had resisted the French curaissiers at Waterloo.

Again and again did the Sixteenth lancers strive to break through the masses of the Sikhs, and again and again scores of saddles were emptied, and the British were beaten back with slaughter. As the lancers got close enough to deliver their thrusts their weapons would splinter like matchwood upon the stout shields of their swarthy foes. Suddenly an inspiration came to the troopers.

Without receiving any orders to that effect, but as if controlled by a unanimous impulse, they shifted their lances to the bridle hand and charged in once more. The Sikhs, entirely unprepared for this sudden and masterly maneuver, received in their bodies instead of on their targets the spear points of the horsemen.

Into and through the squares swept the Sixteenth, with lances as crimson as their tunics. Even so, it is recorded that the resistance was so desperate and sustained that the Sikh square had to be ridden through again and yet again before it was finally overcome.—Exchange.

WON BY A SONG.

Incident That Hastened the Success of Telephones In England.

Following the establishment on a solid basis of the American telephone system, work for European exploitation was early begun. The results were hardly encouraging.

Five-eighths of the British rights were purchased for $500 by a Providence man, says the National Magazine. After working in London four months he could not find any one who would put a shilling in the telephone.

An English review said of it: "The telephone is little better than a toy. It amuses the English, but is inferior to the well established system of air tubes."

The victory was won at last by Kate Field, who sang "Kathleen Mavourneen" over the telephone to Queen Victoria. The queen was delighted, asked Bell if she might buy two telephones, and it was not long before all England was interested. An exchange with ten wires was opened in London, and in April, 1879, Theodore Vail sent an order to the factory in Boston in his terse, characteristic way, "Please make 100 hand telephones for export trade as early as possible."

In the Italian Alps, on the peak of Monte Rosa, is the highest telephone in the world. Strung at the order of Queen Margherita, it took six years to complete the connection between the top of the mountain and the queen's apartments in Rome.

Thackeray's Mistakes.

Thackeray probably wrote the prettiest and most legible hand of any distinguished author. But the master of the easiest and most flexible style in English fiction occasionally made careless and irritating slips. He wrote "different to," which is a common and quite unaccountable mistake, and "compared to," which is as bad. No one would think of saying or writing "compare this to that," yet you find "compared to" in print every day in the week. And he also fell into the common error of making the surname plural instead of the prefix—the "Miss Potters," for instance, in "The Newcomes," instead of the "Misses Potter." Would anybody write the "Mr. Potters?" Why should the ladies be so mishandled?—London Chronicle.

The Fruit Cuckoo.

The Indian fruit cuckoo, which, like all members of the cuckoo family, lays its eggs in the nests of other birds and thus avoids the trouble of hatching them, is said to exhibit a great deal of strategy in dealing with crows, its natural enemies. Whereas the hen, an inconspicuous, speckled gray bird, conceals herself in the foliage, the cock, remarkable for his brilliant black plumage and crimson eyes, places himself on a perch near a crow's nest and sets up a great racket. The crows immediately rush out to attack him, and he takes to flight with them in pursuit. The hen meanwhile slips into the nest and deposits an egg. Sometimes the crows return before the egg is laid, and then the intruder gets a trouncing.

A Link With Primitive Times.

All ceremonial maces at court, in parliament, of learned societies and municipal bodies, field marshals' batons, gold and silver sticks, etc., are descended from the heavy fighting sticks and clubs of primitive savages. The chiefs always had the best carved clubs, which were the symbols of prowess and authority. The Australian boomerang and the Irish shillalah are both maces.—London Standard.

Also the Whale.

A Kansas fisherman declares that a catfish will pur like a tomcat when it is stroked the right way. Did he ever try stroking a German carp and hearing it sing "Ili le, hi lo?"—Kansas City Star. And did he ever stroke a whale and hear it spout?—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Every man has a fair turn to be as great as he pleases.—Collier.

Finds Wife a Suicide.

Joseph Kearns, driver of a coal wagon, awoke at 3:20 yesterday morning in his home in Perth Amboy and found his wife a suicide at the foot of the bed. He notified Policeman Martin Rymarcezk, who called Coroner James J. Flynn. Kearns says he knows of no reason why his wife should end her life and does not know exactly when she did so. The woman killed herself by knotting a light cord around her neck and then kneeling down so that the weight of her body caused her death.

FOOTBALL'S RULES TO BE WELL GRILLED

The fate of the forward pass and other proposed football rule changes will be decided upon at the sixth annual meeting of the National Collegiate Athletic Association to be held at the Hotel Astor, New York city, on December 28.

Forty-two colleges, representing nearly all of the big institutions east of Colorado and as far south as Texas, are members of the National Collegiate Association. Yale, Princeton, Michigan and St. Louis are four of the larger universities that are not members. The Ohio and Missouri conference elevens as well as the "Big Eight" teams in the west are members.

At the convention members of all the committees will be elected for 1912 and also a new football rules committee will be chosen. The conference this year will extend over three sessions, morning, afternoon and evening.

Captain Palmer E. Pierce, of the United States Army, and president of the National Collegiate Athletic Association, is down to give the opening address in the morning on "The Association."

"College Athletics from the Viewpoint of the President of a University" is the subject of Chancellor McCormick, of the University of Pittsburgh.

"The Influence of College Athletics Upon Prepartory Schools" is the subject upon which President Myron Scudder, of Rutgers College Preparatory School, will talk.

The big address of the morning session will be delivered by Major General Leonard Wood, chief of staff of the United States Army, on "The Military Value of Athletics to the Nation."

In the afternoon the real business of the meeting will be transacted. Reports from the district representatives, the football rules committee, central board of football officials, basketball rules committee and the track rules committee will be given.

THREE ELK TEAMS TIED FOR SECOND POSITION.

By taking three straight from Newark last night, the Elizabeth Elks bowling team jumps to second place in the Elks League standing, tying with Plainfield and Rutherford for the place. The severe setback Elizabeth received here Tuesday night, when three in a row was taken from them by the local Elk pinners, was made up by the beating handed the Essex county boys last night on their visit to the Union county seat.

Nolte and VanBergen for the victors each broke into the double century zone, the former returning a score of 211 in the first against 232 for the latter. The last game was won by a margin of only 19 pins, but the other two were safe by 157 and 65 respectively.

HOPE CHAPEL'S TEAM IS BADLY DEFEATED.

The Hope chapel basketball team went to Roselle Park, last night and was defeated by the Suburban A. C. by a score of 60 to 30. The chapel boys were completely outplayed in the first half, the score being 34 to 9, but did a little better in the second half and held their opponents to about even terms. Lindow, Montgomery and Lewis were the chief point-winners for the home team, making 50 of the 60 points between them. Snyder, T. and J. Heron did the scoring for Hope. The lineup:

Hope chapel—Forwards, T. Heron, J. Heron; centre, Doig; guards, Snyder, Leighs.

Suburban A. C. — Forwards, Mutch, Lewis; center, Montgomery; guards, Lindow, Morton, Santon.

CURRENCY REFORM TOPIC OF MESSAGE

Washington, Dec. 22.—President Taft sent another of his promised series of messages to Congress yesterday. This time he dealt with currency reform, Panama canal tolls and various government questions.

On the subject of currency reform and in connection with the forthcoming report to Congress of the monetary commission, President Taft said it was exceedingly fortunate that "the wise and undisputed policy of maintaining unchanged the main features of our banking system rendered it impossible to introduce a central bank." He gave his approval to the proposed national reserve association.

"And I trust also that the new legislation will carefully and completely protect and assure the individuality and the independence of each bank, to the end that any tendency there may ever be toward a consolidation of the money or banking power of the nation shall be defeated," said the President.

The immediate establishment of a rural parcel post was urged. The President took the position that the post would not destroy the business of the country store-keeper.

On the subject of the Panama canal the President dealt at length with the question of whether American shipping should pay tolls.

"I am very confident that the United States has the power to relieve from the payment of tolls any part of our shipping that Congress deems wise," said the President.

WANTS TO 'PHONE KING EMMANUEL, IS LOCKED UP.

Union Hill, Dec. 22—Patrolman Kaiser was standing at New York avenue and Liberty street yesterday when an excited foreigner rushed up to him and begged to be directed to a cable office.

Kaiser directed him and followed. He found the stranger declaring earnestly.

"I must get word to King Victor Emmanuel immediately. The war with Turkey can be ended today if I can reach the king."

It was explained that it would take several hours.

"Well, maybe I better telephone," said the excited customer.

"By all means," agreed Kaiser. "Come on; I'll take you to a transatlantic 'phone."

He escorted the grateful man to the police station an showed him to a "booth." The prisoner was fined $5 in court.

Feature Acts at Proctor's.

Every act at Proctor's theatre this week is a feature act and every act is a good one. The sketch, "On a Side Street," is different from the usual playlet. There are four characters and the sketch has a strong moral and is exceptionally well acted. There is special scenery. The Three Masqueria Sisters, musicians, singers and dancers, offer a pretty and novel musical act. Brown and Small, two clever singers of the latest hits in popular songs, are good; May Evans, the whistler and imitator, is a clever woman. Brobel and Ruge, aerial comedians, doing funny stunts on a suspended pole, will please both old and young.

CARNEGIE PAYS WARM TRIBUTE TO BIGELOW.

New York, Dec. 22.—Among the many messages and tributes received yesterday by the family of John Bigelow, the diplomat who died on Tuesday, is one from his life-long friend, Andrew Carnegie. It says:

"John Bigelow had all the graces of the accomplished, kindly, venerable gentleman, a smile always on his lips. The writer never saw him agitated, never heard a sharp word from him nor saw a frown upon his brow. All was serene. His was a life of long and unwearied service to his fellows."

LORIMER SLATED TO LOSE SENATE SEAT.

Washington, Dec. 22.—The Lorimer investigating committee has adjourned for the holidays and Senator Lorimer is the only remaining witness to be called. A careful canvass of the situation by those opposed to Lorimer convinces them that a resolution will be adopted by a substantial majority, declaring that he is not entitled to his seat.

The full committee on privileges and elections consists of fourteen members. Of these Senators Dillingham, Gamble, Heyburn, Bradley, Oliver, Paynter, Johnston and Fletcher are put down as favoring Lorimer, while Clapp, Sutherland, Jones, Kenyon, Kern and Lea are known to be opposed. It is said Senator Gamble, who supported Lorimer in the previous inquiry, will change his vote. This will make the committee a tie.

Of the new Senators it is said a considerable majority is against Lorimer. It is said there is not a shadow of doubt that the seat of Lorimer will be declared vacant.

—Neuman Bros. have received a large shipment of choice fruits for the holiday trade, from which a selection will be easy.

COAST DEFENSE.

Concrete Forts and Big Guns That Protect Our Sea Line.

The modern seacoast fort is a battery whose guns are protected in front and flank with enormous monoliths of concrete, covered, in the sides exposed to the fire, with sand enough to deflect projectiles before they reach the concrete, says the Engineering Magazine. Deep down in the interior of these huge masses of stone are placed the magazines and operating rooms required for the service of the batteries. They are simply caves in stone, artificial, to be sure, but as permanent as the everlasting hills. It is weird and uncanny to reflect that in one of those caves, scintillating with the highest resources of science, men stand over a drawing board on a table and practically see and plot on a chart every movement and position of the ships of a hostile fleet and flash forth to the gunners in the open such instructions for pointing their guns as enable them to make consecutive bullseyes on a target 6,000 yards away or from groups of great twelve inch rifled mortars to make 47 per cent of hits with flocks of projectiles on the deck of a moving target anywhere within range.

It is vastly important that such rooms be made as comfortable as possible for the strained human intellects working out their country's defense within them. But to make them comfortable is a difficult problem. In the United States the first modern batteries were completed during an exigency caused by the war with Spain. But since their completion during the warm and humid months of summer and early fall their galleries, magazines and service rooms reek with moisture. Water stands in great beads upon the walls and ceilings, from which it drips down to form great pools upon the floors, and they are not safe places for either human beings, ammunition or material of war. To remedy the evil many expedients have been tried and much valuable experience gained. But the problem is beset with difficulty.

FALLS ONLY TO RISE.

An Experiment Which Shows a Sort of Perpetual Motion Effect.

A novel experiment in the demonstration of perpetual motion is to be performed simply. A glass beaker about six inches high and four inches in diameter is filled with water to the height of about four and a half inches, and two and one-half to three ounces of commercial aniline are added, which will sink to the bottom of the vessel.

The temperature of the beaker and its contents is now raised to 170 or 175 degrees Fahrenheit by means of a burner, when it will be observed that the aniline will rise to the surface of the water, from which it will hang in a mass of curved outline. Almost immediately the suspended aniline commences to alter in shape, and gradually a large drop an inch or more in diameter detaches itself from the mass and falls through the water.

And now, the detached drop having fallen to the bottom of the beaker, comes the surprising part of the experiment. The fallen drop is seen gradually to rise to the surface, where it joins the mass from which it previously broke away. At once another drop commences to form and, having become detached, falls and rises in the same manner as the previous drop.

So long as the temperature of the water is maintained at 170 degrees Fahrenheit or over this procedure continues indefinitely.—Spokane Spokesman-Review.

Worked Both Ends.

Queens at their best are but women. Said Mary of Modena once in her days of exile, "It took all the jewels that all the goldsmiths could procure to decorate my crown." She was "powdered" with gems, which Fountainhall says "made her shine like an angel."

And Queen Caroline, too, the wife of George II., used to allude to Lord Hervey's rather personal remark that her crowning dress "was as fine as the accumulated riches of the city and suburbs could make it, for, besides her own jewels, she had on her head and shoulders all the pearls she could borrow of the ladies of quality at one end of the town, and on her petticoat all the diamonds she could hire of the jewelers at the other."

The Polar Bear.

The polar bear is a pretty formidable brute. A specimen of this species has been killed weighing 1,000 pounds and measuring nearly thirteen feet from nose to tail. The strength of the polar bear is beyond belief. One was seen feeding on the body of a white whale fifteen feet long and weighing at least three tons. The whale had been dragged by the bear out of the water on to the ice.

In These Degenerate Days.

"Huh," exclaimed the yardstick as it moved rapidly over the bolt of cloth, "you're not all wool."

"That's all right," retorted the bolt of cloth; "you're not a yard long, either."—Chicago Tribune.

A Jolt to Romance.

"Hubby, you have a lock of my hair, haven't you?" "Of course." "See if you can match it in some puffs when you go downtown."—Pittsburg Post.

Nature's Monument to Washington.

Among the many monuments to Washington is the one which every visitor to the Cape Verde islands will remember as one of the most colossal and marvelous freaks of natural sculpture in existence. Along the farther side of the harbor of San Vicente, the principal town, rises a bold ridge of dark gray volcanic rocks, the crest of which forms an exact likeness of our immortal George, seemingly lying face upward, as if in a peaceful sleep. The hero's large, bold features, the backward wave of the hair, his massive shoulders and even the frill of the shirt front are all reproduced on a gigantic scale with wonderful exactness. The strange monument, sharply outlined against the deep blue of the tropical sky, is one of the first objects that meet one's eye in approaching the island. Its gigantic proportions, with the boundless ocean for a background, form a portrait wonderfully true to nature and overpowering in its magnificence.

Force of Lightning.

It is hardly possible to use instruments for the purpose of figuring the forces of lightning, yet there are many other ways of calculating familiar to every mathematician. The amount of light given by a single lightning flash is enough to illuminate an area of two square miles. The bolt itself would be visible several miles further off, but the remotest part of the region mentioned would have as much light as would be given by a candle—quite enough to read by. To produce such a light it would be necessary to expend 13,000 horsepower for a second. These figures appear very large, but the time is short. The flash might be for only one-thousandth of a second, but the impression on the eye would continue for a tenth of a second anyway. Figured down to an exact hour this amount of force would mean only about four horsepower.—Electric News Bulletin.

The Moral of the Story.

Professor John Spencer Bassett, author of "A Life of Andrew Jackson," in one of his lectures at Smith college, repeated a well known story in regard to Stephen A. Douglas, closing with a moral which aroused peculiar interest.

Douglas, as the narrative runs, was once sitting in a profound sleep in the corridor of the capitol when Adeline Cutts, a Washington belle, passed by. She did not know the sleeper, but was struck with compassion on seeing such a splendidly intellectual face under such conditions, and stooping down laid her handkerchief over it to protect it from the flies. Douglas on awakening found the handkerchief, sought the owner and eventually married her. There was a pause, and then the professor added: "Young ladies, the moral of this story is, have your pocket handkerchief marked."

A Lion's Vanity.

The intricacies of a great man's character are often simplicities to his wife. Once, when the present poet laureate had paid a visit to Tennyson, his immediate predecessor, Tennyson walked with him as far as the gate which led to the highway. There, says Mr. Alfred Austin in his recent autobiography, while the elder poet stood leaning on the gate, a party of wide eyed sightseers appeared.

"What a vulgar people the English are!" Tennyson exclaimed. "They come here to watch for me, and when they see me they say, quite loudly, 'There's Tennyson!'"

Mr. Austin afterward repeated this to Lady Tennyson, who smiled tenderly, but archly.

"My husband would be much more annoyed if the people didn't come," she said.

Nothing Like Optimism.

There's nothing like optimism. Armed with its breastplate, fitted with its rose colored spectacles, you can withstand any pessimistic foe, see any rainbow of hope. These thoughts were forced upon a friend of ours who was waiting on the corner for his wife the other afternoon. Minutes, hours, passed and she came not. An optimistic friend joined him and shared his vigil.

"Look again and see if Theodora isn't coming," begged the husband.

"No. I don't see her yet," answered the optimist cheerily. "But have courage. The women who are coming along the street look more and more like her every minute."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Self Convicted.

"Say, pa," queried small Bobby, "what is gossiping, anyway?"

"Gossiping, my son," replied the old man, "if we get right down to the plain, unvarnished facts, is lying. But why do you ask?"

"Because," answered the young investigator, "ma says you do a lot of gossiping every time your business keeps you late at the office."—Exchange.

Paint that Stays Painted

That has been my slogan for years. I aim to do the best possible painting—using only the best materials that the manufacturers can furnish, and employing the most skilled mechanics that can be procured. I stand back of every job I do, and when I am allowed to use my own judgment in regard to the best method of doing it, I will gladly make good any work that by any chance proves defective.

APES OF GIBRALTAR.

Highly Prized and Carefully Protected by Martial Law.

Major is the name of the chief of the highly prized and carefully protected tribe of Barbary apes that inhabit the rock of Gibraltar. There is a saying in the fortress to the effect that it were "better to kill the governor than Major."

There are only about twenty left of this band of monkeys, which in some mysterious manner came over from Africa many years ago and claimed citizenship in Europe. They are protected by martial law, and any addition by birth to their number is carefully chronicled and announced in the local paper. The apes change their place of residence from the highest peaks of the rock to lower and more sheltered portions and back again, according to the state of the weather. They show their sense of humor by throwing stones at the soldiers, but they are often not seen for weeks at a time save in the early morning.

A few years ago, on account of the diminishing numbers of these animals, some apes were procured from Barbary and turned loose upon the rock. But resident monkeys killed them all. Although so fierce to intruders of their own kind, they never attack human beings and are greatly beloved and esteemed.—New York Press.

PIES FOR THE KING.

Ancient Customs That Are Still Kept Alive In England.

The city of Gloucester, in England, annually presents the king with a pie. Almost from time immemorial Gloucester until the year 1834 followed the custom of expressing its loyalty to the throne by sending to the sovereign a lamprey pie. In 1834 the custom was suspended, but it was revived in 1893 and has since continued.

It was felt that the year of the diamond jubilee required some special effort, and therefore the 1897 pie, which was in May dispatched to Balmoral upon a gold dish, was of a more than usually elaborate character. This pie weighed twenty pounds and was adorned with truffles, fine prawns on gold skewers and aspic jelly. On the top was a representation of the royal crown and cushion, with a scepter to which were attached streamers of royal blue, and at the base were four golden lions.

By the survival of an ancient custom the town of Yarmouth is bound to furnish to the sheriffs of Norwich annually a hundred herrings baked in twenty-four pies, which are then sent to the lord of the manor of East Clareton, who conveys them to the king.—Harper's Weekly.

The Transformation of Percy.

His name was Johnny, and his ambition was to be grown up. He had watched Cissy and Percy, but that's another storiette, as Kipling says.

"Papa," he piped as he walked with his dad on the beach, "what's under those rocks?"

"Limpets!" snapped papa. This was not the first question.

"Wouldn't they rather walk about, pa?"

"No!" rapped out pa. "They prefer to cling where they are!"

"Is everything that likes clinging to something else a limpet, pa?"

"For goodness—yes!" roared father.

Johnny thought.

"Well, pa," he concluded, "is Percy a limpet, pa, when he says goodby to Cissy in the passage?"—London Answers.

There Was a Coolness.

Two fashionable Philadelphia women met in Chelsea one morning recently. As they shook hands and stopped to speak Mrs. Brown said to Mrs. Jones, "That's a beautiful hat you are wearing."

"Yes, my dear. Isn't it cunning? And I'm so glad you like it. John gave me the money, and I had it imported from Paris."

Next day little Susie Brown was playing with the Jones girl, and she said, "My mother says your mother has an ugly old hat what is her last year's lid made up new."

And when Mr. Brown and Mr. Jones reached a mutual friend's, hoping to spend the week end together, they found a coolness between the families.—Philadelphia Times.

Hot Air as a Polisher.

Hot air is used for polishing. The articles to be treated are placed in a basket in a centrifugal machine driven at a very high speed and heated air is blown from a pipe through the basket. A high polish is thus produced very rapidly. Nickel plated articles that have become tarnished are made bright in a few minutes. Wet metal, fresh from the bath, needs no preliminary drying, for the current of air dries and polishes it at the same moment.

Punishment.

"Has Tommie been a good boy since I've been out?" said the mother.

"No, he hasn't," replied the father.

"Did you punish him?"

"No."

"Oh, yes, you did, pop! Don't you remember you sang to me?" came from the boy.—Yonkers Statesman.

Hard Luck Stories.

"I don't like to listen to hard luck stories, do you?"

"That depends on whether they are reminiscences or the preliminaries to a touch."—Washington Herald.

Hope is a flatterer, but the most upright of all parasites, for she frequents the poor man's flat as well as the palace of his superior.—Shenstone.

A STORM ON GALILEE.

Fierce While It Lasted, It Went as Quickly as It Came.

The sea of Galilee is not always calm. The mountains immediately adjoining it are 2,000 feet high, and through their deep gorges the storm winds are sucked into the hollow of the lake, so that sudden squalls come literally out of a blue sky. One charming spring morning we started out to sail from Tiberias to Capernaum. There was not a ripple on the water or a cloud in the heavens. But when we were a quarter of a mile from shore out boatmen noticed a band of rough water rushing toward us from the other side of the lake. In spite of our remonstrances they immediately gave up the plan for making Capernaum, took down the sail with such frantic haste that they nearly upset the boat and then rowed for the land with all their might and with such excited urgings to one another that we thought them a cowardly crew. But hardly had the boat been beached in a sheltered cove when the wind was howling down on us from the mountains and the heavy breakers were foaming along the shore as far out into the lake as we could see. A quarter of an hour later the sea of Galilee was again as level as a mirror, and only a soft, warm breeze was blowing over the smiling waters.—Travel Magazine.

SEWERS OF PARIS.

How This Great System Swallows Up the Litter of the Streets.

The Paris sewer system is said to be the finest in the world. The observant visitor in the French capital soon notices that its people have somewhat different ideas from ours as to the use of sewers, for he will see porters throw big bundles of paper down large openings left in the curb, and even rags and garbage.

On Shrove Tuesday there is a carnival along the Paris boulevards. From noon to midnight the crowd throws paper confetti in such quantities that the broad streets are covered with many tinted paper snow when the last revelers leave for home. The visitor wonders how this mess is to be cleared up. In the morning, however, every scrap is gone. If he had stayed out late enough he would have seen the litter swept and washed right into the sewers.

Perhaps that takes him underground to visit them, one of the sights of Paris. There are nearly 2,000 separate channels, some great aqueducts navigated in a boat, with walks on either side. They carry the telephone and telegraph cables, electric light wires, gas mains and pneumatic letter tubes. —Telephone Review.

Matter and Force.

There is no such thing as a loss of matter or force. The so called "conservation" of matter and its forces was demonstrated years ago by Joule and other scentists. When, for instance, a thing "burns up," as we say, the substances that give out the light and heat are changed, not destroyed. The wood or whatever the substance happens to be becomes ashes and gas, and if we could gather up all the products of the burning we should find that they had not lost a particle of their weight and that the form of them only was changed. The eternity of matter was a teaching of the old Greek philosophers, or of some of them at least, and the modern teaching of the conservation or indestructibility of the stuff of the universe would seem to corroborate the ancient idea.—New York American.

A Trail of Twisted Trees.

All manner of devices have been employed to mark a line of march, but it is thought that the most curious method of "blazing the trail" is that still to be seen in Africa. In the year 1889, after a fierce battle with the Abyssinians, the dervishes pursued their foes as far as the lake district. The mahdi's men had small knowledge of geography and little topographical intelligence. So the advance party, in order to mark the route for those who came after and also to guide the force on their return journey, twisted the saplings along the way into living knots. The war ended, but the tied up trees grew and flourished, although uncouthly twisted and distorted, and are now the only reminders of that uprising of the dervishes.

John Bunyan's Indictment.

The bill of indictment preferred against John Bunyan ran thus: "John Bunyan hath devilishly and perniciously abstained from coming to church to hear divine service and is a common upholder of several unlawful meetings and conventicles, to the disturbance and distraction of the good subjects of this kingdom, contrary to the laws of our sovereign lord the king." He was convicted and imprisoned twelve years and six months.

Our National Capitol.

"One thing I learned during a recent visit to Europe was that the average life of a stone building is not more than 700 years," said a builder. "Naturally I was interested in construction work and gave more attention to this part of Europe than I did to the examination of art galleries and the tombs of famous men. The buildings of Europe are no better in their construction than those of this country. I don't think I saw a building in Europe that is better built than the capitol in Washington. In nearly all of the older cities of England I noticed that the town halls, which had been constructed in many cases 500 years ago, were beginning to collapse. All of them had been patched up, and it was evident that they would not last a great many years longer. I do not think there is any doubt that the capitol building in Washington will be standing 500 years from now if it is not destroyed, but it will not last longer, nor will the treasury building, which is the finest example of its style of architecture in the United States."—Washington Post.

Historic Spot at Ems.

On the riverside promenade at Ems there is a stone inscribed: "13 Juli, 1870, 9 Uhr 10 Min. Morgens." This marks the exact spot where Wilhelm I. and Count Benedetti terminated the interview which led the French to declare war. After the Franco-Prussian war the old emperor often returned to Ems. On one occasion his doctor mentioned that the municipality wished to commemorate the interview with Benedetti, which they considered the most memorable event in the annals of the town. He was instructed to meet the emperor on the promenade by the Lahn at 6 a. m. the following day. Wilhelm then said: "During my lifetime let nothing be erected to recall that sorrowful struggle. When I am dead do as you please. Since you wish to know where I dismissed Benedetti it was here under this tree at 9:10 in the morning." And, saying this, he placed his foot on the spot where the monument now stands.

The Wonders of Color.

A small and simple experiment can be made by any reader which will go far to convince him or her what a debt we owe to color and what a good thing it is we have sunlight, which enables our eyes to take advantage of the beautiful hues of nature. Make a room quite dark and then burn some carbonate of soda in the flame of a bunsen gas burner. It will burn with an orange yellow light sufficiently strong to illuminate everything in the room, but you will realize with a sudden shock that, bright though the light is, all distinctions of color have vanished. Only light and shade remain. A crimson carnation, a blue violet, a red tablecloth, a yellow blind—all look gray or black or white. The faces of those present look positively repulsive, for all natural color has disappeared. No other experiment will so well convince those who have witnessed it how great a loss would be that of our sense for color.

A Risky Place For Doctors.

Medical skill is at a rather low ebb throughout Russia and not without cause. An American physician, tempted by the enormous fees so frequently paid by the nobility, went to St. Petersburg and within a year had a lucrative practice. Then he was called in to attend a baron who was suffering from lung trouble. The doctor gave his patient the best of care and skill, but the baron died, and the widow promptly sued the doctor for damages for unskilled treatment. The unlucky American was sentenced to pay a fine of 1,000 roubles and undergo an imprisonment of thirty days. Under the circumstances it is not surprising that the physician left Russia as soon as he got out of jail, and nothing could tempt him to return.

Knights of Old.

The knights of the days of chivalry were so well protected by their armor that they were practically invincible to all ordinary weapons. Even when dismounted they could not be injured save by the misericordia, a thin dagger, which penetrated the chains of the armor. In more than one battle knights fallen from their horses could not be killed until their armor had been broken up with axes and hammers.

LIFE OF THE SUN.

Old Sol's Heat Will Warm the Earth For Millions of Years.

The reason why the sun retains its heat in spite of the quantity that it gives out is explained by the fact that heat is generated by the fall of particles toward its center. The diameter of the sun diminishes annually by 150 meters, a little more than the ten-millionth part of its total.

According to estimates made, 30,000 years will pass before the solar radius diminishes enough to produce an effect appreciable by the most delicate instruments, always supposing that the astronomical instruments of the future will be similar to the instruments of the present. By like calculations it is estimated that the sun will send heat to the earth between six millions and eight millions of years longer.

Radium, which emits heat spontaneously and without cessation, is present in the sun. One gram of radium frees enough heat in one hour to raise a grain of water from the temperature of ice to the temperature of boiling water. Hence the presence of this element assists in the preservation of the sun's heat. The spectroscope reveals great quantities of helium in the sun, quantities great in proportion to the sun's other elements. The presence of helium is due to the disaggregation of radium. Two grams of radium per ton of the sun's elements would be enough for the entire regeneration of all the heat lost by the sun.—Harper's Weekly.

SUNFLOWERS.

Their Pith Makes Fine Interlining For Battleship Armor.

The most remarkable use to which the sunflower has been put is in the construction of battleships. The stalk of the plant is very pithy, and even when compressed into blocks this pith is capable of absorbing a tremendous quantity of water. These blocks, in which the pith retains some of its flexibility, have been employed with much success in the solution of the vexed problem of the lining of a battleship's sides. They are placed between two walls of steel, and the substance is so resilient that it completely closes up the hole made by a projectile, keeping out the water for a long time.

Another little known use of the sunflower is in the manufacture of cigars. There is not a part of the plant that is without commercial value. The seed, which is raised by hundreds of millions of pounds every year in Russia, makes a palatable edible oil, with a residue of seed cake for cattle, or it may be fed in the kernel to poultry. The blossoms furnish honey first and then an excellent yellow dye. As for the stalks, the Chinese are clever enough to get a sort of silky fiber from them, and they are also good for fuel and for the production of potash. In New England it is believed that the sunflower "keeps away malaria." It is also believed that the blossoms follow the sun in its daily course, but that is not true.

When the Immortals Nodded.

The French papers have made much of a slip by M. Emilie Faguet in his oration before the academy. The academician rendered to Caesar more than was Caesar's, for he gave the "fighter and writer" credit for a line which belongs to Cato. But it seems the immortals are not immune from lapsus linguae. General Langlois got mixed up with Palestro and Solferino. Even Scribe and Moliere refer to the revocation of the edict of Nantes, which took place in 1685, twelve years after Moliere's death. But perhaps a more glaring instance is that of Montesquin, who, in his "Esprit des Lois," volumn 1, chapter xxi, 22, writes, "I have many times deplored the blindness of the council of Francis I., who rebuffed Christopher Columbus when he propounded his scheme for India." But Francis I. ascended the throne in 1515, nine years after the date of the death of Columbus.—London Globe.

What Gold Beaters Can Do.

Gold beaters by hammering can reduce gold leaves so thin that 282,000 must be laid upon each other to produce the thickness of an inch, yet each leaf is so perfect and free from holes that one of them laid upon any surface, as in gilding, gives the appearance of solid gold. They are so thin that if formed into a book 1,500 would only occupy the space of a single leaf of common paper, and an octavo volume of an inch thick would have as many pages as the books of a well stocked library of 1,500 volumes with 200 pages in each.

EFFECTIVE LUNCH SETS.

The omission of a tablecloth for breakfast and lunch is so general that no housekeeper can have too many plate doilis. This is a teip to th girl who is wondering what she can give a wealthy friend.

It is possible with little effort to make a complete luncheon set, centrepiece, plate dollies and tumbler doilies to match. The first should be twenty-eight or thirty inches in diameter, the plate doilies nine inches and the tumbler size five and a half inches.

Use a good round thread linen of fine, firm grade, as some women do not care for the coarse crash effects for table use. If possible, get hand-bleached quality. It costs more, but wears much better.

Both colored and white embroidery are in good style, but if elaborate work is to be done the all-white set is more satisfactory, as it stays in style longer and washes better.

Do not attempt more elaborate designs than you can do well. There is nothing uglier than rough, coarse embroidery and a simple chain stitch or briar stitched set is prettier than badly worked satin or eyelet stitch.

A novel effect in arranging rows of scallops is to form shallow pyramids, pointing to the centre. This needs careful measuring and some computation before any stamping is done.

Arrange the design for the three sizes on paper, and trace or take an impression from that. It takes less time and is more accurate than to draw on the design free hand.

A crotcheted lunch set is always in favor and lovely simple patterns can be found.

A crocheted lunch set is always in favor and lovely simple patterns can be found.

If you want this kind of a set to be appreciated work very firmly, as the loose mats will not launder in the stiff forms now in vogue for such mats.

The girl who does lace work can make exquisite lunch sets at small cost. A filet set with a nine-inch square for the plate doilies, a six-inch square for the centre-piece makes a handsome gift, if finely done.

It is more novel to use just the lace squares or ovals for the mats than to combine with linen or other lace. The hostess can use them over a color for variety. Edges are sometimes finished in a buttonholed Vandyke, or if the machine net is used the strands are turned in along the bar and button-holed over to make a straight edge a quarter of an inch deep.

It is often possible to pick up sets of lace motifs that can be applied to linen at bargain prices. The Irish crochet medallions sold by Armenians by the dozen can be turned into handsome sets by combining with a little hand embroidery in satin stitch and cut work.

Another good-looking set for one who does not embroider is made by combining small lace squares with cluny or filet insertion. These can be finished with a narrow picot edge or with an applied linen hem.

Drilled Him.

Even an extremely aggressive enemy can be conquered by strategy; it is only a question of employing the stratagem fitted to the case.

An open-air preacher of East London understood this, and his stratagem fitted to a charm. He was addressing a crowd, where a soldier, who had been drinking came up and ridiculed the service. Finding it was useless to ignore the man, the preacher said:

"Ah! my friend, you're no soldier. No servant of the king would get drunk and interrupt a peaceful service."

The man said he was a soldier, and asked the preacher to test him.

"Very well," was the reply, "I will. Now then. Attention!"

This the soldier did as well as his condition would allow.

"About—turn!"

This order was also obeyed, though with some trouble.

"Quick march!"

And off went the valiant soldier, marching down the Mile End road at a quick pace, while the preacher resumed his address.—Tit-Bits.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Dec. 24, 1911.

Topic.—The gift that transforms the world.—II Cor. ix, 15; Luke i, 46-55. (Christmas meeting.) Edited by Rev. Sherman H. Doyle, D. D.

The gift that is transforming the world is Jesus Christ. And as we look upon the world at this joyous season of the year, when the anniversary of His birth is being celebrated, we can see many of the transforming influences of the religion of Christ. Nations have been transformed. The social relations of life have in many respects been changed. Never before were the doctrines of the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man so universally and so practically believed. Between man and man the world over there is a feeling of peace and of good will, exemplifying the transforming influences of Christianity. Millions of homes and individual hearts and lives have been transformed by Christ, and there are joy and thanksgiving to God for "His unspeakable gift."

Christ is the gift of God to the world. "Every good and perfect gift cometh from above," and Christ is no exception. "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life." It was the love of God for a lost and ruined world that inspired Christ's coming into the world. What matchless, wondrous love! The world has never been able to fully comprehend the love that could lead an infinite being to give His only Son for it. It never will be able to do so, but if we cannot fully comprehend it we can, to the extent of our comprehension, appreciate it and be thankful unto God for it, and into our hearts there may be born a love that will enable us to more fully comprehend the love of God for us. Love alone is the interpreter of love.

Christ is indeed an unspeakable gift. By no power of speech can we declare what the gift of Christ meant to God or what it meant to the world. No words can express the world's need of Christ or the full measure of His ability to satisfy every want and need of the human heart and of mankind. What Christ is to the saved soul nor tongue nor pen can tell.

The love of Christ—what it is None but His loved ones know.

And this knowledge is experimental. It is heart knowledge, impossible of expression or utterance in human language, but all the more real and precious to us because we cannot express it.

Christ, the gift of God to the world, should be accepted. What would we think of a child who would reject a valuable, loving gift from a parent of this season of giving gifts? It is not probable that any such child exists. Yet how many reject God's unspeakable gift! "He came to His own, and His own received Him not." Of how many this can be said today, as well as of ancient Israel? We are all God's children. "We are His people and the sheep of His pasture." Let us therefore show our appreciation of His great love by accepting Christ and by giving ourselves absolutely and unconditionally to Him.

BIBLE READINGS.
Isa. vii, 14; ix, 6; Matt. i, 20-23; ii, 1-12; Luke ii, 1-20; xv, 1-10; John iii, 16; Rom. vi, 23; viii, 32; xii, 1, 2; II Cor. iii, 18; I John iii, 1, 2.

The Training of Officers.

Those of us that travel widely have the common experience of meeting many a young man and woman in active Christian work—for example, secretaries in the Y. M. C. A.—who gladly acknowledge that they were led into that work by the training that they received in the Christian Endeavor society. It was there they got their chance.

So the Christian Endeavor society is in fact a training school.

Here and there, however, one hears murmurings of inefficiency. Why does not the society train still more?

One reason is that real training can be expected only when there are trainers who give time and thought to their work.

It is notorious that the Christian Endeavor society is often allowed to struggle along as best it can. I know churches that have paid helpers for the Sunday school, but never dream of the necessity of pedagogical work in the Christian Endeavor society.

We need officers' training classes.

Suppose the pastor or some other capable worker held a regular training class for Christian Endeavor officers and taught them their duties. Suppose he at the same time held a class for committee chairmen and studied their work with them, suggesting things that might be done and ways to do them. Is it not evident that this instruction would tell upon the efficiency of the whole society? Christian Endeavor would be a training school indeed.

The fact is that most societies need a Christian Endeavor supervisor who will do just this kind of work and do it all the time.

If the pastor cannot undertake the task it might be made the duty of former presidents, for whom it seems to be difficult to find positions. They know the work. They can show the younger members "how."

We have pastoral counselors for unions. We need counselors or supervisors for societies.—Rev. R. P. Anderson.

SIGNATURES ON CHECKS.

The Plainer They Are the Less They Appeal to Forgers.

"You ought to sign your check differently, Mr. Blank," said a Chicago bank employee to a depositor whose account runs well up toward $100,000 a year.

"What's the matter with that check?" asked the customer, nettled that, as he thought, it should be intimated he didn't know how to draw a check.

"You misunderstand me," said the teller. "The check's all right. I was referring to your signature. It is just the kind that a forger takes delight in copying. If you will allow me the privilege of saying so, you're liable to meet with loss in that way at any time. Any good penman could imitate it so cleverly you'd hardly know the difference yourself.

"The plainer the signature the less likelihood there is of a crook trying to imitate it," he continued after the depositor had become interested. "In nearly every big forgery of which I ever heard, or in many of them at least, the signature imitated was that of a man who wrote with a flourish or who had some peculiar type of writing that ordinarily would appeal to the laity as hard to imitate. It is a fact that it is a rare occurrence for a big forger to attempt to imitate the signature of the man who writes a plain hand.

"Not long ago I had occasion to tell a friend of mine he stood a chance of having some forger get a good sized check in on him. My friend changed the style of his signature, and a few days later he was asked by a bank to inspect a check which had been presented for payment and to which his old style signature was attached. He had changed just in time. The forger had been practicing on the old signature, getting it down 'pat,' and had not ascertained that the new signature was being used."—Chicago News.

CAMELS ARE VICIOUS.

They Have Numerous Dislikes, the Chief of Which Is Man.

A peculiarity of the camel is his dislikes. Likes he has none, save for the mimosa thorn and, perhaps, for dying. He hates red, and when, years ago, some genius of the British army equipped the squadrons of the camel corps with bright crimson saddles the animals so resented the outrage that numbers of them gave up the ghost in pure disgust.

The camel always, of course, hates man and sometimes displays his vindictiveness in no uncertain manner. A dignified and elderly British officer has been seen to foot it all round the camp in blue silk pajamas, with one slipper and a shaving brush, closely pursued by his own animal, with his long neck stretched to the utmost and his savage mouth much too near that sleeping suit to be pleasant. At length a fatigue party was summoned, who, with telegraph poles, young trees, railway ties and such cajoleries, prevailed upon the beast to desist.

As a mount the camel is said to possess distinct advantages. His gait is comfortable when one has learned to ride him, and for really long journeys, which must perforce be made at a slow pace, he is much less tiring than a horse. Besides, he carries with him all manner of things the rider is likely to need en route—canvas buckets of water, in which bottles stand to cool; a writing desk (not necessarily of the office type), but still an efficient substitute; a luncheon basket, rifles, telescopes, a mountain gun, if required, and other needful articles.

Long Arrow Flights.

There was a marvelous archery feat performed some years ago by Sir Ralph Payne Gallwey on the links at Le Touquet. Shooting with a Turkish bow, he covered a distance of 367 yards with his best arrow, thus breaking all records achieved in recent times. This performance, however, seems to have been exceeded with the old national weapon of yew. Neade, a famous archer under Charles I., states that the ordinary range of the bow was from 320 to 400 yards. The longest shot authentically recorded in England is that of a secretary of the Turkish embassy, who in 1794 shot an arrow 463 yards with the wind and 415 against it in the presence of several members of the Royal Toxophilite society, who measured the distance and preserved the arrow.—Pall Mall Gazette.

The Usual Motion.

To a judge at St. Joseph, Mo., an old negro once applied for a marriage license. It was not the province of the judge to issue such a paper; but, knowing the applicant's history, he asked:

"Ephraim, were you ever married before?"

"Jes' once, jedge," was the reply.

"Wasn't that enough?"

"Mebbe, jedge, but I want a new trial."—St. Louis Republic.

Sarcasm by the Way.

"Look out," said the woman with the determined look, "or that dog will bite a piece out of you."

"Well," replied Plodding Pete, "rememberin' dat handout you passed me last week, I wouldn't blame de pup fur goin' in desperate fur a change of food."—Washington Star.

Pessimistic.

Optimist—A gran' mornin' the morn!
Misanthrope (grudgingly) — It's no a'thegither ill—(brightening) but, eh, mon, think o' the national debt.—London Sketch.

ZEBRAS IN AFRICA.

They Are a Fearful Pest and a Menace to Civilization.

Zebras in Africa are a nuisance and a menace to civilization, according to John T. McCutcheon in "Hunting Adventures In the Big Game Country." He says:

Then there's the ubiquitous zebra, almost as numerous as the kongoni. You see vast herds of zebras at many places along the railway, and thereafter, as you roam about the level spots of east Africa, you are always running into herds of them. At first the sight of a herd of zebras is a surprise, for you have been accustomed to seeing them in the small numbers found in captivity. It is a source of passing wonder that these rare animals should be roaming about the suburbs of towns in hundred lots. You decide that it would be a shame to shoot a zebra and determine not to join in this heartless slaughter.

Later on your sentiments will undergo a change. Everybody will tell you that the zebra is a fearful pest and must be exterminated if civilization and progress are to continue. The zebra is absolutely useless, and efforts to domesticate him have been without good results. He tramps over the plains, breaks down fences, tears up the cultivated fields and really fulfills no mission in life save that of supplying the lions with food. As long as the zebras stay the lions will be there, but the settlers says that the lions are even preferable to the zebras.

Under the old game ordinance expiring December 15, 1909, a sportsman was allowed two zebras under his license. Under the new one he is allowed twenty! That reveals the attitude of east Africa toward the jaunty little striped pony.

THE TONIC OF VICTORY.

Army Surgeons Say It Acts Almost as an Anaesthetic.

Bonnette, a French army surgeon, writes in the Presse Medicale of the extraordinary indifference to the pain of operation manifested by the soldiers of Napoleon while the great conqueror was sweeping victoriously over Europe. While the defeated soldier is full of imaginary terrors, subject to panic, madness and treason, the conqueror, on the other hand, is intoxicated with success, says the New York Medical Journal. Nothing, not even the morbific microbe, can resist troops who believe themselves to be invincible.

Victory is the most powerful of restoratives and deepest of anaesthetics. Legless members of the old guard crowded into an ambulance would at sight of the emperor rise on their stumps to salute him. After Eylau Larrey operated uninterruptedly for thirty-six hours, and he reports how the soldiers seemed unconscious of their own troubles, lost in thought of the glory of their leader, and, maimed as they were, lending their best aid to fellow patients.

At Borodino Larrey disarticulated the shoulder of a colonel, who immediately set out for France on foot, where he arrived after three months walking. After fording the Beresina, a river in Russia, General Zayonchek, seventy-five years old, had his kneecap shattered by a bullet. Amputation was performed in three minutes in a violent snowstorm and in bitterly cold weather, yet the white haired officer was placed in a sledge and taken to Vilna, where he died at the age of eighty-six years. Many similar anecdotes are told by our civil war veterans.

Stupid Fish.

Professor Harold Russell, the London zoologist, will have none of the popular yarns about the wonderful things fish will do when put to it. He says they are deaf, dumb and virtually color blind. When the calcareous stones are taken out of the ears of fish they lose all sense of equilibrium and roll about as if crazy. Most fish hunt their food by only defective sight, but the eels by even more defective smell. A conger eel with which Professor Russell experimented devoured with the same avidity fish dosed with cheese, anchovy, camphor spirits, turpentine and iodoform.

Where We Aim.

William Dean Howells in one of his talks about literature said: "Good literature is always condemned on its first appearance. That is because, being original, it is new and strange. Shelley's work was bitterly condemned at first. So was Coleridge's. So was Wordsworth's. So was Stephen Crane's." Mr. Howells paused, then added impressively, "Stones are only thrown at those trees which are heavy with fruit."

The Fertile Rock.

Gibraltar is often called a barren rock, yet it has 456 species of indigenous flowering plants. Castor oil plants, daturas and daphnes attain the dignity of trees and geraniums and heliotropes the proportions of hedges. These floral delights often conceal cannon and other armaments. The few snakes that are found are small and harmless. Lizards several inches long are often seen.

Oh!

"The little son of the hostess is mighty ugly, isn't he?"

"Do you think so?"

"He certainly doesn't take after his mother. Must look like his father."

"His mother says he does. I'm his father."—Houston Post.

INSTRUCTIVE LECTURE ON THE AMERICAN NAVY

Under the auspices of the Brotherhood of the First M. E. church, Chaplain D. H. Tribou, U. S. N., gave a delightful lecture in Vincent chapel, last night, on "The Old Navy and the New." Several hundred fine views were shown beginning with the old wooden hull vessel of the earliest times and then showing the latest batleships, torpedo destroyers, etc., which comprises the navy of today.

Interesting features of the lecture were the pictures and description of the Monitor and Merrimac, the incidents of that conflict being more or less fresh in the minds of older people. Throughout his talk, Chaplain Tribou related incidents of special interest in connection with his long years of service in the navy. He compared the old navy with the new giving those present an excellent idea of the fighting strength of the naval armament. He also praised the officers and men comprising the naval force, referring to them as a brave and patriotic body of men.

The views shown were personally obtained by Chaplain Tribou and form one of the most valuable collections in existence. They were displayed in rapid succession, the speaker making a few explanatory remarks about each one in passing.

NEWSBOYS OF CITY GUESTS OF Y.M.C.A.

The newsboys' annual Christmas party was held yesterday afternoon at the Young Men's Christian Association and thirty-five of the city's "newsies" availed themselves of the opportunity offered to disport themselves in the pool after going through a lot of gymnastic stunts. Following the swim the lads were conducted to the auditorium and treated to a motion picture exhibition. Then the party feature of the affair took place in the parlors.

W. C. Bingaman, the boys' department secretary, in a short speech explained the significance of the day and briefly outlined why Christmas is most important of all holidays. In closing he presented each youth with two appropriate books, the gift of one of the men prominent in the association. The boys were then permitted to follow their natural bent in enjoying themselves with the different games, while the refreshments were being prepared. More sociability followed the feast. Mr. Bingaman was assisted in entertaining and serving by James McNamee, Donald Ketcham, Patrick Gleason and Harold McDowell.

SALVATION ARMY'S HELP FOR THE POOR.

The annual distribution of Christmas dinner baskets by the local corps of the Salvation Army will be held tonight at 8 o'clock. Up to this morning applications have been provided for at least 600 persons and it is expected that by this evening enough money will be received through the kettles on the streets to provide for an additional 100, which will bring the total to 700, the number that the Salvationists have been aiming at to help.

On Wednesday evening the Christmas tree for the poor children will be given at the Army Hall, when 250 will be provided for. Any person having used toys in good condition which they will donate for this purpose may communicate with Captain Hewitt, who will send for them. A number of the most worthy families are receiving a half ton of coal in addition to the dinner.

A large delegation from Central Lodge, No. 48, A. O. U. W., visited Elizabeth lodge, No. 29, last night accompanying L. J. Spicer and E. M. Harris, superintendent, was in charge. The church was decorated with greens, an illuminated star appearing over the organ, while on the pulpit platform was placed a large white cross.

Special features of the program included a number of selections by the Cecelia String Quartet, which were greatly enjoyed. There were several quartet selections and in addition duet numbers, violin, and 'cello and violin solos by Miss Josephine Hills. All of these were of a classical order. Howard M. Another delightful feature was a short address by Frank L. Brown, of Brooklyn, superintendent of the largest Sunday-school in the world. Having recently returned from a trip around the world for the International Sunday-school Association, he related several incidents of the trip and also displayed articles obtained in China and Japan. He told of the progress of Christianity in these foreign countries, and recalled a Christmas entertainment in a Sunday-school in Tokio which lasted for nearly six hours, and he was called upon to make an address at 11 o'clock at night. A number of incidents showing how the natives who have been converted sold their valuables to obtain money for the spread of the Gospel, were related. Mr. Brown referred to the revolution in China and predicted that it would mean a better day for that country.

One of the more interesting features of the service was the presentation of gifts to the poor by the different departments and classes of the Sunday-school and in addition $31.28 was the amount of the offering for the Day Nursery. Mackey, teacher, fruits and cereals; 26, Miss May Serrell, teacher, Xmas dinner for poor family.

The Men's classes and officers were called upon for their gifts, which were as follows:

Class No. 1, Dr. N. B. Probasco, teacher, two barrels potatoes, one barrel turnips, one case of tomatoes; 2, Harold Serrell, teacher, Christmas dinner an toys; 3, Mrs. Lewis H. Matlack, teacher, ton of coal; 4, F. S. Thompson, teacher, Christmas dinner and money; 5, R.C.Brown, teacher, ton of coal; 6, Mrs. J. L. HELD FOR GRAND JURY ON 2 SERIOUS CHARGES

Dominic Rocco, of Cottage place, was held to wait the action of the Union County Grand Jury by Judge DeMeza in the city court this morning on a complaint made by Chief Kiely charging him with conducting a disorderly place. His treatment of Miss Minnie Remppies, of Webster place, who is only fifteen years old, forms a more serious charge filed against him. Miss Jessie Vail, of East Second street, also figures in the case.

Last August Rocco and Dominic Paretti, the later a fugitive, having escaped on the Saturday night when Rocco was arrested, rented a place on Cottage place and induced the two young women mentioned to reside there. Subsequently the girls were arrested in Elizabeth for disorderly conduct and sentenced to a jail term. While they were serving time a raid was made on the pool room conducted by the men on North avenue and in the investigation incident thereto, information was procured regarding the home life of the men. Learning of the exposure, Paretti fled. The same charges were made against him and the women are also held under the disorderly conduct act and as material witnesses. Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., assistant prosecutor, appeared for the State at the hearing this morning and Rocco was represented by Victor d'Alvio, of Newark.

HARTMAN ACQUITTED OF MANSLAUGHTER

In six minutes a jury in the Union County Court at Elizabeth last night brought in a verdict of acquittal in the cast of William F. Hartman, engine driver, who was charged with manslaughter in causing the death of three persons at the Elizabeth avenue station of the Jersey Central Railroad.

The victims of the accident were Mrs. Anna Elizabeth Stone, of Riverhead, L. I.; her daughter, Mrs. Hannah Cosgrove, of Bedford, and Edward S. Saunders, of Point Pleasant, the baggageman of the station. The women were crossing the tracks when the train came along. Saunders tried to shove the women aside when the engine hit all of them, killing them almost instantly.

MISS VAN DEVENTER'S CLASS GIVES A COTILLON.

Miss Frances VanDeventer's private evening dancing class held a successful cotillon last night at the Park Club, and despite the inclement weather the affair was largely attended. The hall was elaborately decorated with Christmas greens and large red bells and the favors were also in keeping with the season.

The guests were received by Mrs. Augustus V. Heely, Mrs. T. M. Day, Mrs. E. L. Mackenzie, Mrs. John Constable Moore and Mrs. Josiah Brown. The patronesses were Mrs. E. H. Ladd, Mrs. Frank Rowland and Mrs. J. P. Stevens.

P. H. S. GIRLS HOLD XMAS PARTY AT Y. W. C. A.

The Plainfield High School Girls' Club held a Christmas party last night in the Young Women's Christian Association. Twenty-five members of the club gathered around the Christmas tree and sang songs and told stories.

Miss Mildred MacCauliff played the role of Santa Claus in costume and presented each girl with a small gift to which was attached an appropriate jest. During the evening refreshments were served in the form of nuts and candy from the tree.

DIES IN ST. PAUL

Chester N. Randolph Passes Away While His Mother Prepares to go West.

HAD BEEN ILL EIGHT WEEKS.

Young Man Was a Telegraph Operator—Formerly Attended Borough Schools—Body to Be Brought to This City.

Chester Newton Randolph, aged 27 years, son of Mrs. Minnie A. Randolph, and the late George F. Randolph, died yesterday in a hospital in St. Paul, Minn., where he had been under treatment for heart trouble for the past eight weeks. His mother, who resides on East Front street, was prepared to start yesterday morning for St. Paul, having recovered from an attack of appendicitis, when she received a telegram telling her of her son's death.

Mr. Randolph was born at Asbury Park, and only lived here a short time as a boy. He attended the North Plainfield High School for awhile. Three years ago he went west and for a time was a telegraph operator in the employ of the Western Union Telegraph Company on the Canadian Pacific Railroad. Recently, he gave up that position owing to ill health and returned to St. Paul, where he was employed in the main office of the Western Union. He has a brother, Wesley Randolph, who is a telegraph operator in the employ of the Associated Press in St. Paul.

Mr. Randolph's father, who died four years ago, was employed by both the Postal and Western Union companies for years, and was an expert operator. Surviving beside a mother are two sisters, Ida Randolph-Smalley and Miss Pearl Randolph, and one brother, Wesley Randolph. The funeral will be held at 402 Park avenue, Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Rev. E. C. Conover, of the Temple Baptist church, will officiate and the burial will be in North Plainfield cemetery.

MIDNIGHT MASS IN NEW ST. JOSEPH'S CHURCH

Christmas Day will be ushered in most auspiciously by the members of St. Joseph's parish, who will occupy their new church for the first time, holding solemn mass at midnight. The service will be elaborate and because of the great interest manifested admission will be only by card of invitation.

The midnight mass to be sung will be that of Wilkins, "The Holy Child" and the 'Adeste Fideles," of Novello, will also be given. Rev. Father William H. Miller will be celebrant, a Passionist Father, deacon, and Rev. Father Baldwin, sub-deacon. An augmented choir in charge of Choirmaster J. E. Bailey, will be assisted by Paroubek's orchestra. Mrs. Harry G. DeMeza will preside at the organ. The altar will be decorated with palms and plants.

Other services are to be held in the old church on Christmas Day at 7:30, 8:30 and 9:30. The masses tomorrow will not vary from those customarily held. At the conclusion of the midnight mass, the papal blessing will be given.

Disorderly Boy Arraigned.

William Fass, a ten-year-old boy living on Duer street, was arraigned in the borough police court this morning charged with disorderly conduct. Fass and three other youngsters were arrested yesterday afternoon on Somerset street, where they were shouting insulting names at an aged man. Recorder Dolliver suspended sentence on young Fass after giving the boy a severe reprimand. The other boys will be given a hearing Tuesday morning.

Rector McCoy Arrives.

Rev. William S. McCoy, the new rector of the Holy Cross church, arrived in Plainfield from Rochester, N. Y., this morning and at once began preparations for taking charge of the parish work. He will be in charge of the services tomorrow and on Christmas Day. Mr. McCoy is enthusiastic over the prospects for work in his parish and just as quickly as possible he will re-organize all departments in the parish.

Sparks Call Out Department.

Sparks issuing from the chimney of H. Bernard Coombe's home on Madison avenue, last night, were noticed by Patrolman Messler and thinking the house was afire he pulled box 78. When the firemen arrived Mr. Coombe explained that the sparks must have been caused by a fresh lot of wood fed into an open grate as an inspection showed that there was no other blaze.

MAYOR BIDS ADIEU

Borough's Chief Executive Speaks to Council at Last Session.

NEW MEMBERS ARE SWORN IN.

Frank Schuck Retires From Fire Department After Serving Forty-one Years—Routine Matters Disposed of.

Mayor N. B. Smalley and the members of the 1911 Borough Council assembled for the last time at a special meeting last night to wind up all business in preparation for the coming of the new administration. Formal leavetaking concluded the session, during which the executive made an address, thanking the councilmen for their support during his term.

William J. Buttfield, who was recently appointed to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of B. R. Waldron, attended the meeting and was sworn in by the mayor. He was afterwards appointed chairman of the committee on streets and a member of the committee on laws, ordinance and taxation. E. W. Rushmore, the incoming councilman by election, was also sworn in by Mayor Smalley. He will assume his seat January 1, succeeding William L. Smalley, whose term expires.

It was after 9 o'clock before the Council settled down to business and the routine work was disposed of in rapid order. The bills were passed the first thing to make sure that no matter what was done all hands would get their money for Christmas. The requests of the Board of Health and overseer-of-the-poor for an increase of $200 in their appropriations, which came up at a previous meeting, was given consideration. A general discussion ensued, during which it was pointed out that the health officials had accomplished a great deal of new work during the past year, and had consequently been put to added expense. The same facts apply to the overseer, who has taken care of a record number of applications for help, many of them the result of sickness in poor families. It was finally decided to grant the two amounts.

Frank Schuck, who has been a member of the borough fire department since 1869, serving in recent years as engineer, tendered his resignation. It was embodied in a letter of explanation which stated some of the reasons why he had decided to retire. One of these was to the effect that his care of the engine had been criticized by Councilman Stahl. The latter said he had spoken about the cleaning part early in the year course. Mayor Smalley, he said, was present at the time. The mayor observed that the proper cleaning of the engine had been a mooted question and he was sorry that Mr. Shuck had taken umbrage at the councilman's remark. The resignation was accepted.

In his farewell remarks, Mayor Smalley said his associations in the borough work had been pleasant and he left the duties of the office with the thought that he had endeavored to give his best for the interests of the municipality. He thanked his colleagues warmly for their help but said that at not ime had he made an appointment with the understanding that it was in return for any services rendered.

The new Council will assemble for organization on New Year's day when Mayor-elect Clark will make his appointments.

Bird announced today that for the accommodation and convenience of people who are expecting first-class mail he will keep the postoffice open tomorrow morning from 9:30 to 11 o'clock. The rush of first-class mail today is unusually heavy and all of the carriers were late in starting on their routes this morning. 'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

The bad weather did not interfere with Santa Claus' visit to the young people of the M. E. church at the Christmas entertainment held last night in the church. A pleasing program was rendered by the pupils, which was enjoyed by a number of the friends of the school who had braved the storm. Santa Claus had presents for everyone, not forgetting the pastor, Rev. Mr. Rockey.

The bad weather no doubt interfered with the attendance last night at the Bucket and Engine Company dance held in Saengerbund Hall, North Plainfield.

Charles Haberly, who has been seriously ill for several weeks past, is reported as being somewhat improved.

Special Christmas services will be preached tomorrow morning by the pastors of all the local churches.

EX-MAYOR MADDEN WILL RUN AS WILSON DELEGATE.

Trenton, Dec. 23.—Democratic State Chairman Edward S. Grosscup, who has been busy for some time past endeavoring to secure men to become candidates for delegates to the Democratic National Convention in the interest of Governor Wilson's Presidential aspirations, yesterday announced that former Mayor Walter Madden, of Trenton, now sheriff of Mercer county, had consented to enter the field as a candidate for delegate from this district as a Wilson man.

THINKS SMITH-NUGENT EMNITY HELPS WILSON.

"I believe the opposition of James Nugent and James Smith, Jr., has strengthened Governor Woodrow Wilson throughout the country," so Congressman Hughes, of New Jersey, said, just as he was boarding the train to go home for the holidays.

Mr. Hughes had been asked what were his views of the reported intention of former United States Senator James Smith, Jr., to work for the election of a delegation to the Democratic National Convention that would be against Wilson for the nomination for President.

"I think that the strengthening of the Wilson standing over the country through the opposition of Smith and Nugent has been really material: that it has been no inconsiderable element in the rapid growth of Wilson sentiment in all other States," he continued.

"And I firmly believed that New Jersey will send a delegation to the Democratic convention that will support Wilson, not perfunctorily, but with enthusiasm."

Mr. Hughes expressed the opinion that the opposition to Wilson has come to a frame of mind that moves it to turn to any one in the whole field who offers the slightest promise that he will be able to withdraw strength from Wilson's following, and that it is Wilson against the field, with Wilson leading the field.

The New Jersey Congressman expresses the view that the opponents of Wilson hope, as a desperate last chance, to prevent the procurement of two-thirds of the delegates in the national convention, in the hope that they will be able to tie up the issue and in some manner turn the votes to another candidate.

In his opinion, the situation in the House is explained best by remembering the personal popularity of both Clark and Underwood, and the consequent reluctance on the part of many to come out into the open for Wilson; but Mr. Hughes believes that it is the judgment of most House members that Wilson is far in the lead of any other one who has been mentioned for the nomination.

ACTION ON LICENSE IS AGAIN DEFERRED.

A special meeting of the Elizabeth Board of Excise was held last night to act on the charges of Sunday selling against George Ferrance, of 500 Bayway. Ferrance was summoned before the board three months ago to show cause why his license should not be revoked as a result of evidence to the effect that he sold on Sunday. He had then already been indicted by the Grand Jury for selling on Sunday, and his attorney, William R. Wilson, obtained several postponements of the case before the Excise Board on the grounds that that body should await the outcome of the case pending in the county courts.

The license that Ferrance was required to show cause why it should not be revoked expired December 13, and when the matter came up last night City Attorney Connolly announced that the fact that the license had expired made it necessary to discontinue the case, as it could not be required of a man to show cause why something that he did not possess should be taken away from him.

Ferrance has made application for a new license, and it will come up at the meeting of the Excise Board Tuesday night. It was laid over at the last meeting of the board as a result of a conference with the Mayor who took the position that a renewal should not be granted.

BABCOCK BUILDING PLAINFIELD, N. J.

JERSEY CENTRAL BUYS ELIZABETH PROPERTY.

With the purchase of the large storage warehouse owned by George Weimer, the Central Railroad Company has manifested the fact that it will buy considerable property along its Long Branch division in Elizabeth for the purpose of elevating its tracks. It is said that the purchase price of the building was $69,000.

The railroad company is also negotiating for the purchase of the property of Peter B. Kelly and the Long Branch House, at Elizabeth avenue and the Long Branch tracks. It has also been learned that the company has bought from the Rising Sun Brewing Company the property at the Long Branch tracks and Trumbull street, a few hundred feet from the Elizabethport station. General Dennis F. Collins, president of the Peter Breidt Brewery Company, declared yesterday that negotiations would be closed January 5, 1912, for the purchase by the railroad of the Long Branch House.

For the past year Mayor Stein has waged a bitter war against the railroad for its apparent disregard of the grade crossings abolition question. Several conferences have been held between the Mayor and the railroad authorities. The purchase of the property is taken as an indication that the railroad will do away with all the grade crossings along the Long Branch division in this city.

SLEEPER CHARGES HIS SHOES WERE SET AFIRE.

While Jacob Seman was snoozing in a Bayway bakery in Elizabeth early yesterday someone removed his shoes, filled them with alcohol, touched a match to the fluid and enjoyed the pyrotechnical display that resulted. Jacob did not appreciate the joke when he awoke and caused the arrest of Benjamin Probizesky. When the twain appeared before Judge Mahon in the police court the complainant was shy on evidence and the defendant was long on mirth. Consequently the case was laid over for a week to give an opportunuity to solve the mystery.

WESTFIELD MAY HAVE NEW $40,000 CLUBHOUSE.

The committee on ways and means appointed by the general committee of twenty-two of prominent citizens of Westfield to formulate plans for a new clubhouse in Westfield, met at the home of Charles E. Halstead, 240 East Dudley avenue, Thursday night.

The matter was thoroughly discussed and it was the opinion that a private club should be formed. The committee favored a building costing about $30,000 or $40,000. The building will contain bowling alleys, a large auditorium for dances and other features of an up-to-date clubhouse.

METUCHEN MAN WEDS ABOARD OCEAN LINER.

As soon as the gangplank of the North German-Lloyd liner Kronprinzessin Cecilie was made fast at her Hoboken pier, Thursday night, Dr. Max Theodore Rossnow, of Metuchen, rushed aboard with Pastor Doering, of the German Immigrant House, at 4 State street, Hoboken, in search of Miss Marie Meyer, Dr. Rossnow's fiancee, who was a first cabin passenger. Having found her, they were married forthwith. Dr. Rossnow, who had expected the vessel to arrive at 8 o'clock, was not to be deterred from having the ceremony performed, notwithstanding the lateness of the hour. He had hoped to be married on December 21, but the tardy docking of the Kronprinzessin delayed the ceremony until shortly after midnight.

The chief steward arranged to have the ceremony performed in the main lounge and a large party assembled there. After the ceremony the couple left the steamship for Metuchen. Miss Meyer had never been to this country before.

Mrs. Sturma Gets Verdict.

The doctors called as witnesses in the damage suit of Mr. and Mrs. Anton Sturma, of Bound Brook, against the Public Service Gas Company, in New Brunswick, disagreed. The jury retired to consider the case Thursday day afternoon and brought in a verdict for the plaintiff for $1,700.

YOUNG CHEMIST DIES FROM MAD DOG BITE.

After several hours of agony, John R. Bell, a young chemist, employed by Roessler & Hasslacher, died from hydrophobia at his home in Perth Amboy. He was bitten November 13 by a dog owned by Health Commissioner Leo Schwartz.

The dog's head was sent to Trenton for examination, but no trace of rabies was found. Dr. Bell continued in his usual good health until late on Wednesday night, when he showed signs of hydrophobia. He died, growling and snapping like a dog, with four men holding him down in his last convulsions.

Dr. Bell was a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and had been connected with the chemical firm ever since his graduation last spring. He was twenty-three years old.

"Bunny" Hippinstill, seven years old, who lives with his grandmother at 211 Front street, Perth Amboy, and who was bitten a few hours previous to Bell by the same dog, was subjected to the Pasteur treatment in an effort to save him from a similar death.

The dog that bit Bell and Hippinstill was a bull terrier. It bit Bell in the leg as he was riding a bicycle on Market street, near Rector street, Perth Amboy. He walked to the police station and reported the incident to Chief of Police Patrick J. Burke, after which he went to the office of Dr. J. S. Hay for treatment. His trouser leg was torn several inches where the canine had sunk its teeth into his leg, and the wound bled profusely.

Mayor Voorhees has ordered Chief Burke to instruct his patrolmen to shoot unmuzzled dogs on sight.

IRONMEN'S RECORDS SECRETLY REMOVED.

Indianapolis, Dec. 23.—The Federal Grand Jury is in possession of evidence showing that important records of the structural ironworkers were taken from the office in the Central Life building and were shipped from the city two days after the arrest of McNamara and the seizure of a part of his correspondence by the local detectives. It is said that the Grand Jury will at once begin a quest for these records.

The summoning of Prosecutor Baker before the Grand Jury has led to a report that questionings were to be asked regarding the attitude of local officers towards the investigation and it is intimated that some of them were not in sympathy with it. Detectives employed by the Erectors' Association were watching every movement of the Marion county officers, it is said, and one of the detectives was before the grand jury yesterday.

It was because he was being watched that Prosecutor Baker attacked Detective Foster and was fined for contempt by Judge Markey, of the Criminal Court, but it was not known that any officers were under suspicion till it came out through Baker himself. Several other witnesses were examined by the Federal Grand Jury yesterday, and in the afternoon the body adjourned until January 3.

LICENSES SIGNED BY WOMEN ARE FOUGHT.

Trenton, Dec. 23.—Following the announcement of Judge Peter F. Daly, of the Middlesex County Court of Common Pleas, that he will no longer recognize women as signers of the applications for liquor licenses, Founder James A. Bradley, of Asbury Park, a well-known temperance advocate, has started a crusade to bring about a similiar decision in Monmouth county.

Mr. Bradley issued a statement yesterday showing that seven women signed the application for a license which was recently granted for a place close to the northern boundary of Asbury Park. Continuing his statement, he said:

"What does the Women's Christian Temperance Union think of these women? What does my friend, Dr. Ballard, think of them? Just outside the mile-limit law more women signed a rum-seller's application for the right to sell rum than in any other place. There is not a parallel case in the worst section of Monmouth county, where so many women's names appear on one application."

Mr. Bradley suggested that prayer meetings be held to get these women "to look upon the rum business as Judge Daly does."

FIGHT FOR DEMOCRATS' CONVENTION NARROWING.

"The fight between cities for honor of holding the Democratic National Convention has narrowed down to St. Louis, Baltimore and Denver, with all three cities having about an equal show at this time." This was a statement made yesterday by Edwin A. Newman, National Committeeman from the District of Columbia.

"It is true that Baltimore has been making a fight, but how much it has accomplished will not be known until the committee meets here on January 8. I understand that St. Louis has been making just as hard a fight as Baltimore and has made as much progress, which, I understand it, is to get a certain number of pledges from National Committeemen."

VARIOUS SPORTS.

Edwards and Dumm, bowling in a tournament at Columbus, O., Thursday night, made what is said to be a new world's record for two-man teams. They turned in a score of 1,385. Edwards bowled 299 in his third game. The previous record was made in 1908 at the Pittsburg National Tournament.

Garry Herrmann is tickled with Hank O'Day, his new manager, and Hank O'Day is pleased with his new job. Under those most propitious conditions, Redland is likely to have a peaceful season, notwithstanding the fact that the Cincinnati scribes are on the job early managing the team.

Another Murphy is in the field. Charles F., the Tammany Hall leader, is said to be the man behind the gun in the Boston club deal.

Kid Elberfield, the former Highlander who was recently purchased by the Chatanooga club, declares that he will not play baseball next season. Elberfield is at present on his farm in Tennessee, but his friends say that in spite of his statement he will be unable to resist the call of the diamond when spring comes around.

Golf is fortunate in possessing a language of its own, which is rich in terms and phrases admirably fitted to the objects they are intended to describe. One who has heard an elderly gentleman expressing his opinion of a club which he had just smashed in attempting to drive off the tee will probably appreciate the truth of this remark.

Jordan to Sue Charley Ebbets.

Tim Jordan, the former Brooklyn first baseman, now a member of Toronto, declares he will sue Charles H. Ebbets, owner of the Superbas, to try to get $2,000 back salary, alleged to be due him. Tim was sold to the Toronto International League Club during 1910. He had a chance to get back into the National League with Pittsburgh next season, but claims Ebbets blocked the deal. Therefore, he has decided to sue for back salary.

ELIZABETH CATS WIN.

Miss Ava L. Pollard, owner of the Omar cattery, Elizabeth, at the Poultry Show in Madison Square Garden won several prizes with her display of animals yesterday. Five of her pets were awarded first prizes, one second and another fourth. She had the satisfaction of having classed in the championship division her Bluestone of Tilecote.

The latter animal has been in this country only a month and during that time has won three successive first prizes. Other prizewinners entered by Miss Pollard are: Champion White Monk, first prize for male cats; Miss Gibbs, Oberon II, Little Danthe, Hesseline of Hessle and Golden Onyx.

PHILLIPSBURG MAN KILLED.

Phillipsburg, Dec. 23.—A telegram was received Thursday by John Eilenberg, secretary of the Phillipsburg Lodge of Elks, stating that Fred Amunds, a member of the Phillipsburg Lodge, had been killed Thursday morning in the Lackawanna yards at Binghamton, N. Y. No details were given.

Mr. Amunds was a native of Drumond, Norway, and was forty-seven years of age. For several years he was wreck manager for the Central Railroad at this place, and after securing a position with the Lackawanna Railroad moved his family to Hoboken. Besides his widow there survive two children, Carrie and George Amunds, both of Hoboken.

A New Cake Rule.

If you wish to have soft, fluffy, light and moist cakes follow this route: Never beat the egg, add the unbeaten yolks to the creamed butter and sugar, add the whites after all the other ingredients have been added, just stirring enough to mix well with the batter. This is against all established rules of cake making, but after one trial the doubter is convinced.

Dry Cleaning

like everything else, is cheapest when you get the best, for your garments are cleaned and pressed better—and therefore the work lasts longer and is better for your clothing or household furnishings.

Besides a saving, good cleaning is sanitary. Since this is so, get the best, for handwork in small tubs is sure to carry some dirt along from other clothing belonging to other people.

You don't experience anything of that nature in a first-class place.

HOUSE RANSACKED IN FAMILY'S ABSENCE

Dr. C. I. Crist, of Park avenue, reported to the police this morning that during the absence of the family Thursday night the front window had been "jimmied" and the house ransacked from top to bottom. The contents of bureau and dressers were strewn about the floor of the rooms as the burglar searched for valuables. The only thing missing was a camera, Mrs. Crist having worn all of her jewelry.

The intruder must have known of the family's absence and made a thorough hunt, turning on all the lights in each room to do his work. These he left burning and when Dr. Crist returned his suspicions were aroused before he had entered the house. No clue was left by the burglar. It is rumored that a diamond brooch was taken, but this was not reported to the police.

MENTAL MACHINERY.

Shut Off All the Power When You Quit Work at Night.

It is a great thing to learn to shut off the mental steam when you quit work, says Orison Swett Marden in Success Magazine. What would you think of a factory manager who would leave all of his power turned on after the operators had left the factory, the delicate machinery running everywhere, pounding itself to pieces, grinding out its delicate bearings without producing anything? Many of us do not turn off our mental power after we are through producing or creating for the day. We carry our business home, take it to bed with us, think, plan, worry and waste precious energy in all sorts of ways, in superfluous thinking, foolish worrying that produces nothing, but grinds out the exquisite mental machinery and unfits it for the next day's work. It is a great art to learn to shut off power when through our day's work, so that we can oil our mental machinery, refresh our minds and recuperate ourselves, so that we can go to the next day's work completely reinvigorated.

Many men seem to think that they are accomplishing something if they keep their minds on business even when not at work, but they really accomplish less than nothing because they are wasting precious mental energy, the power for concentration, the vigor, the focusing of the mind, which is imperative for creating purposes.

VON MOLTKE'S METHODS.

An Incident That Showed His Grasp of Military Detail.

The parents of a young soldier, who was a private in a Prussian cavalry regiment during the Franco-Prussian war, became very anxious about him. Several battles had been fought and they had received no news of their boy. After some hesitation the father went to see General von Moltke and after a long wait was admitted to the presence of the great field marshal.

"What is your business?" asked the general. "Use as few words as possible."

The visitor explained that he wished to know the fate of his son, a private in a certain regiment. Moltke smiled, but not unkindly, and drew forth a square of cardboard covered with dots, lines and crosses of various colors. "This line," he said, "indicates the line of march of your son's regiment. These dots mark the distance of each forced march. Tomorrow morning at 7 o'clock the regiment must be at this point here. Take note of the situation." He said no more, and the interview ended.

Long before the hour named the father was at the point indicated on the map. Just before 7 o'clock the trumpets of the advance guard were heard in the distance, and precisely at the hour the father saw his son.—London Telegraph.

Why He Went to Market.

It usually happens in this way:

"Jim," says Mrs. Mann, "I see that the best butter is 3 cents cheaper at the market than it is out there at our grocery store. This is market day. Would you mind going down there on your way home and getting me two dozen eggs and some corn and a few"—

"Oh, I'm awfully sorry, dear," breaks in Mr. Mann, "but this is going to be my busy day. I won't be home till pretty late, and there are a lot of extra things that I simply must attend to, and"—

"Never mind, dear," says Mrs. Mann. "I'd just as soon do it myself, but I haven't any money, and if you will leave me a ten dollar bill I'll"—

"Come to think of it," breaks in Mr. Mann right there, "I won't be so very busy today. I was thinking about next week. I'll go to the market for you very gladly."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Gulls and the Black Crickets.

When the Mormons first settled in Utah black crickets came in myriads from the mountains and would have destroyed the crops had it not been for the gulls that came by hundreds and thousands from the surrounding lakes. At that time the settlers at Salt Lake regarded the advent of the birds as a heaven sent miracle, and ever since the gull has been esteemed almost as a sacred bird by the Mormons. About the beet and alfalfa fields when they are being irrigated the gulls still collect and feed largely on field mice that are so destructive to crops.—Success Magazine.

Saving Him.

"Why have you and Miss Sweet broken off your engagement?"

"Because she loves me so."

"That's a queer reason."

"Not at all. She believes in fortune telling, and when she went to have her future revealed not long ago she was informed that she would be married three times. That settled my case, for the time being at least. She said that she was determined that I should not encounter the danger of being first on the list."—Pittsburg Press.

Looked Ominous.

"Mabel, what are that young man's intentions?"

"I don't know, papa. He is keeping me in the dark."

"That is the reason I am asking. Tell him he need not mind turning down the light any more when he calls."—Houston Post.

Most Natural.

"We drew skits on our teacher today, mother."

"And who did the best one?"

"Fritz. He got his ears boxed for it."—Fliegende Blatter.

"A Merry Christmas to All"

"The very book I wanted."

"It was so thoughtful of you."

"When you were a little boy you looked just like him."

THE spirit of Christmas is shown in the happy faces of the people we meet on the street, in the jolly, good-natured bustle of the shoppers, and in the mysterious hiding of bundles. It is in the very air we breathe and it draws us closer to friends and relatives.

All through the Holidays the telephone will be flashing millions of greetings and good wishes far and near over its network of wires. It will be carrying the slightest inflection of the human voice out to the faraway friend and relative. Kindliness and forgiveness and laughter will be on the wires. Old-time friends will be reminded that they are not forgotten, and where in the old days one Christmas visit was made in person, ten now will be made by telephone.

If you have a surplus of happiness during the holiday season, why not telephone a part of it to some one who has less? The telephone, you know, is the great and almost limitless roadway over which the Christmas spirit can travel.

"Thank you so much. They are delicious."

"Auntie, I just love my new dollie."

"Old man, the Perfectos are great."

$3.50 Recipe Free, For Weak Kidneys.

Relieves Urinary and Kidney Troubles, Backache, Straining, Swelling, Etc.

Stops Pain in the Bladder, Kidneys and Back.

Wouldn't it be nice within a week or so to begin to say good bye forever to the scalding, dribbling, straining, or too frequent passage of the urine; the forehead and the back-of-the-head aches; the stitches and pains in the back; the growing muscle weakness; spots before the eyes; yellow skin; sluggish bowels; swollen eyelids or ankles; leg cramps; unnatural short breath; sleeplessness and the despondency?

I have a recipe for these troubles that you can depend on, and if you want to make a quick recovery, you ought to write and get a copy of it. Many a doctor would charge you $3.50 just for writing this prescription, but I have it and will be glad to send it to you entirely free. Just drop me a line like this: Dr. A. E. Robinson, K1239 Luck Building, Detroit, Mich., and I will send it by return mail in a plain envelope. As you will see when you get it, this recipe contains only pure, harmless remedies, but it has great healing and pain-conquering power.

It will quickly show its power once you use it so I think you had better see what it is without delay. I will send you a copy free—you can use it and cure yourself at home.

RUSH OF THE CRESTED SEA.

Mount St. Michel's Tidal Wave One of the Sights of the World.

At 5 o'clock in the afternoon people gather on the causeway that connects the islet of Mount St. Michel with the French coast to watch the coming of the tide, one of the sights of the world.

As far as the eye can reach stretches the gray sand, silent, empty. Seven miles and a half lie between the ocean and the rock. Presently a strange murmur pervades the air. It seems to come from nowhere and yet to be everywhere.

And then far on the horizon lifts a line of white. Every moment it draws nearer, and the sound in the air swells louder, and then with astonishing speed up the line of crested sea, and in a moment, where it reaches the sands, there is but a space of swirling water. And on the waves ride in the fishing boats that have gone out to sea on the tide at dawn.

Many a tragedy has been caused by the swift inrush of this true tidal wave, for, save along narrow paths, the bottom of this vast, strange bay is but quicksand, and after the tide has once turned and the sound of its coming is heard no man can hope to escape its reach unless he be close indeed to the mount or the shores of the mainland.—Travel Magazine.

A TRIAL OF STRENGTH.

The Feat That Was Performed by Adargoma, the Wrestler.

Tradition has immortalized one Adargoma of Grand Canary, who could wrestle for two consecutive hours and, having been thrown undermost in a certain contest, got his antagonist between his legs and arms and squeezed him so that his bones began to crack.

The native was subsequently sent as a prisoner to Spain, where he astounded the people by his performances. One day in Seville he was visited by a brawny youth of La Mancha, who was anxious to try a bout with him. "My good friend," said Adargoma, "as we are going to wrestle together it is only reasonable that we should begin by drinking something."

A large bowl of wine having been brought, he took this in one hand and continued to address his challenger. "If with both your arms you can overpower one of mine so as to hinder me from drinking every drop of this wine we will try our strength together; if not, you may return to your home." The struggle took place, and Adargoma by degrees drained the bowl in the coolest manner without spilling a drop of the wine. His one hand was more than a match for the other's two.—London Spectator.

The Problem of the Glacier.

The curves of variation of glaciers which are collected in the Alpine museum in Berne show, according to Professor Brueckner, that the twenty-six great glaciers of Switzerland which were very extensive at the beginning of the nineteenth century thereafter receded, at first slowly and then more rapidly, until the close of the century. The course of recession was interrupted about the middle of the century by a brief advance, in which only two glaciers exceeded the limits that bounded them at the commencement of the century. The glaciers showed a second slight advance between 1890 and 1895. Although the curves of the various glaciers are similar in general, each exhibits well marked peculiarities, which make it difficult to trace any connection between climatic changes and fluctuations in glaciation. The problem of the glaciers is still involved in obscurity, and much patient research will be required to effect its solution.—Scientific American.

British Local Nicknames.

The residents of the English counties have nicknames the meaning and origin of which are not always obvious. Why the inhabitants of Liverpool should be called "Dicky Sams" is not very clear. But nearly all the counties have their distinctive nicknames. The Glaswegians are "Keelies," the Lancashire men are "Tim Bobbins." Yorkshire men, again, are everywhere "Tykes," a nickname the etymology of which is not easy to trace. The inhabitants of Suffolk are designated "Dumplings," those of Kent "Hogs" and the Isle of Wight people "Calves."

A Friendly Call.

Little Tommy—Mamma, may I go over and play with Mrs. Nextdoor's children? Mother—You have never cared to play with them. Little Tommy—But my ball went over into their yard, and they threw it back to me, and it was all sticky. I guess they've got some candy.

The Lesser Bore.

"Why do you insist on asking that young man to sing?"

"Because," replied Miss Cayenne, "when he's singing he isn't trying to converse."—Washington Star.

Business.

"Now, about the oratorio. Shall we put Handel's picture on the program or the picture of the leading soprano?"

"I vote for the soprano. She has twenty or thirty relatives who'll buy tickets to the show."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Linen Breeches.

Linen breeches were worn by men in 1491 B. C. They also at that period wore embroidered coats, besides bonnets "for glory and for beauty."

If there is any person to whom you feel dislike that is the person of whom you ought never to speak.—Cecil.

DO IT NOW.

Plainfield People Should Not Wait Until it is Too Late.

The appalling death-rate from kidney disease is due in most cases to the fact that the little kidney troubles are usually neglected until they become serious. The slight symptoms give place to chronic disorders and the sufferer goes gradually into the grasp of dropsy, Bright's disease, gravel or some other serious form of kidney complaint.

If you suffer from backache, headaches, dizzy spells; if the kidney secretions are irregular of passage and unnatural in appearance, do not delay. Help the kidneys at once.

Doan's Kidney Pills are especially for kidney disorders—they act where others fail. Over one hundred thousand people have recommended them. Here's a case at home:

Mrs. C. B. Coriell, 60 Manning avenue, Plainfield, N. J., says: "I can recommend Doan's Kidney Pills for they helped me after every other remedy had failed. I suffered from kidney disorders for years and the principal one was a severe backache. Since I learned of Doan's Kidney Pills, I have taken them off and on and they have always acted like magic, giving me prompt relief."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

FIRE CHIEF'S AUTO AND HOSE CART IN CRASH.

In responding to an alarm of fire in Elizabeth yesterday Chief August Gerstung averted a serious collision between his car and the hose wagon of No. 3 Engine, when, by a quick turn of the wheel he ran his machine parallel to the other vehicle. The two crashed, but no damage was done.

When the alarm was sounded the chief sent his car up East Jersey street from Division street. Nearing Reid street he heard the approaching hose wagon in that street. Before he could apply the emergency brakes the chief saw the horse's head almost in front of him. It was then that he gave the wheel a sudden turn that almost upset the auto. The blaze was in a shed in the rear of 176 Reid street, owned by Paashaus Brothers. It was quickly extinguished.

At 5:16 o'clock there was a fire in the blacksmith shop of Michael Moscariello, 620 First avenue. Children built a small fire in the shop and Moscariello attempted to extinguish the flames with a blanket. It caught on fire and he sent in an alarm.

ARRESTED AS DRUNK, MAN HAD DIPHTHERIA.

Arrested on complaint that he was acting in a disorderly manner Thursday, Michael Lucy, twenty-four years old, of Franklin avenue, Nutley, was taken to police headquarters, where he was found to be suffering from diphtheria. He was removed to the Essex County Isolation Hospital later in the afternoon.

A crowd of several hundred persons, including many children from the Park School nearby, was attracted to the scene when Patrolman George Mailliza took Lucy to the station in a mason's wagon belonging to Francis J. McKenny, for whom he worked.

When arrested, near the West Nutley Erie Station, Lucy was in a delirious condition, and was thought to be merely drunk. He resisted arrest, and, when the wagon stopped at headquarters, made another disturbance. Dr. Edward P. Whelan, town physician, examined him and said that he had been suffering from diphtheria for several days. He had been wandering freely about town.

SPIRITS TELEGRAPH HIM; POLICE SEEK RELATIVES.

Asserting that he gets inspiration from the spirits through a system of telegraphic dots and dashes, Elisha Conklin was picked up in New Brunswick yesterday by Policeman Wilcox. Conklin says he lives at Greenpoint, Long Island, and that he came to New Brunswick as a special messenger for the Postal Telegraph Company.

Conklin claims to have received an inspiration from the spirits thirty-one days ago to make his trip. While getting his inspirations, he says, the dots and dashes are left in the left side. He expects another inspiration soon and will then proclaim the message to the world. The police are endeavoring to locate his relatives.

LOSES FOOT IN HASTE TO ALIGHT FROM SPECIAL.

Joseph Hiram, of 1117 East Grand street, Elizabeth, fell under the Singer special last night and his right leg was cut off. He slipped in jumping from the special at the Elizabeth station of the Central Railroad. He is in the General Hospital.

Hiram was, it is said, anxious to alight before the train came to a stop. He attempted to jump from the train, but he slipped on the step. His right foot slid under the wheels and was severed. He is an employe of the Singer Sewing Machine Company.

CHINESE INGENUITY.

How One Cover Was Made to Fit a Roomful of Sleepers.

A writer in a French magazine tells a curious story about how they manage cheap lodging houses in China.

Along Chinese roads, it seems, there are many of these lodging houses, where the charge for a night's lodging is considerably less than 1 cent. All the bedding provided is one huge mass of feathers, into which all the guests burrow.

Formerly they used to get blankets, but some time ago those who ran these primitive inns learned that their losses on account of the theft of blankets by guests were far too large. Something, they decided, had to be done. Finally an ingenious man among them hit on this:

Over the feather filled room of his lodging house he hung an enormous canvas covering. In the daytime it hung near the ceiling. At night it was lowered by means of pulleys until it covered the entire mass of feathers and all those sleeping thereon, thus taking the place of individual blankets. This huge canvas was provided with a large number of small slits through which the guests might stick their heads and escape suffocation beneath the immense covering.

Early each morning the loud pounding of a drum served to waken the sleepers and warn them to get their heads out of the slits in the canvas. Thereupon it was raised again to the ceiling and fastened there to await the next batch of sleepers.

THE FIRST AERONAUT.

Kingsley's Queer Idea and an Embarrassing Coincidence.

Charles Kingsley was at a dinner once with the aeronaut Coxwell. It was shortly after Coxwell and a companion had made a flight in which they had risen so high that Coxwell's hands were frozen and he had time only to tear open the air valve with his teeth. A. C. Benson tells the story in "The Leaves of the Tree" in the North American Review. After dinner Kingsley suddenly said:

"I have often thought that the first man that ever went up in a balloon must have been a d-dentist."

Some one laughed and said, "What an extraordinary idea!"

"I don't know," said Kingsley. "A man who is always looking down people's throats, and pulling their teeth about, and breathing their breath, must be inspired with a tremendous desire to get away and above it all."

Coxwell leaned forward and said very good humoredly, "Well, Mr. Kingsley, it is true that I am a dentist, but it was not that that made me become an aeronaut."

"My d-dear Mr. Coxwell," said Kingsley, flushing red, "I am sure I beg your pardon. I had no idea it was so. You must have thought me singularly ill mannered to make a joke of it."

Kingsley could not recover his spirits for the rest of the evening. He hated giving pain to any human being more perhaps than anything in the world.

Why Dean Swift Didn't Go to Ascot.

Dean Swift was the earliest man of note to make mention of the historic Ascot race meeting. It is in one of his "Letters to Stella" in August, 1711, that the great Jonathan says he "saw a place they have made for a famous horse race tomorrow, when the queen will come." But being "tired with riding a trotting, mettlesome horse a dozen miles, having not been on horseback this twelvemonth," Swift determined "not to go to the race unless I can get room in some coach." As he was hindered by a caller all the coaches were filled before he could reach one, and as a consequence the world lost the description of that earliest Ascot that only the author of "Gulliver's Travels" could have penned.—London Spectator.

The Humbling of Deacon Todd.

"I tell you, Edgely," said Deacon Todd as they sat in the park, "the way women dress these days is absurd. And nine times out of ten it is the fault of men. Just, for instance, take that woman coming down the path. Some fool husband has told her she looks perfectly charming in that outrageous getup, lacking the stamina to come right out bluntly and tell her that she looks positively ridiculous."

Since this remark Mr. Todd has never been seen in public without his glasses. The woman was Mrs. Todd.—Judge.

Aroused.

The young woman in the stern of the boat had whispered softly the word "Yes." "But stay right where you are, Jack," she added hastily. "If you try to kiss me you'll upset the boat."

"How do you know?" hoarsely demanded Jack, a horrible suspicion already taking possession of him.—London Ideas.

No Better Than Father Used to Make.

Young Husband—Still sitting up, dear? You shouldn't have waited for me. I was detained downtown by important business, and— Young Wife—Try some other excuse, George. That's the kind father used to make.—Chicago Tribune.

How He Began.

"Nevertheless, I cannot begrudge him a cent of his fortune. He began at the foot and got many a kick."

"He did?"

"Yes; he was a blacksmith."—Judge.

One of the most striking differences between a cat and a lie is that a cat has only nine lives.—Mark Twain.

That has been my slogan for years. I aim to do the best possible painting—using only the best materials that the manufacturers can furnish, and employing the most skilled mechanics that can be procured. I stand back of every job I do, and when I am allowed to use my own judgment in regard to the best method of doing it, I will gladly make good any work that by any chance proves defective.

DEAD SEA WATER.

Its Buoyancy Not So Great as to Make Swimming Impossible.

In Jerusalem ridiculous stories are told of the impossibility of bathing in the Dead sea, and it is even said by the superstitious that no animals or vegetation can exist near it. The truth is that if Palestine belonged to any other power but Turkey the northern shore of the Dead sea would probably become a popular bathing station and health resort, as the chloride of magnesia which enters so largely into the composition of the water would be found to have medicinal and curative properties, says the Zion Herald.

So far as swimming is concerned, the excessive buoyancy of the water of the Dead sea simply renders it difficult for the swimmer to make much headway, but if care be taken not to allow the salt water to get into the eyes a swim is both feasible and enjoyable.

The Dead sea contains 25 per cent of solid matter and is, bulk for bulk, heavier than the human body. In a ton of water from the Caspian sea there are 11 pounds of salt, in the Baltic 18 pounds, in the Black sea 26 pounds, in the Atlantic 31 pounds, in the English channel 72 pounds, in the Mediterranean 85 pounds, in the Red sea 93 pounds and in the Dead sea 187 pounds.

FERRYING THE TRAIN.

One of the River and Harbor Sights of New York City.

One of the sights of the harbor familiar enough to those acquainted with the water front, but of never failing interest to the waterside strolling stranger, is the big railroad ferryboat that carries the Boston-Washington through trains around Manhattan between Mott Haven and Jersey City, and apparently this ride is as interesting to the people on the boat as the boat is to the people on the shore.

They just run the whole train on this boat, and then in fair weather the passengers get out to stretch their legs and take in the view. As the big boat comes along with the cars of the train aboard seen projecting out forward and aft on deck from under the hoods you see the passengers standing forward for their eight or ten miles water ride down the East river and up the north, or vice versa, through all the varied river traffic close at hand, while shoreward they have that marvelous view of the lower city. The boat is one of the city's notable river sights, and the trip on the boat itself and the view from its deck are still as wonderful as ever to the unaccustomed traveler.—New York Sun.

Rejected Compulsory Happiness.

In 1889 the inundation of the Yellow river caused great suffering in China. The inferior people not only "groaned and murmured," but died by the hundreds. In order to raise funds for the relief of the survivors the prefect of Hangchow levied a tax on each cup of tea sold in the tea houses of the great city. The ancient capital assessed in this arbitrary fashion resented that tax after the manner of the Bostonians of 1773. In spite of the humane object of the assessment, the citizens put a boycott on tea, and the proprietors of the tea houses cried out in protest.

The prefect issued a second proclamation, in which he assured his people that happiness was their sure reward if they cheerfully contributed to this excellent cause. This agreeable assurance had no effect on the boycotters, and the tax had to be removed. Perhaps this is the only instance on record where a cityful of people were banded to resist compulsory "happiness."—Youth's Companion.

That Was Different.

Repeatedly he had heard the young woman boast of eluding the vigilance of the conductor and riding home free, so when he got a chance to sneak a ride for both of them he slipped the dime back into his pocket and smiled upon her in triumph.

"Didn't you pay your fare?" she asked.

"No," said he. "The conductor never even looked our way.

She said nothing, but her look of disdain was unmistakable.

"I've heard you tell many a time of doing the same thing," he said defiantly.

"Oh, well," she said, "that's different. For a man"—

And the young man understood then that there certainly is a double standard for the sexes.—New York Sun.

A Caution.

Reginald—I love you, Madeline. For you I would give up family, position, wealth. Madeline — Hold, Reginald! Giving up family is all right. I fain would be spared a mother-in-law. Give up your position if you can get a better one, but please hold on to your wealth. We may need it.

"Mental Inertia" is responsible for more failures than direct evil-doing. The things a man does'nt do, frequently do just as much harm as does positive wrong. Neglecting to protect your family by Life Insurance when you know they need it leaves them just as helpless as your refusal to do so.

GOLDEN RULE MANAGER.

"Hank" O'Day, manager of the Cincinnati Nationals, and former National League umpire, if he lives up to announcement made last night, will be "Golden Rule" manager. He said that he will devote no part of his time to umpire bating. O'Day declared that his shift from umpire to manager will not change his viewpoint as to what the relations between the two should be on the diamond.

"I will treat the umpire just as I would have the manager treat me were I umpiring, and just as I insisted on them treating me for many years," he said.

Guests At Yule

Edmund Clarence Stedman

NOEL! NOEL!
Thus sounds each Christmas bell
Across the winter snow.
But what are the little footprints all
That mark the path from the churchyard wall?
They are those of the children waked tonight
From sleep by the Christmas bells and light:
Ring sweetly, chimes! Soft, soft, my rhymes!
Their beds are under the snow.

Noel! Noel!
Carols each Christmas bell
What are the wraiths of mist
That gather anear the window-pane
Where the winter frost all day has lain?
They are soulless elves, who fain would peer
Within, and laugh at our Christmas cheer:
Ring fleetly, chimes! Swift, swift, my rhymes!
They are made of the mocking mist

Noel! Noel!
Cease, cease, each Christmas bell!
Under the holly bough,
Where the happy children throng and shout,
What shadow seems to flit about?
Is it the mother, then, who died
Ere the greens were sere last Christmas-tide?
Hush, falling chimes! Cease, cease, my rhymes!
The guests are gathered now.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

What promises to be the musical sensation of the season will be the Shuberts production of a new comic opera by Reginald DeKoven entitled "The Wedding Trip," which begins its run Christmas night at the Broadway Theatre. The company will be the largest heard in New York, or America for that matter, in a musical play for many years, and will include Dorothy Jardon, Christine Nielsen, Dorothy Morton, Gwen DuBarry, Grace Emmons, Edward Martindel, John McCloskey, Arthur Cunningham, Charles Angelo, Joseph Phillips, George Madison, Charles Busbey and a chorus of over 65. The company has been selected by the composer himself, and is said to be the finest singing organization gathered together since the days of the original "Bostonians."

With all the opulent splendor of the Orient, the magnificance of Rome in her most glorious days, and the beauty of tropical settings, "Ben-Hur" will be staged at the New Amsterdam Theatre, New York, this evening, Klaw & Erlanger, the owners of this most wonderful piece of theatrical property, have this season given it a production which in magnitude and spectacular grandeur will outdistance any production ever before seen on the American stage or in the theatre of any other country. The magnitude of the scenic settings is of such nature that there are only four theatres in America with stages large enough to accommodate the equipment. These theatres are the New Amsterdam Theatre in New York, the historic Boston theatre in Boston, the beautiful Forrest theatre in Philadelphia, and the great Auditorium theatre in Chicago. Only three of these cities, however, will have an opportunity of seeing this new and wonderful production of "Ben-Hur"—New York, Boston and Philadelphia, for the Chicago Grand Opera Company will occupy the Auditorium for so long a time it will be impossible to take "Ben-Hur" to Chicago before it is transferred to London for presentation at the Theatre Royal, Drury Lane, Easter Monday, April 8, 1912, arrangements to that end having been made by Marc Klaw when he was abroad last summer.

Miss M. J. Skilling, of Fairview avenue, is visiting her cousin, Erwin Fonda, superintendent of the National Cemetery, at Salisbury, N. C., for the holidays.

XMAS IN CHURCHES

Celebrations of Christ's Nativity Held by All Evangelical Congregations on Sunday.

MUSIC WAS SPECIAL FEATURE.

Many Sunday-schools In Both City and Borough Also Appropriately Observe Day.

Services appropriate to the celebration of Christ's nativity were held in the evangelical churches in the city and borough on Sunday.

First M. E. Church.

The Christmas service at the First M. E. church, Sunday morning, included the rendition of the cantata, "The Star of Bethlehem," by Harker, by the quartet choir, under the direction of Clifford A. Braider, organist and musical director. This beautiful work was greatly enjoyed and both the quartet singing and that by the soloists was of a high order. The quartet also sang several anthems. A feature was the violin solo as an offertory, by Anton Gloeckner, and the organ and violin selection by Mr. Braider and Mr. Gloeckner. In the evening the order of service was as follows: Organ prelude, anthem, Angels from the Realm of Glory, Shelley; prayer, Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson; anthem, The Light of Earth, Coombs; offertory, Largo, Handel, violin solo; anthems, Star of the Orient, Shelley; O, Babe Divine, Dressler; organ and violin, Traumerei, Schumann, (by request). The quartet comprised Mrs. June Bilby, soprano; Mrs. Austin Norris, contralto; Aleck MacGowan, tenor; George S. Madden, baritone.

The Sunday school, under the direction of James R. Joy, superintendent, gave a special program in the afternoon. There was the singing of carols and recitations by the little tots in the beginners' department and the following from the primary department: Janet Marchant, Lois Beekman, Gertrude Joy, Alice Beekman, Margaret Evans, Pearl Tilley. E. F. Glover led the school in the singing of carols. A feature was an appropriate address by Rev. Dr. Herbert, Welch, of Delaware, Ohio. Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson offered prayer and Rev. W. C. O'Donnell pronounced the benediction.

First Baptist Church.

Christmas services were held at the First Baptist church, Sunday morning, when the quartet and chorus choir under the direction of Howard M. Case, organist and musical director, sang several anthems, and there was a beautiful solo as an offertory by Miss Ruth Harris, soprano, the selection being from the "Story of Bethlehem," by West. There were also solo parts by Miss Katherine Bushnell, contralto; William Holmes, baritone, and George Smith, tenor. The chorus work was up to the usual high standard. Another feature with the organ and violin selections by Mr. Case and Miss Florence Wohlfert. Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong preached an impressive sermon appropriate to the occasion.

In the afternoon at 3 o'clock the Sunday school service was held in the church. A feature was the assistance of the Sunday school orchestra of twenty-five pieces under the direction of Joseph Sattels, and the leading of the singing by Grant Colfax Tullar. The selections by the school was entitled "The Hope of the Ages." The chorus choir of the church sang several anthems, Katherine Armstrong recited "Gifts for a King," and Katherine Armstrong and Mildred Boyle sang a duet. Dr. Strong made a short address on "The Spirit of Christmas." The special offering for the Children's Home amounted to $28.30, while the regular offering amounted to $14.12.

Temple Baptist Church.

GERMANS' SOCIETY CELEBRATE XMAS

It may have been a green Christmas, but that had no effect on the annual celebration of the Gesang and Turn Verein at Saengerbund Hall yesterday afternoon and last night. It was jamful of the old Saengerbund Christmas spirit, and big and little Saengerbunders had the time of the year. Especially the little ones, who were out 150 strong.

There was a tree that made the hall look small, and it carried presents for everyone of the 150 children. It goes without saying that there was much robust music. The full Singing Section boomed tunefully, and a quartet made up of Henry Haurand, Leader Henry von Hoffe, Eugene Renz and R. Walter gave forth proper harmony.

The children sang Christmas songs and the Star Spangled Banner, and everybody, at the end of the program, sang "My Country 'Tis of Thee.' The program for the children, which began at 4 o'clock, lasted until supper time. After supper there was a dance for the elders, B. A. Paroubek leading the orchestra.

CHURCHES CELEBRATE FEAST OF THE NATIVITY

All the Protestant Episcopal and Roman Catholic churches held full Christmas services yesterday morning. They hymned the Feast of the Nativity with special music and their altars glowed with flowers and greens and lights, but for the rest they followed the order of their worship, stately enough to bear repetition each year through the centuries without change.

Of chief interest among the ritualistic observances was the solemn midnight mass in the new St. Joseph's R. C. church, Jackson and Watchung avenues. The account of that service and the others at St. Joseph's is given separately elsewhere in the paper. And the services were largely attended.

St. Mary's R. C. church began the first of its five Christmas masses at 5:30 o'clock. The others were celebrated at 7:00, 8:00, 9:00 and 10:00. The eleborate musical programs were directed by the organist, Miss Mary Smith. Fifty boy voices augmented the regular choir.

There were three celebrations of the Holy Communoin at Grace church, namely, at 7, 8 and 11 o'clock. The last service was largely musical. On Sunday afternoon there were two services marking the eve of Christmas. At 3 o'clock there was a program of carols for the children of the Sunday-school, and at 4:30 o'clock there was carol evensong, with appropriate music and sermon.

Holy Cross church held its service at 11 o'clock. The new rector, Rev. William S. McCoy, was in charge, and preached.

Two services were held at St. Stephen's church, Netherwood. The first, a short communion celebration, was held at 7:30 o'clock. A full service, with celebration of the communion and special music, was held at 11:00.

The congregation of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the Heavenly Rest had three services to choose from. There were two simple celebrations of the Holy Communion, at 7 and 8 o'clock, and a choral Eucharist service, with sermon, at 11:00. The church began the celebration of the feast Sunday afternoon, at 4:30 o'clock, with choral evensong.

The Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church held a special Christmas service at 10:30 o'clock yesterday morning. It had been announced that Crescent Avenue would welcome members of the other churches that did not hold Christmas Day service, and many strangers swelled the congregation.

Rev. Dr. John S. Zelie, the minister, assisted by Rev. F. L. Green, of Hope chapel, and Rev. Frederick D. Tildon, of Bethel chapel, conducted the service. A specially organized chorus choir sang. Dr. Zelie preached a short sermon.

Besides the impressive musical services held morning and evening Sunday, the day was marked by the annual union Christmas service of the Sunday-schools of the church and its three chapels, Hope, Warren and Bethel. It was held in the afternoon, at 3 o'clock, and 800 children and their elders took part in it.

A Chimney Fire.

A small chimney fire in the home of Mrs. Edward Conger, of South Second street, required the services of the fire department last night. The damage was slight. At almost the same hour last Christmas day the same box, 46, at West Second and Liberty streets, was pulled for a fire caused by an ignited Christmas tree in the same neighborhood.

DIES IN 97TH YEAR

Mrs. Eliza Reed, Who Remembered General LaFayette, Passes Away Here.

SHE LEAVES MANY RELATIVES.

Widow of Dr. Samuel P. Reed—She Had Resided Here Seven Years—Resembled Queen Victoria.

Mrs. Eliza Reed, widow of Dr. Samuel P. Reed, regarded as one of the oldest residents, died at Trueli Inn, this morning, where she had been living for several years. She was conscious to the end and passed away peacefully, surrounded by a few of her relatives.

Mrs. Reed was the daughter of the late Captain and Mrs. George Breck, and was born in Philadelphia on May 16, 1815. One of her fondest recollections was that she was kissed by General Lafayette, who was attracted to her when she was a child of seven years living in Philadelphia. Gen. Lafayette was passing through the city at the time on his way to Mt. Vernon to visit the tomb of Washington.

Among her cherished relics was a letter from the late King Edward VII, in answer to one she wrote to him in condolence over the death of Queen Victoria. Mrs. Reed's husband, Samuel Payne Reed, was the owner of Cain Island, near Beaufort, N. C. The couple was married when Mrs. Reed was twenty years old. Mrs. Reed had been a resident of this city about seven years, coming here from Washington, where she lived for fifteen years. Prior to that time she was a frequent visitor at the home of her son-in-law, Rev. Dr. W. H. Neilson, on East Ninth street. It was during her visits that she was attracted to the beauty of the city and decided to remove here.

Mrs. Reed bore a striking resemblance to the late Queen Victoria, a fact of which she was proud. On the occasion of the death of Queen Victoria ten years ago, she wrote to King Edward VII, expressing her sympathy and she received a beautiful letter in reply. Mrs. Reed was always remembered on her birthdays with a postal "shower," and this pleased her very much. Mrs. Reed was a familiar patron at Proctor's theatre on West Front street, where she enjoyed the performances exceedingly.

Among Mrs. Reed's relatives are her children, Mrs. Aspinwall, of Washington, and her husband, Rev. John Aspinwall; Mrs. Thomas Mitchell, of Denver, Col.; Miss Jennie Reed, of Washington; Miss Clara Reed and William Reed and her son-in-law, Rev. Dr. W. H. Neilson, the last three of this city; a nephew and nieces, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Lardner, of Montclair; the Misses Shaw, of Morristown; and granddaughter, Mrs. Bessie Lee, of this city, besides several cousins in New York. She also has a son, Dr. Samuel P. Reed, of Los Gatos, California.

The remains have been removed to the home of Rev. Dr. W. H. Neilson on East Ninth street, where the funeral will be held. The announcement will be made later.

Herman Forcault Injured.

Herman Forcault, aged 63 years, a Frenchman residing on Rock avenue, near Dunellen, was removed to Muhlenberg Hospital, this morning, suffering from injuries to his head, the result of falling off a wagon, yesterday afternoon. The accident happened near the man's home, to which place he was first taken, but it was afterward thought best to have the man removed to the hospital, where he could obtain better treatment.

Pocketbook Snatcher.

Mrs. Clifton Hoffman, colored, of South Second street, reported to the police last night that while walking under the Liberty street railroad bridge on her way home a man grabbed her handbag and made off so quickly that she was unable to say whether he was colored or not. The handbag contained $1.50. She said that the theft occurred at 8 o'clock, but the police were not notified until after 10 o'clock.

Will Hold Xmas Parties.

The members of the beginners, primary and cradle roll departments of the Sunday school of the First M. E. church, will hold a Christmas party in Vincent chapel, tomorrow afternoon, when Santa Claus will be present to distribute gifts. Ice cream and cake will be served as usual. Friday night the older members of the school will hold a Christmas party, the program being in the nature of a surprise.

Andrew W. Johnson, of the borough, spent Sunday with his son, Russell Johnson, Jr., in Newark, and Christmas Day with his brother, Russell Johnson, Sr., of Brooklyn.

MASS AT MIDNIGHT

1,200 Catholics Stay Out of Bed to Worship at New St. Joseph's.

WAS A RECORD CONGREGATION.

No Pews, and All the 1,200 Stand or Kneel Throughout the Service—Admission Cards Prevented Crush.

A mass that began on the stroke of midnight Sunday marked the coming of Christmas at the new St. Joseph's Roman Catholic church. It was the first service of any kind in the new church, and drew a congregation that dwarfed the biggest St. Joseph's had ever mustered before.

Not less than 1,200 worshippers attended. In the old church 400 people meant a crush. The 1,200 didn't jam the new. A crush might have occurred, for all the roominess of the new structure, but it was avoided by making the celebration an invitation service and issuing cards.

There are no pews in the new church yet, and the congregation, when they weren't kneeling, stood throughout the service. The altars are not completed, but the incompleteness was softened by the flowers with which the Sisters of the parish decorated them.

The Mass of the Infant Saviour, by Father Wilkins, was sung. Rev. Father William H. Miller, the rector, was celebrant. Father Reginald, of the Passionist order, was deacon, and Rev. Father Baldwin, of St. Joseph's, was sub-deacon.

The service was made noteworthy musically by an augmented choir and an orchestra. James E. Bailey, the choirmaster, directed the music. B. A. Paroubek led the orchestra and Mrs. Harry G. DeMeza was at the organ.

That was the only Christmas service held in the new church. Three other masses, at 7:30, 8:30 and 9:30 o'clock, were held yesterday morning in the old church.

It will be several weeks before the new church is ready for regular services. As soon as the pews are in place and the altars are completed the congregation will leave the old St. Joseph's for the new, and arrangements will be made for immediate dedication.

ACCUSES A NEIGHBOR OF STEALING TROUSERS

Joseph Ostegno, who lives in half of a double house on Regent street, went away for a few days with his wife last week. When he returned he found his best pair of trousers missing. Edward Wilson, seventeen years old, who lives with his grandmother in the other half of the house, will be arraigned before Justice of the Peace Snape this afternoon charged with stealing them.

Wilson is accused of having broken the Ostengno's door open to get at the trousers, and Chief Weiss, of the borough police force, says he acknowledges the charge. The chief says the boy also admits complicity in wholesale thefts of milk from doorsteps about the neighborhood, which have been keeping the police stirred for a long time. One day last week twenty-foud quarts disappeared from front and rear porches.

LOST HACK LICENSE: DROWNED HIS SORROWS.

Harry Seader, 22 years old, a hackman, living on Harmony street, faced Recorder Dolliver in the borough police court today, charged by Marshal Hermann with being drunk and disorderly on Somerset street last night.

"Do this often, Seader?" asked the court.

"I haven't drunk before in a year and a half," said Seader. "I started this time because Mayor Moy took my license away."

He was fined $2. Mayor Moy revoked Seader's license because, it was alleged, he used his hack for purposes for which hack service was not designed.

Will Hold Watch Night Service.

The Young People's Society of the First Baptist church, will hold a watch night service Sunday night in the lecture room, following the regular evening preaching service. The program from 9 until 12 o'clock will be devotional, and after that there will be a special program and refreshments will be served.

—Neuman Bros. will have an unusually fine display of vegetables and fruits for tomorrow's trade at reasonable prices.

FAVOR NEW PLANT

Movement on Foot For City to Build a Plant in More Isolated District.

OPPOSE ENLARGEMENT SCHEME

Protest Made By Dunellen to Be Heard By State Board of Health Which Will Probably Defer Decision.

With the approach of the hearing tomorrow by the State Board of Health on the plan to enlarge the sewage disposal plant on Rock avenue, the opponents of the enlargement project are moved to high tension activity.

A committee of Dunellenites spent a busy day yesterday marshalling facts and figures, and their conferences and discussions chrystalized in a suggestion for the removal of the whole plant from its present situation. A widely known Plainfielder, a business man unusually active in civic affairs, who took part in the conferences, told of them today.

The conferres contend that the city should take the $180,000 appropriated by the Council for the plant's enlargement and apply it to the purchase of a new site far enough removed from well-built-up communities to allay all protest. With the removal of the old beds, it is argued, the site can be sold for building lots for not less than $100,000, giving the city $280,000 with which to make the move.

Two years ago, it is pointed out, the city was shown by an engineering firm how a trunk sewer capable of taking care of Plainfield, Dunellen and North Plainfield could be built for $20,000 less than $280,000 which the conferrees say would be available for this single-city plant. They are not suggesting a co-operative plant.

The conferrees, who included another widely known Plainfielder besides the one quoted, went to a North Plainfielder of much prominence, who is thoroughly posted on sewerage facts and figures. They went to him for data, but besides getting that they learned that a site they had picked for the shifted Plainfield beds was not a proper one. They dropped all consideration of it on his assurance that it wasn't the right sort, and they are now without a suggestion as to an unobjectionable site.

Street Commissioner Andrew J. Gavett and George W. Fuller, the engineer who prepared the enlargement plans which await approval by the State Health Board, expect to attend the hearing tomorrow. Mayor Moy will be there if he can clean up pressing work in time. A dozen or more protestants are expected to make the trip.

A member of the Plainfield Board of Health said today that at its meeting this afternoon the Board would most likely draft a message to the State Board asking that action on the enlargement be held up until the subject has been thoroughly investigated. The same member said a communication would probably be tacked to the request and the whole thing telegraphed to Trenton tonight.

Dunellen leaders in the fight against enlargement sent a vigorous communication to The Daily Press today, in which it is asserted that the city's present plan will make the sewer beds cost $630,000, as against the $210,000 cost of the Plainfield-Dunellen project turned down by your city father's."

The communication, which is signed by George W. Day, John L. Peters, Postmaster Henry S. Garretson and Dr. Thomas J. Hogan, of the Dunellen Health Board, is as follows:

"Editor, The Daily Press:

"The State Board of Health will give a hearing tomorrow to those interested in the enlargement of the present disposal works, which are now a public nuisance, not only to our borough, but the westerly section of your beautiful city. Your municipal officers propose to rip out the present contact beds and rebuild under our very nose, a plant that is estimated to cost at least $180,000.

"It is hard to believe that the people of Plainfield realize the inhuman wrong that is about to be fastened upon a weaker neighbor. It is hard to believe if this plan is consumated that we are living in the Christian age of which the cardinal principles are to consider the welfare of our neighbors as we should our own. Your servants seem to be desirious of planting that which, at its best, should be as far removed from any neighborhood as possible—a menace to our health and comfort—right under our front doors, at a cost, which from the best information obtainable, would more than freble the estimated cost of a trunk sewer and plant under the mountains and away from civiliza-

DORN'S HOUSE PARTY TO BE AIRED IN COURT

Neighbors of Henry Dorn, who live at Grove and Howard streets, told Chief Marshal Weiss yesterday morning, in accents of complaint, that he'd better see the Dorns about the goings-on at their house Sunday night.

When the chief got to the Dorn house he found a half a dozen windows broken, and Mr. and Mrs. Dorn looked very tired. Dorn admitted that there had been a blustery time there the night before, but blamed it all on Eugene Jennings, of Howard street.

He said Jennings cut in on a perfectly peaceful party at 7 o'clock, and began to stir things up so that by 8 o'clock the windows just naturally blew out. The chief hunted up Jennings, and found him looking as if he had gone through the windows one after another. VanDorn, Mrs. VanDorn and Jennings will appear before Recorder Dolliver tomorrow morning.

TROLLEY HITS CARRIAGE TWO SLIGHTLY INJURED

The refusal of John Bishop, of Manson place, to pay his fare on a Main Line trolley indirectly resulted in a collision between a special car and Mrs. Mary Hague's carriage at Liberty and West Front streets, Saturday night. Bishop was arrested and received a suspended sentence before Judge William G. DeMeza in the city court yesterday morning. Mrs. Hague and her driver were badly shaken up, the carriage demolished and the horse cut and skinned. The horse was taken to Higgins' stables and attended by Dr. F. C. Herbert. The man and women were carried into Charles B. Brownell's house on West Front street, and after being attended by Dr. C. B. Lufburrow were able to go home.

Bishop was not sober and on refusing to pay his fare was ejected from the car by the crew. Upon alighting he fell down and raised the cry that his leg was broken. Immediately half a dozen other passengers began to berate the trolleymen for their act and just when things looked bad for them the crews of two other cars came to their assistance. Nearly all of the passengers had alighted by this time and one of them ran down town and reported the affair to Patrolman Vanderweg. He informed Detective Sergeant Flynn and Superintendent George Luhr, who hurried to the scene and assumed control.

The passengers were ordered back into the car and all but a few continued their interrupted journey home. Those who remained formed a small knot about Bishop, who was still describing his alleged injury. In order to pass those who stood in the roadway, Mrs. Hague was obliged to drive on the car tracks and it was while in this position that her carriage was hit by the trolley going in the same direction. The patrol wagon arrived at this time with Patrolmen Wicht and Kelley and matters were soon straightened out.

"The Man of the Hour."

Manager Sanderson announces that the "Man of the Hour" will appear at the Plainfield theatre on New Year's day. The various characters of the play are in excellent hands and casted by its well known author George Broadhurst. His study of political conditions the country over has been very extensive and his knowledge of the workings of the various political rings and Tammany Hall, New York, in particular adds a tinge of realism that speedily found recognition in every city it has been presented.

ENDED EXISTENCE

William Patterson Despondent Over Ill Health Took Life on Christmas Day.

HAD NERVOUS PROSTRATION.

Had Come East to Recuperate and Became Melancholy Because Away From Family On Christmas.

Despondent because of his inability due to ill health to spend Christmas with his family in Lincoln, Neb., William Patterson, father-in-law of LeRoy H. Gates of Second place, ended his life some time Sunday afternoon by slashing his throat with a razor. This afternoon his body was found in the stunted wood near Smalley's stone quarry on the Watchung mountain, although he had been missing since 11 o'clock on Sunday morning.

One of the Italian laborers at the stone crusher was taking a short cut through the woods to go home for dinner shortly after noon when he found the body. He ran back to the crusher and told Mayor Smalley and the engineer at the works. After a superficial investigation the Mayor notified Chief Weiss, of the borough, who at once reported the case to Somerset County Physician Long at Somerville and notified Mr. Gates also. Dr. Long gave permission for the body to be removed to Runyon's undertaking rooms and will view it there tonight to issue the necessary burial permit.

The ground shows that Mr. Patterson had crawled seventy-five feet from the place where he cut the jugular vein and dropped the white handled razor as there was a large pool of blood at the foot of a hickory sapling and bloody finger prints on the trees where he had grasped them to steady himself. Becoming weak from loss of blood he had apparently tried to crawl to the road, but because confused had traveled in a semi-circle, falling on his face and was lying in that position when found, his arms folded under him and his legs drawn up.

Mr. Patterson was engaged in the hardware business in Lincoln and several months ago suffered a nervous breakdown. When he was able to do so he joined his daughter here to fully recuperate and was apparently much improved. As the holidays drew near he expressed a desire to return to his western home and spend them with his family, but he apparently abandoned the idea and acquiesced with the suggestion that he remain here a while longer until he had fully recovered. When Mr. and Mrs. Gates started from home to go to church on Sunday morning, Mr. Patterson left the house just a few moments later, having explained that he also intended to attend the service. That was the last that Mr. and Mrs. Gates saw of him and when he did not return for dinner they became alarmed. After communicating with friends and being unable to learn of his whereabouts they notified the police of the disappearance.

Mr. and Mrs. Gates knew that Mr. Patterson had a trip ticket to New York and thought perhaps he had gone to the city, but when hope in this respect was given up the alarm was spread.

Mr. Patterson was sixty-five years old, a veteran of the Civil War, a close friend of William Jennings Bryan. For a number of years he was president of the Nebraska Bryan Club. He was engaged in the hardware business in Lincoln and was well known in that business in the West.

CHARLES HABERLE PASSES AWAY AT SCOTCH PLAINS.

The funeral service of Charles Haberle, aged 66 years, will be held at the Scotch Plains Baptist church, tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock and the burial will be in the cemetery adjoining the church. Mr. Haberle had been a resident of Scotch Plains practically all of his life, and for many years he was employed as a carpenter by the New Jersey Central. An accident a few years ago compelled him to give up work.

Mr. Haberle was a member of the old fire company, at Scotch Plains; also the Exempt Firemen's Association. He was for many years a member of the Westfield Lodge, F. and A. M. He is survived by a wife.

Doyle's Drought.

The deceased had lived at the 'Plains for over thirty years and had always taken an active interest in the affairs of the town. He was popular with everyone and the news of his death Sunday morning came as a shock to his friends, although it was known that his condition was critical and but little hope had been entertained of his recovery. News and Notes

BRESNAHAN WILL PUT IN CLAIM FOR SALMON.

Trouble between Connie Mack, leader of the Philadelphia Athletics, and Roger Bresnahan, of the St. Louis Cardinals, is to follow Mack's action in signing up Roger Salmon, of Newark, Friday. The Newark lad, who is a freshman at Princeton, gives promise of being a star left-hand twirler, was sought after by several clubs, but Connie landed him.

Bresnahan will probably apply to the national commission asking that Salmon be awarded to the St. Louis club. Bresnahan had the young pitcher for a trial with the Cardinals last season. He was tried out by Catcher Jack Bliss, and Bresnahan offered him a contract. Roger's contention is that Salmon agreed to sign with St. Louis.

McInnis Will Stay with Athletics.

Reports that Jack McInnis will not play again for the Philadelphia Athletics were denied Saturday at the offices of the club. It has been rumored that the injury sustained by McInnis prior to the world series last fall, when a pitched ball by George Mullin, of Detroit, broke a bone in McInnis' right wrist, had failed to heal and that was the reason George Stovall and George Moriarity were mentioned in a trade that would possibly include a member of the Athletics. "McInnis will play with us next year," said Connie Mack, Saturday. "There isn't enough money in the world to get him away from me."

Overall Not to Return to Cubs.

Orval Overall, former Cub pitcher, who arrived in Chicago from California Saturday, set at rumors that he might again be with the Chicago team next season by declaring that he had no intention of returning. Overall also brought information that Mordecai Brown, star pitcher, would be missing from the Chicago team next spring. Brown, it was said, will engage in business with Al Tearney, president of the Three-Eye League. Tearney said that it was true Brown was considering a business venture with him and probably would not be seen on the west side in uniform during the coming season.

The Giants Liked Cuba.

Larry Doyle, Josh DeVore, Arthur Devlin, George Wiltse and Alie Latham, who are said to be well known in and about the village of New York, arrived in the locality mentioned last week, having been brought there by the steamer Morro Castle, which plies between Havana and Manhattan. According to opinions advanced by the possessors of the cognomens enumerated above, the island of Cuba is an ideal pasture when it comes to the pastime of batting and throwing a baseball about a diamond.

Sullivan's Sparring Partner Dead.

Jack Harris, aged sixty-five, the former sparring partner of John L. Sullivan and who helped train Sullivan for his fight with Jake Kilrain, was found dead in an abandoned building at Cosmopolis, Wash., Saturday. A coroner's jury late returned a verdict that death was caused by concussion of the brain, but did not fix the responsibility.

FOUND INNOCENT OF MURDER AFTER 16 YEARS IN JAIL.

A Christmas present to John Boehman, of Brooklyn, Saturday was the dismissal of charges which will lead to his release from Sing Sing prison after sixteen years' service on conviction for a murder of which the Supreme Court now finds him to be innocent. The necessary testimony was supplied by two men who kept silent at a time when he needed them to prove an alibi because, they said, they were afraid of being hounded by the police.

While in Sing Sing, Boehman, sentenced for life, met a doctor imprisoned on a minor charge, who promised to aid him when released, and as a result of the doctor's activities recently the necessary witnesses were found—the proprietor and bartender of a music hall, both of whom had made affidavits that Boehman was in their place at the time the crime was committed.

Put "Elijah the Third" In Jail.

Elisha Conklin, of Greenpoint, L. I., is being held in jail at New Brunswick awaiting the arrival of relatives to take care of him. He says he is Elijah the Third, a prophet from heaven. Thursday afternoon he preached from the roof of his home in Greenpoint to a thousand persons, and held his audience for an hour while he expounded his new doctrine: "New Heaven and New Hell." He told his audience that he had a divine command to go to New Brunswick and raise the dead. He attracted the attention of the police by his strange actions as soon as he arrived there, and they decided that he was not safe to be at large. He was formerly a horse trader at Greenpoint.

FEW HOURS' HUNTING TRIP COST ONE MAN $70.

When John Schneider, of 10 Kenmore avenue, Newark, decides to start on another hunting expedition he will make sure that the trip is made during the season for killing game and not during the period when hunting is prohibited by law. Schneider had an experience Saturday which taught him a lesson, and incidentally cost him $70.

Schneider left his home shortly after noon in quest of game. He reached Springfield about an hour later, and remained there until dusk, when he decided to return to Newark. With two gray squirrels and a rabbit, which he had shot during his stay in the Springfield woods, he boarded a trolley car of the Morris County Traction Company. When the car reached Millburn avenue and Main street, Millburn, Deputy Game Warden H. V. W. Lighthipe got aboard the car. He saw Schneider dressed as a hunter and also noticed a pair of feet, presumably those of a rabbit, protruding from the man's pocket. Upon investigating further the warden discovered the three animals.

Schneider was taken from the car to the Millburn jail, where he was arraigned before Justice of the Peace William A. Hackelton, who imposed the fine after the Newarker had admitted shooting the game. He paid.

CHINESE BANDITS GET $850,000 IN BULLION.

Harbin, Manchuria, Dec. 26.—A band of Chinese brigands, Saturday attacked an imperial convoy, which was on the way to Kirin with a large amount of bullion. The robbers carried off a sum of $850,000.

The number of brigands in the province of Kirin has increased rapidly since the beginning of the political disturbances and the consequent unsettled condition of all parts of the country. Many soldiers have deserted from the army and have joined the ranks of the brigands, and now live openly by plunder.

Murders occur frequently along the high roads, and the brigands even attack settlements of considerable size, in which they loot the stores, and do not hesitate to murder the inhabitants if they offer any resistance.

HOLD BOY FOR ATTEMPT TO SLASH SCHOOL HEAD.

William Miller, thirteen-year-old son of Frank Miller, of Watchung avenue, Belleville, was paroled in his father's custody Saturday night by Police Justice Richard H. Ashworth for the action of the Juvenile Court. James G. Shawger, principal of the Silver Lake Public School, in which the boy is a fourth grade pupil, charged that the boy tried to stab him with a pocket knife.

The principal also asserted that young Miller used foul language and made threats against the lives of members of the teaching force, following his alleged attempt to stab. The trouble started over the action of a teacher in taking dice from him.

Miss Edna French, of Craig place, is detained at home by illness.

Frank Eick, formerly of this city, but now of Troy, N. Y., expects to spend the holiday week with his mother, Mrs. Garret Eick, of Westervelt avenue.

THE OVERSEER QUESTION.

It would be interesting to know whether it is hesitation or difference of opinion among members of the Common Council which is causing the exceptional delay in their usually prompt bi-annual selection of Alexander D. Ayres to succeed himself as overseer of the poor. One consideration in the minds of the councilmen is doubtless the fact that under the new law the next appointee will hold office for five years instead of two, and that with greatly increased powers transferring to him certain control and authority heretofore exercised by the mayor and city judge. A new question of greater seriousness than usual is presented to them this year. Mr. Ayres has become, by long experience, more familiar with the law and practice of the office as it has been in the past than a new appointee could hope to be at the start, and when other candidates have been suggested, this latter consideration has usually been sufficient to prevail over the claims of others so far suggested.

But this year a new state of affairs has arisen. Not only are the powers of the office greatly enlarged so that the new overseer will be called upon to exercise new discretions and wield new authority affecting the destinies of our dependent poor; but this year for the first time an offer has come from one whose qualification and superior ability cannot be disputed from any point of view. Mr. DeForest's offer is quite unusual in more ways than one, so unusual in fact that the calculations which have so long availed seem to be upset this year. Mr. DeForest offers to take the office of overseer, if the city desires his services, and then employ Mr. Ayres to do all that has been done and be responsible for its being done well, and pay Mr. Ayres the salary of the office and add to Mr. Ayres' experience and industry his own broader experience and ability, and the still larger usefulness in the wise development of the yearly increasing powers and ever widening field of the office.

Mr. DeForest knows that the traditional function of merely feeding the poor who are destined to be ever with us is not the whole duty to the poor on the one part, nor to the taxpayers on the other; for there is all about us a great and rising tide of intelligent and determined public sentiment, which needs but the right leadership to direct it in Plainfield as elsewhere, which believes that poverty is a curable disease, and that much of the poverty in Plainfield should be cured right now and save the money of the taxpayer and the suffering of the poor man and his children and children's children. Let the good work of the present overseer continue, but let us bring to Plainfield and introduce into this department the best methods of conservation and scientific management, whose success are the greatest forward step of the new century in all departments of American life.

But it is rumored that Mr. Ayres declines to accept such employment by Mr. DeForest—that if he cannot longer be overseer he will not help Mr. DeForest. And this is being used as an argument why Mr. Ayres must be appointed, because Mr. DeForest would need Mr. Ayres help in order to succeed. It is possible that the argument itself originated with Mr. Ayres, and that the refusal is adhered to merely to add strength to the argument; for it is hard to understand how Mr. Ayres can fail to see his own personal advantage in the proposed arrangement, hence our conclusion that the refusal to accept Mr. DeForest's offer will be withdrawn when no longer needed to back up the argument. Of course, Mr. Ayres will accept such an offer to unite such powers of experience and knowledge for the good of Plainfield.

But suppose that Mr. Ayres should decline, can it be that those who have adopted the argument really believe they can convince the people of Plainfield that Mr. Ayres is so much the arbiter of their destines that his refusal is to their Common Council law, and to the poor man and his children loss of opportunity, and to the taxpayer continuance of the traditional extravagance of not even trying to cure the disease?

Somebody has published, as if to stir up animosity, the cry that this is an attempt by the Charity Oragnization Society to take possession of the city poor department and have the spending of the taxpayers' money. The statement is probably another argument only, and not true; but the answer is apparent in the character of the candidate. Anyone who needs any other answer should oppose Mr. DeForest, who is evidently the chief villain of the plot, and whose resignation from the society is typical of his hypocricy.

Those whose acquaintance of the man, his associations and connections and traditions, belie the accusation, would have equal difficulty to find a motive to explain such an offer to the city, by one for whom it must mean only sacrifice, without pay, and without even the remote chance of ultimate glory, were it not in evidence that such conduct of public service appears to be hereditary in his family, and probably Mr. DeForest cannot answer the question. He offers much and the success of his offer is at stake.

It would seem that the very position he has assumed is a guaranty that he is bound to succeed at all hazards to himself and that probably even Mr. Ayers' refusal to help is not likely to succeed in making him fail in his high purpose to serve the city of Plainfield.

Griggs For Presidency.

Editor, The Daily Press:

I am a Republican and want to see the Republicans win in 1912 and I want to offer a Christmas suggestion, namely: That Hon. John W. Griggs of New Jersey be nominated as the standard bearer of the Republican party for 1912, for the following reasons:

First, Mr. Griggs made Democratic New Jersey, Republican New Jersey by his election as governor in 1895.

Second, he was appointed Attorney General of United States by President McKinley when Attorney General McKenna was appointed to the Supreme Court, and served for about two years.

Third, Mr. Griggs retired from the Cabinet because he couldn't afford to stay in the Cabinet.

Fourth, he is a comparatively poor man but recognized as a great lawyer.

Politically he is known especially well in New Jersey and New York and in his official record he is well known throughout the United States.

Why not nominate Mr. Griggs for the Presidency which would be, in my judgment, satisfactory throughout the United States? I want to win.

Fifteen Turkeys Stolen.

Turkey thieves made a rich haul in Scotch Plains Saturday night when they carried off fifteen of the birds from The Inn. Proprietor Frowery had the turkeys in a shed adjoining his stable and did not know they were gone until he went to get one for dinner Sunday.

Pickpocket Got Watch.

While shopping in New York Saturday, William Roberts, of Scotch Plains, had his pocket picked of his gold watch and fob. He was in a crush at one of the stores and did not miss the timepiece until some time after leaving the place.

OFFENDERS ARRAIGNED IN CITY COURT TODAY

Charles Casset, of Plainfield avenue, and James Springs, of West Fourth street, both colored, were the first of a batch of holiday offenders to be arraigned before Judge William G. DeMeza in the city court this morning. They were arrested for fighting on Liberty street. In order that several witnesses may be summoned the hearing was set down for this afternoon.

Albert Saunderson, colored, of South Second street, received a suspended sentence. He was locked up for drunkenness but insisted that he had only taken one drink and that it threw him into a fit. William Gratton, an old soldier, admitted having taken too much in the course of liquor while celebrating the holiday and upon his promise to be more discreet in the future sentence was suspended.

Edward T. Everhardt, of Elizabeth, said "Gimme a match, you piker," to John Kennedy, of Liberty street, on North avenue, last night, and when the demand was refused the Elizabeth man got the worst of a fight. The men were strangers and when they met again this morning in the city court before Judge DeMeza, Kennedy's story was believed and sentence on him suspended. A fine of $3 or ten days was given Everhardt. He will serve the days.

Joseph Flaherty, driver of a Newark store's delivery truck, was arrested by Patrolman McDonald at Park avenue and West Front street, Sunday afternoon, for reckless driving. He will be arraigned for a hearing on the charge Thursday afternoon.

BABES AS XMAS GIFTS TO CHILDLESS HOMES.

Trenton, Dec. 26—Nearly a thoucand Christmas babies, blue eyed and brown eyed, have been given over to the care of childless married couples by Miss Frances Day, general agent of the New Jersey State Board of Children's Guardians. The babies were received in many homes as presents from Santa Claus, and in every home where these novel gifts were received a Christmas tree had been arranged in honor of the new arrival. Old St. Nicholas was in reality a rival of Brother Stork, who has somewhat neglected Jersey in 1911.

Miss Day, who is called the "Little Mother of the Poor," had charge of the work of placing the children of the State's fifty-four almshouses in private families as adopted sons and daughters.

One North Jersey childless family narrowly escaped disappointment after applying for a baby boy as a Christmas present. Dick, a youngster of 2 years in a Newark institution, developed chicken-pox about ten days ago when he was getting ready to be taken to his new home. Dr. Robert Stewart, the board physician, didn't want little Dick to miss anything, and he cured him in record time. He is now happily housed in the home of his foster-parents.

The demand for babies as Christmas gifts this year by Jersey residents was so great that the board has now only thireen children to dispose of, and it is expected that the board will be childless within a few days, as it has several orders to fill before New Year's Day.

Dr. Donohue Named Commissioner.

New Brunswick politicians received a big surprise Saturday when Supreme Court Justice James J. Bergen named Dr. Francis M. Donohue, a prominent surgeon, as sinking fund commissioner, to succeed the late John N. Carpender, who had held the office for thirty years and who died recently. City Attorney Frederick Weigel and former County Clerk John H. Conger had been the only men heretofore mentioned for the office. Dr. Donohue had not been a candidate. The office is one of honor rather than emolument. The salary is only $800 a year and the term five years.

Hit Another Car.

While driving his car along West Front street, last night, R. D. Robertson, of Evergreen avenue, collided with a Mitchell car, No. 21258, which was standing at the curb without any lights. He did not see it until too late to avoid the collision in which the front axle and wheel of his machine were badly bent. He did not learn who owns the Mitchell, but continued to town and reported the matter to the police.

The Christmas services at the Netherwood Reformed church, Sunday night were enjoyed by a large congregation. The vested choir, comprising sixteen voices, six of which were those of women, rendered Charles Damton's cantata, "The Story of the Angels," under the direction of Horace J. Martin, Sr. The solos and chorus work were an enjoyable feature. There was also a special program of anthems by the vested choir at the morning service and the pastor, Rev. Royal A. Stout, delivered appropriate sermons both morning and evening. The church was decorated with greens and holly.

The Bible school of the Park Avenue Baptist church, enjoyed the special program Sunday morning as previously announced. Features were the large orchestra, under the direction of Arthur S. Mosher, which rendered special selections and accompanied in the singing of carols; the appearance of Miss Lillian Leighton Lamson, of New York, elcutionist, who gave several appropriate selections; Miss Luella Harris, soprano soloist, formerly of the First Baptist church choir, who sang two selections in a pleasing manner. One of these solos was with violin obligato. George E. Hall, superintendent of the school, had charge of the program, while Robert Humpston, organist, was in charge of the music by the church quartet. The service was largely attended and the decorations were very attractive.

The quartet choir of the First Presbyterian church, under the direction of Herbert J. Harold, rendered a special program of music at both the morning and evening services Sunday, as previously announced. There was a pleasing solo at the morning service entitled Mary Magdalen, by Miss Stadler. The entire work of the quartet was much enjoyed. At 10 o'clock the Sunday school, under the supervision of LeRoy Gates, superintendent, gave a special program, which included the singing of carols and recitations. Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring, the pastor, delivered appropriate sermons both morning and evening. The church was attractively decorated for the day.

Congregational.

Following the regular morning service at the Congregational church, the Sunday school held it's Christmas exercises. The program comprised exercises by classes from the different departments, part songs and carols by the school. The vested choir rendered several anthems appropriate to the occasion.

A combination service of the Sunday-school and church congregation marked the Christmas celebration at the Monroe Avenue M. E. church Sunday morning. FAVOR NEW PLANT tion.

"About two years ago you had an estimate from a very responsible engineering firm to construct from Rock avenue(including disposal works) a trunk sewer sufficiently large to take care of Plainfield, North Plainfield and Dunellen at a cost of $261,000.

"We understand that North Plainfield at that time agreed to assume $70,000 of the total cost, leaving about $200,000 (including the cost of land and right of way) to be divided between Plainfield and Dunellen.

"We believe that system would be much more economical in operation than any that can be installed at the present site, because of the lack of fall, and are credibly informed that on this account alone at least $3,000 per annum would be saved your taxpayers in maintenance.

"Look over these figures and give us the opportunity of proving to your taxpayers the facts contained in this communication:

"Cost of rebuilding plant at present site, $180,000.

"Value of present site if sewer was removed, $100,000.

"Saving in maintenance, $3,000 per annum, capitalized say at $50,000.

"Increase in ratables in Plainfield and Dunellen by removal at least $300,000.

"Total, $630,000, as against the cost of the Plainfield-Dunellen project turned down by your city fathers of $210,000 because they could not squeeze the borough of North Plainfield out of an extra five per cent.

"It has been publicly stated (but is a downright falsehood) that Dunellen is to blame for the present beds. But even if it were true, that is no good reason why our children's children should suffer.

"We are ready to prove these facts if given the opportunity and scarcely believe that the people of Plainfield as a whole would stand for such a crime against their neighbors and such reckless squandering of the public funds.

"Let every citizen that is interested in the welfare of his city send a night message telegram to the "State Board of Health, Trenton, N. J.," asking them to withhold its approval and consent to this monstrous wrong pending a full inquiry into the whole question by your own people.

"We will show you something that you do not know and if we are in error and cannot prove our case, based on the above facts and figures, we will take a back seat and let you stick a dirty rag under our nose. All we ask is the opportunity."

Theatre Ushers' Benefit.

"The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary," the vehicle in which May Robson starred for several seasons, will be presented at the Plainfield theatre, Saturday afternoon and night, January 6, as a benefit performance for the ushers of the house. Miss Helen Lowell will be seen in the principal role and will be supported by a capable company of her own selection. Tickets are for sale by all the ushers and may be exchanged for seats on and after Tuesday, January 2.

Plucking Sheep.

The pure bred sheep in Shetland are not shorn but plucked. The process takes place generally in June, when the fleece is "ripe" and the silky wool can be pulled off without pain. This is called "rooing" and is much less damaging to the young fiber than clipping with shears. The wool when thus handled retains its peculiar softness, so that any one of experience can tell whether the material of a knitted article has been plucked or shorn. It ripens first upon the neck and shoulders, so that sheep half pulled resemble in some sort a poodle that is clipped. We must suppose that harsher handling prevailed at one time, for we read that in 1616 the Scottish privy council spoke of the custom as still kept up "in some remote and uncivil places," and James I. wrote to tell them that it had been put down in Ireland under penalty of a fine. Upon this they passed an act on March 17, 1616, deploring the destruction of sheep this caused and imposing similar fines on those who should persist in the practice.

Cleanliness and Arsenic.

In Styria and Carinthia there is much arsenic eating among the peasants. The women take it to give themselves a good complexion and to make their hair fine and glossy. The men take it because they believe that it gives them wind in climbing in the chase after chamois. In Styria and Carinthia it is known that an arsenic eater can never be broken of the habit and that if arsenic be compulsorily kept from the eater death rapidly ensues. It is believed in the Tamar—and this is perhaps true—that an arsenic worker is fit for no other work. He must remain at this occupation. Health and breath fail him at other employments. Eventually it may be that chronic arsenical poisoning ensues. But this may be staved off, if not wholly prevented, by scrupulous cleanliness, by care taken not only to wash in the "changing house," but to bathe freely at home. As one of the foremen said to the writer, "Against arsenic the best antidote is soap taken externally."—Chambers' Journal.

A Piscatorial Gunner.

The jaculator fish, the piscatorial gunner of the Javan lakes, uses his mouth as a squirt gun and is a marksman of no mean ability. Go to a small lake or pool filled with specimens of jaculators, place a stake or pole in the water with the end projecting from one to three feet above the surface, place a beetle or fly on top of the pole and await developments. Soon the water will be swarming with finny gunners, each anxious for a shot at the tender morsel which the experimenter has placed in full view. Presently one comes to the surface, steadily observes his prey and measures the distance. Instantly he screws his mouth into the funniest shapes imaginable, discharges a stream of water with precision equal to any sharpshooter and knocks the fly or beetle into the water, where he is instantly devoured by the successful Nimrod or some of his hungry horde. This sport may be kept up as long as the supply of beetles and flies holds out.

The Air Mile.

The air mile is a unit of measurement that came into use with the advancement of aviation. We have the land mile and the sea mile, which is approximately one-seventh longer than the land mile of America. The nautical mile is often incorrectly called a knot, but a knot is a measure of both distance and time. It is correct to say that a vessel makes ten knots, but to say that she makes ten knots an hour is tautology. The air mile is measured differently from the land mile and the sea mile. It is a land mile minus the retardation of an adverse wind or plus the acceleration of a favoring wind. Thus an aviator could cover many air miles while hovering over a given point on the earth's surface.—Browning's Magazine.

Watching Sponges Grow.

Outside the harbor of Sfax, Tunisia, in the shallow water of the clear Mediterranean, is situated a biological laboratory for the study of sponges. It is one of the most unique in the world and affords opportunity for observing the development of the sponge from tiny larva, so small that it can only be studied under a microscope until five years later it has developed into a perfect sponge.

Busy.

"Leafey tells me he hasn't been so busy for years."

"Nonsense! That job he has is a cinch. He never has to work hard there."

"That's just it. He's been fired, and he's chasing around after another job."—Exchange.

Interrupted Repose.

"So you don't care for chess?"

"Not much. It's annoying to be wakened every time you drop into a nice nap merely to be told that it is your move."—Washington Star.

For the Piano.

Cold Spoken Customer—You keep everything for the piano, don't you? Salesman—Yes, sir. We do, sir. Cold Spoken Customer—Give me an ax.—Puck.

Head and Foot.

The chiropodist merely wants to get a foothold in business, while the wig maker only wants to make a bald existence.—Kansas City Star.

The best manners should be used all day and every day. They are none too good for constant use.

WATCHES FOR THE BLIND.

They Are Made With Raised Numerals and Without Crystals.

The fingers of a blind man were skimming over the pages of a book in the reading room for the sightless in the public library when he suddenly drew a watch from his pocket, opened the face, closed it with a snap and then placed his book on the table.

"It's 4 o'clock. I guess I'd better be going," he said to the librarian, who was hovering near to attend to the wants of her readers. The book was replaced on the shelf, and the blind man arose and departed.

The blind man's telling time by a watch impressed a visitor, who asked about it.

"You will find," said the librarian, "that most blind persons carry watches and often consult them. The watches are of the hunting case sort, but they have no crystal, and the numerals are embossed. The blind person opens the case, and by pressing his fingers lightly on the face he can tell the time instantly by the position of the hands. The watches are especially made for the sightless, the hands being made differently, so they may be distinguished at once.

"I have seen blind persons stand near an electric clock, that strikes once on the hour, and with watch in hand wait until the bell rings. As it does so they set their own by moving the minute hand around until it touches their thumb nail, which is held exactly at 12."—New York Times.

MEAT FOR MUSIC.

The Way Haydn's "Ox" Minuet Came to Get That Title.

There is no sensible reason for the titles attached to many pieces of music, some of them even classical selections. Most generally they are placed there as an attempt of some publisher to "boom" his stock and sell his goods. Then again, some peculiar titles may have their origin in incidents about as important as the following:

Haydn one day received a visit from a butcher who said that himself and his daughters were admirers of Haydn's music and as the young woman was soon to be married he made bold to ask that the composer write a minuet for her wedding. Kind "Papa Haydn" consented, and in a few days the man of meat obtained his music. Not long afterward Haydn was surprised to hear this same minuet played under his window. On looking out he saw a band of musicians forming a ring around a large ox, tastefully decorated with flowers. Soon the butcher came up and presented the ox to Haydn, saying that for such excellent music he thought he ought to make the composer a present of the best ox in his possession. Ever after this little composition was called the "Ox" minuet.—W. Francis Gates in "Anecdotes of Great Musicians."

How Franklin Learned Manners.

Franklin collected thirteen principles to cover the small amenities of daily life. Each week he picked out one and practiced it diligently, thus creating a habit. It took three months to cover them all. Each year he practiced each one four full weeks. He kept this up for many years. The uncouth Franklin of early manhood who found fault with his wife for giving him a silver spoon and a china bowl for his bread and milk instead of a pewter spoon and earthenware crock, developed into the statesman and man of the world who won the respect of Englishmen, the admiration of Frenchmen and the gratitude of Americans.—Harrington Emerson in Engineering Magazine.

Following In His Footsteps.

Visitors to China are particularly struck by the numbers of pairs of boots hung in separate wooden cages in the archway of the main west gate of Hsuanhua, the valedictory gifts of beneficent prefects. It is an attractive custom in China to invite a departing magistrate whose rule has been popular to leave a pair of old boots for suspension in a prominent place as a hint to his successor to follow in his footsteps. It is a considerable honor to be asked to leave these boots, and the ruled make the request all the more eagerly because they believe in the efficacy of the hint.

The Play of "Othello."

"Viewed exclusively as a dramatic fabric, 'Othello' is not only the best of Shakespeare's plays, but the best play in the English language," says William Winter in the Century. "No story could be more simple, direct, fluent and elementally tragic, but with what marvelous skill the poet has told it, with what ingenuity of invention, with what vibrant vitality of continuous action, with what ample and superb drawing of character, what prodigious volume of feeling, what tumult of surging and conflicting passion and what perfection of poetic style!"

A Little One.

Figg—Talk about your green servant girls. My wife told ours to put a little nutmeg in the custard she was making this afternoon. Fogg—And did she do it? Figg—Oh, yes; she put a little nutmeg in, all right. I came near choking over the blamed thing.—Boston Transcript.

Aristocrat.

The word "aristocracy" comes from the Greek "aristos" (best) and "archo" (rule), meaning the rule of the best. Literally aristocrat means the "best man."

HOLY CROSS FLOCK HEARS NEW RECTOR

Rev. William S. McCoy conducted his first service as the new rector of the Church of the Holy Cross, Sunday morning, and again yesterday morning he was in charge of the Christmas Day services. He was greeted by a large congregation and made a favorable impression. He took his text from Isaiah 30:18: "For the Lord is the God of Judgment," and in is discourse he emphasized the justice of God.

Mr. McCoy has a pleasing manner both in and out of the pulpit, and those who heard him on Sunday were impressed. Sunday afternoon at 4:30, Mr. McCoy baptized the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. Herbert Whittingham, formerly of the borough, but now of Baltimore.

Mrs. McCoy and the children are expected here in about a week or ten days when possession of the rectory will be taken. For the present the rector is stopping at The Homestead on Washington avenue and is now busy arranging for the Christmas service and entertainment Thursday night. The service will be held in the church and the entertainment will follow in the parish house, when refreshments will be served. All connected with the parish are invited.

Musical Four At Proctor's.

The Four Burns Sisters are offering a musical treat at Proctor's theatre this week, in a program of song, piano duets, 'cello solos, etc. The Una Clayton Players present a farce comedy sketch, "What's In a Name," in which a horse figures in one of the most laughable farces yet seen. Jŏe Flynn, the man who wrote "Down Went McGinnity," is a clever monologuist, his songs and parodies being a scream. Ollie Gilbert, a charming singing and talking comedienne, with a wealth of gowns from Paris, is a hit. Rehlanders' seven trained pigs comprises a big-time act. The piggies do all kinds of stunts. The great aeroplane act, "The Two Shooting Stars," is billed for Thursday. Don't miss it.

Danish services will be held at the Swedish Pilgrim church tomorrow night with a Christmas tree service at 8 o'clock.

ALUMNI TOO MUCH FOR N.P.H.S'S TEAM

The North Plainfield High School basketball team was defeated by the alumni associative five in Debele Hall, yesterday afternoon by a score of 32 to 17, making the second victory this season for the alumni over the regular school five. Although the regulars put up a strong game, the added weight of their opponents was too much for them. The first half ended with a score of 20 to 11. "Hub" Stine and P. Dunning carried off the honors for the alumni team, scoring a total of 24 points between them. The lineup:

N. P. H. S.—Forwards, C. Taylor, Love; center, F. Dunning; guards, W. Taylor, Townley.

Alumni Association — Forwards, Stine, P. Dunning; center, Smith; guards, Abrams, Bailey.

HOPE CHAPEL VICTORS, WIN BOTH CONTESTS

The Hope chapel basketball team added two more victories to its list, Saturday and yesterday. Saturday night, the Hope five defeated Dr. N. H. Probasco's Bible class team by a score of 40 to 2, and last night it defeated Co. M cadets, of Somerville, by a score of 44 to 21. Both contests were easy for the Hope boys and they were not obliged to extend themselves at any stage. The locals were able to shoot baskets at will.

In the game last night the visitors were only two points behind the locals at the end of the first half, but in the second Hope simply ran away from its opponents. The lineups:

Hope chapel—Forwards, T. Heron, J. Heron; center, J. Doig, D. Wardrop; guards, G. Snyder, G. Leighs.

Co. M cadets—Forwards, Van-Zandt, Barnes; center-guard, Van-Pelt; forward-guard, Wittnebert; forward, Hershaw; guard-center, Norton.

FINDS STRANGE WOMAN AND DOG IN HER BED.

When Mrs. Sarah Smith, of 114 Union street, Elizabeth, was ready to retire Sunday night she found that her bed was occupied by Mrs. George Brink, of the same address, but not the same apartment, and a fussy little fox terrier. The dog was there to protect the slumbers of his mistress, and when Mrs. Smith approached the sleeping woman the snapping and barking of the latter's pet drove her back. Meanwhile Mrs. Brink slept soundly and peacefully.

Mrs. Smith then hied herself to the street and enlisted the services of Patrolman Talbot. This is the entry the big policeman made in the blotter at headquarters:

"I put the dog to flight and took Mrs. Brink to her own apartments."

Colby and the Senatorship.

Although he would appreciate the honor of being a United States Senator, former State Senator Everett Colby does not relish the idea of being indorsed for the position by resolution, and he said so before a gathering of Progressive Republicans in Newark, Friday night. Mr. Colby also opposed the idea of adopting the same course with regard to Theodore Roosevelt as a Presidential candidate. He said that it would be wise to first ascertain the Progressive sentiment throughout the State.

ATLANTIC CITY HAS A WIDE-OPEN SUNDAY

Atlantic City, Dec. 26—It remained for cheery old Santa to lift the "lid" and put a crimp in the drought which has prevailed here for the past dozen Sundays. Drinks were on sale at nearly every beach front cafe and dozens of the side avenue and principal thorougfare saloons put out the latchstrings Sunday. The thousands who flocked shoreward to celebrate the holidays took advantage of the "wet" Sunday.

There was a general celebration about the cafes near the Boardwalk at midnight when the music and drinks were dispensed without the customary curfew. Proprietors of big cafes in the vicinity of the City Hall refused to take the chance, fearing the same medicine handed out three months ago when they were summarily closed by police orders and then indicted for violation of the excise laws.

All of the new theatres will be situated in the old borough, while the four now in operation are in the centre of the business section.

ROBT. LEE'S OFFER

Candidate For City Clerkship Makes Unusual Proposition to Councilmen.

TO DO WORK OF SEVERAL.

All For $1,000 and Fees, He Says—Believes He Can Save City $1,000 a Year—His Letter to City Fathers.

Former Collector of Taxes Robert L. Lee makes an unusual offer to the Common Council in the hope that the city fathers will select him on January 1 to succeed James T. MacMurray as city clerk. Mr. Lee, who was at one time a councilman, says that he will "agree to accept a salary of $1,000 and all fees collected." In return he promises to save the city approximately $1,000 a year and to do the work of three people.

Each member of the Common Council has received a typewritten copy of Lee's extraordinary offer, which follows:

"In order to bring the matter clearly before the members of the Common Council, I wish to announce that I am a candidate for the position of city clerk, and to state my position.

"The Common Council has not up to this time set any office hours for the city clerk, nor has he himself kept any regular office hours. If you elect me to the position I will attend strictly to the duties of the position, keeping such office hours as you in your judgment set, and in addition be there at any time in the evening when required or deemed advisable.

"The city clerk now receives a salary of $1,200 per year and all fees collected. I doubt if any one but the present incumbent of that office knows what the latter amounts to. If you think it desirable to have this system continue, I will agree to accept a salary of $1,000 per year and all fees collected.

"The city now pays a stenographer $600 per year to record the minutes of the meetings and to perform other work assigned to him. I will perform this service without any additional salary above that received as city clerk.

"The saving to the city in the above two items alone is $800 per year.

"In addition to the above I will attend to all the shorthand and typewriting work required by any city department without additional expense to the city.

"For the purpose of making this proposal clear I will here tabulate the saving to the city on the several items above noted:

"Reduction in cost of city clerk, per year	$ 200.00
"Elimination of city stenographer, per year	600.00
"Elimination of street commissioner's stenographer, per year	360.00
	$1,160.00

"The argument may be advanced that I cannot attend to all these duties! In answer to this I will say, that should it be found that the work is more than can be performed satisfactorily by myself I will employ such additional help as necessary without extra expense to the city.

"My purpose is to give the city a business administration of the office and to be there when wanted."

MISS ALMA HAINES NOW MRS. SCHWEITZER.

Miss Alma Haines, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Haines, of 209 Duer street, and John E. Schweitzer, of 73 Watchung avenue, were married at 8:30 o'clock last night by Rev. C. C. The ring ceremony was used.

MELEE AT DORN'S IS BLAMED ON WIFE

Henry Dorn, of Howard and Grove streets, against whom neighbors complained because of a row at his house Sunday night, was arraigned before Recorder Dolliver in the borough police court this morning.

He convinced the court that his wife, against whom a warrant was also sworn out, required investigation more than he, and sentence was suspended with a warning.

Mrs. Dorn didn't obey the court's summons to appear, and the police were instructed to arrest her on sight. They are looking also for Eugene Jennings, charged with taking a prominent part in the row. Dorn told the court he hadn't seen his wife since Sunday night.

PARK CLUB DANCE

Brilliant Event Attracted More Than Three Hundred Society Folk.

DECORATIONS ARE ELABORATE.

Mrs. Samuel Townsend as Chairman—Stage Depicted a Norwegian Snow Scene—List of Patronesses.

The Christmas dance given at the Park Club, last night, under the auspices of the entertainment committee, of which Mrs. Samuel Townsend is the chairman, proved to be a delightful event. More than 300 guests were present, including many from out of town and a number of young people who are home from college for the Yuletide season. The large assembly hall was thronged throughout the evening with merry dancers and all agreed that it was the best affair of the kind held at the club.

The decorations were unusually elaborate, surpassing anything heretofore attempted. They comprised southern smilax and pines, cedar trees, all arranged attractively about the auditorium, while the stage was decorated to represent a Norwegian snow scene, the pines and cedar trees being covered with snow wool and a sparkling powder. More than three hundred red and white incandescent electric lights were used with pleasing effect.

There was a notable expression of the true Christmas spirit on the part of the guests and all thoroughly enjoyed the popular program with encores rendered by Muller's Orchestra. About midnight there was an intermission, during which refreshments were served by Henry Johnson, the club steward, after which the festivities continued until 2 o'clock this morning.

The patronesses for the affair comprised Mrs. William Barlow, Sr., Mrs. Henry D. Hibbard, Mrs. Charles W. McCutchen, Mrs. Samuel St. John McCutchen, Mrs. J. H. Howell, Mrs. Joseph Yerkes and Mrs. E. P. Willson, while the entertainment committee with Mrs. Samuel Townsend, had general supervision of the dance.

Rev. C. H. Mallery, rector of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, conducted the service, reading appropriate Scripture selections, offering prayer and making a few remarks. The burial was in the family plot in Hillside cemetery. The pall bearers were Joseph A. Blatz, F. B. Marsh and George Rockefeller, of Central Lodge, A. O. U. W., and Edward Wheatley, Nicholas Meyers and J. A. Dow, of Somerset Council, Jr. O. U. A. M.

ARRAIGNED AS FIGHTERS THEY RENEW FRIENDSHIP.

After investigating the cause of the fight on Liberty street, Monday afternoon between Charles Cassett, of Plainfield avenue, and James Springs, of West Fourth street, both colored, Judge William G. DeMeza in the city court yesterday afternoon exemplified the spirit of the season of peace and good will by inducing the men to forget their differences and to become friends once more. This agreed too, sentence on each was suspended.

This morning James Turner, colored, of Muhlenberg place, was arraigned on complaint of his wife who told the court that her husband had abused her, but after having him locked up she had relented and requested the court to deal leniently with him feeling sure that he would not give her cause to complain again. After giving Turner a lecture sentence was suspended by Judge DeMeza.

Miss Vaughan Engaged.

The engagement of Miss Lucy F. Vaughan, daughter of Rev. Dr. and Mrs. M. W. Vaughan, of 218 Liberty street, to J. Richard Gates, was announced today. Dr. Vaughan is pastor of Mt. Olive Baptist church.

SAW MAN RESCUED FROM WATERY GRAVE

Numbers of Plainfielders on their way across the North river aboard the westbound Jersey Central R. R. ferryboat Cranford saw a drowning man rescued today. When the Cranford hove within sight of the incident at 10:18 o'clock this morning, the man was struggling in the water, vainly trying to get a life preserver under his arms, thrown to him from the Pennsylvania ferryboat Newark.

He was having a time keeping afloat, and had begun to go down in spite of the preserver. The Cranford laid by to help and another ferryboat slowed down; but a deckhand on the Newark ended the suspense by plunging in to the struggler's assistance. He fastened the preserver on, and rescued and rescuer were hauled aboard the Newark. Dr. George R. Boston was one of those who witnessed the rescue.

PRESENTATION MADE AT XMAS EXERCISES

The Christmas entertainment of the Park Avenue Baptist Bible school took place last night, and a delightful affair it was from start to finish. The program, in charge of the superintendent, George E. Hall, opened with a half hour's entertainment by a humorist, Malcolm Shackelford, of East Orange. The work of this entertainment was of a high order, and his songs and sketches furnished abundant amusement for the large audience present.

Two Christmas trees occupied conspicuous position in the room, on one side of the platform was a very large tree with the usual attractive trimmings of tinsel, and other ornaments; on the other side was a tree whose sole decorations consisted of new, crisp one dollar bills, one hundred of them. This $100 come from Mrs. G. R. Maguire's Bible class as its contribution toward the church debt fund. Mr. Hall accepted their gift in the name of the school and in turn passed the sum over to William N. Runyon, who as president of the board of trustees, received the same for the church. The pastor, Rev. G. R. Maguire, was pleasantly surprised by receiving from the church a handsome roll top desk. The presentation speech was made by Rev. W. W. Pratt. Dr. Maguire responded in his own pleasing way.

William N. Runyon, teacher of the young men's Bible class, was also remembered in the way of a desk chair for use in his office. E. Ferdinand Dorman, secretary of the class, made the presentation. Mr. Runyon responded. Mrs. G. R. Maguire received from the members of her class a handsome black hand bag. Mr. Shackelford provided another half hour of entertainment, including comic songs and sketches. He also gave a reproduction of a play in a Chinese theatre, and a court room scene in Virginia. A lot of fun was created by the presentation of toy presents to several of the officers of the church and school, including the pastor and deacons. Mr. Hall made the presentation speech in each case, and the one receiving the gift was asked to open his parcel before the audience.

The closing number on the program was of interest to everyone in the room. A large table on the platform was uncovered, and displayed four lots of packages, each wrapped in a different colored paper, green, blue, yellow and red. Each person present was given a ticket upon entering the room; these tickets were in the same four colors. The superintendent introduced this feature of the evening in his usual happy way, and then invited all who held red tickets to come forward and receive their gifts; and so on, each color had its turn, until each one was supplied. The gifts were toys of every description, and made a lot of fun for all.

STIRRED ITALIANS

Turkish War Fever Comes to Town by Way of Saengerbund Hall Stage.

TIP FOR RECRUITING SERGT.

If He Can Get Around International Law He'll Find It Easy to Raise Fighting Company in Plainfield.

Patriotic Italians to the number of 250 were thrilled at Saengerbund Hall last night by tableaux depicting scenes at "the front." Groups showing the march of the Italian troops on Tripoli, skirmishes, battles, and Red Cross work stirred the audience to ardent applause.

The entertainment was arranged by a group of Italians anxious to stir their compatriots to a proper pitch of enthusiasm against the time when contributions to the Italian Red Cross and other funds will be sought.

The program included songs, in both English and Italian, by Erick Veng, Dornadio and Merlino Company. Dramatic sketches were presented. One of the latter, "Mr. Carlo in the Closet," was included to relieve the sustained jingo note.

Ralph Mathews, one of those prominent in arranging the entertainment, said today that its effect had been to rouse the Plainfield Italians to a remarkable pitch of patriotism. He knew it would be against international law to do anything of the sort, he said, but he was sure that if an Italian recruiting sergeant could open an office here he'd get a fine company of fighting men.

Mr. Mathews is head of the company of amateurs who presented the tableaux. He said the organization, known as The Variety Company, will be continued as long as there is demand for its delineation of the tragic, the patriotic or the humorous.

ALLEGED EMBEZZLER ARRESTED BY FLYNN

William Alexander, of Cottage place, was held under $200 bail to await the action or the Union County Grand Jury by Judge William G. DeMeza in the city court this morning on the charge of embezzlement preferred by Theodore Martin, an expressman. Alexander, while a driver for Mr. Martin last February was sent to New York with a load of furniture. After making delivery and collecting the charges, $20, it is alleged, he abandoned the team and van and has been missing since.

An invitation to spend Christmas with friends here was too strong to be refused by him. Once again here he was recognized by Detective Sergeant Flynn and his arrest followed. Failure to secure a bondsman by this evening will cause his imprisonment in the county jail until spring when his case will be considered by the grand jury.

MRS. MABEL BARTON GRANTED A DIVORCE

Mrs. Mabel C. Barton has been granted by the Court of Chancery a final decree in her divorce suit from her husband, Louis O. Barton. The decree was entered last July. Mr. Barton resided in this city for several years, at first being a law student in the office of the late Craig A. Marsh. After he was admitted to the Bar, he practiced here for a time and then opened an office in Elizabeth and later in Newark. He was a member of the vested choir of the Holy Cross church. It was after his admision to the Bar that he suddenly disappeared from this city.

Debbie, eight sisters and four brothers.

HEAR A PROTEST

State Health Board Listens to Objections to Sewage Plant's Enlargement.

WANT DECISION DEFERRED.

Local Board of Health and Chamber of Commerce Also Want No Immediate Action Taken By State Board.

Both Plainfield and Dunellen were largely represented by interested citizens at the hearing before the State Board of Health at Trenton this morning on the protest to the request of the Common Council that the State Board approve the city's plans for the enlargement and improvement of the sewage disposal plant, all of which is familiar to the citizens of Plainfield.

Among the citizens of Dunellen who spoke in protest to the approval of the plans were Dr. T. J. Hogan, Lewis T. Churchill, A. J. Hamley, F. B. Baermore and Nomer Gray. They all urged the State Board of Health to defer action in the matter for at least six months, giving sufficient time for a consideration of trunk sewer plans. Mr. Gray presented a petition, the signers representing an aggregate property value of $6,000,000, which he said would be sent to the meeting of the Plainfield Council tomorrow night, protesting against any action at present.

The argument was made that the present sewage plant is a menace to Dunellen and any enlargement of it would only increase the danger to life and health. Mr. Baermore asserted that a bill would be introduced in the Legislature early next year providing for a trunk sewer through the valley which would permit the sewering of Scotch Plains, Fanwood, Plainfield, Dunellen and other adjoining towns. The idea would be to secure State aid in the building of this trunk sewer which would solve a difficult problem.

Although the Common Council was represented at the hearing, Street Commissioner A. J. Gavett and George W. Fuller, the special engineer who drafted the new plans for the enlargement of the local sewage system, were the only ones who spoke. Of course, they argued for favorable action on the part of the State Board of Health. They stated that the present plant is overloaded and something must be done at once to relieve the situation. They did not express themselves as being opposed to a trunk sewer, such as was proposed by the Dunellen citizens, in fact they said that they would not oppose such a plan, but they impressed upon the State Board the necessity of immediate action.

John H. Capstick, president of the State Board of Health, at the conclusion of the hearing, informed those present that careful consideration would be given to the arguments both pro and con, and that a decision would be announced at a later date. He added that all parties would be treated with the utmost fairness, realizing the importance of the question to be decided.

The board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce last night passed a resolution asking the State Board of Health to defer action on the plans submitted today for consideration. This resolution was forwarded as a night letter in order to be received in time for today's session. The directors also stated that the reason for the request to defer action was to allow time for the citizens to meet and discuss other plans.

Prior to the passage of the resolution there was a lengthy discussion on the problem of sewage disposal and after the meeting of the directors the special financial committee held an executive meeting.

At a meeting of the Board of Health held yesterday, resolutions were adopted urging the State Board of Health not to grant permission to enlarge the sewer beds until the members satisfied themselves that such enlargement would not cause a nuisance to surrounding properties, and until they were satisfied that such enlargement would provide sufficient sewage facilities for Plainfield for sufficiently long time.

The substance of this resolution was telegraphed to the State Board of Health in time for its meeting today.

WESTFIELD.

A box containing $15 worth of candy was stolen from Louis Dughi's wagon, Saturday afternoon, as the wagon was standing on Prospect street, near Broad, Westfield. An unidentified man walked up to the wagon, and before any of a number of persons nearby noticed he was not one of Dughi's employes he took a large box out of the wagon and disappeared in the alley way at the rear of the store and succeeded in getting away without being recognized.

SHIELDS HER LOVER WITH HER OWN BODY

While attempting to rescue Foreman Henry Nelson of the Milbury Atlantic Manufacturing Company, of Hamilton street, Rahway, Monday afternoon from an infuriated Italian, George C. Ramsaier, of 339 East Twentieth street, New York, and his sweetheart, Miss Bettie Bohen, of 194 First avenue, New York, narrowly escaped being shot.

Nelson had some difficulty over the work of Nicholas Larcira, 43 years old, of 199 Main street, Rahway, and discharged him. Monday after drinking considerably, Larcira started out to hunt up Nelson and get even for being discharged. He met him in Milton avenue, near Fulton street, and immediately started a fracas by knocking Nelson down and starting to pummel him. Ramsaier, who, with Miss Bohen, was waiting for a Perth Amboy car near by, went to Mr. Nelson's assistance, pulling Larcira from his vicitim.

Seeing that his man had escaped, Larcira turned on Ramsaier and drew a .38-calibre revolver and pointed it at the latter's breast. Miss Bohen promptly jumped in front of her lover and shielded him with her body. Larcira pulled the trigger, but he had turned the revolver cylinder the wrong way and the hammer struck an exploded shell so that the weapon missed fire. A struggle for the possession of the revolver ensued.

Larcira was arrested. He was held for the grand jury Monday night by Police Judge John J. Buckley.

N. J. DIVORCE DECREE NOT VALID IN CANADA.

Montreal, Dec. 27.—A divorce claimed to have been obtained in the State of New Jersey did not count for much with Justice Charbonneu, when considering the case of Dame Caroline Frances Smith, who brought an action against her husband, Henry Charles Cornish, for support for herself and children.

In her declaration she stated that they were married in West Ham, England, in October, 1886, and lived happily together for several years, during which time several children were born. Two years ago Cornish left for parts unknown. She has discovered that he is in Montreal carrying on business which is bringing him $3,000 a year. She asked $50 monthly for maintenance.

The defendant pleaded that his wife deserted him three years ago, and that on January 10, when a resident of the United States, he obtained a divorce from his wife in the New Jersey courts, and this divorce freed him from all obligations and liabilities. He had furthermore always been willing to support his children and to have them brought to Canada.

Justice Charbonneau held that Cornish had failed to prove his plea, and ordered him to pay his wife $50 a month for twelve months, and costs.

SOLDIER WEDS DURING TRAIN HALT AT DEPOT.

Ogden, Utah, Dec. 27.—While his train changed engines here Monday Benjamin J. Garr, private Fifteenth United States Infantry, was married to Miss Laura Lund, of Ogden. Two minutes after the wedding ceremony Garr boarded a train and started alone for the Philippines to join his regiment.

The order to report immediately came to Garr when recruiting in the East. Rather than postpone marriage for two years, the term of his enlistment, he arranged by telegraph to have his fiancee and a minister at the depot when his train passed through Ogden.

The vows were spoken in the presence of fifty army recruits in the Union Depot.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS.

Although John Kean is presumably out of politics, his New Year's reception at the handsome old Colonial homestead at Ursino, near Elizabeth, will be a feature of the first day of the year this winter as usual. It will be curious to see who will visit Mr. Kean this year, as heretofore his visitors have been composed, to a large extent, of politicians, great and small, and "hangers on" without limit. Many of his New Year's callers have been men who had political favors to ask, or who expected some recognition at his hands. This year it will be a test of real friendship, and perhaps the former Senator will have a better notion as to the actual number of his real friends by the time the first day of the new year is over. Former Senator Kean will vie with General D. F. Collins, who will probably have "open house" this year, as he did last. There was a time when former Congressman Charles N. Fowler had a throng of visitors stop at his house on January 1st to wish him a "Happy New Year," but that was when he was regarded as a United States Senatorial possibility.—Sunday Call.

ONE MILLBURN JUSTICE CRITICIZED BY ANOTHER.

Asked by the Millburn police to try the case of Antonio Cattullo, of Elm street, that place, arrested Monday night for carrying a concealed weapon, Justice of the Peace William A. Hackelton, of Milburn, criticized Police Judge William E. Summers for refusing to sit in the case. Cattullo was held by Hackelton in $500 bail for the grand jury.

Cattullo was arrested in Mechanic street, Milburn, about 8:30 o'clock, by Policeman Robert Wright. A revolver was found in the man's pocket and he was taken to the lock-up. Wright called Summers on the 'phone to tell the magistrate about the arrest, so that the latter would be prepared to give Cattullo a hearing yesterday morning.

Summers, it is said, told Wright to get Hackelton to try the case as he had to appear in the courthouse, Newark, on a liquor license case.

Police Chief Storey asked Hackelton to try the case, which the latter consented to do. When he arrived at the jail and learned the circumstances, he said:

"I don't like the idea of playing second fiddle in police matters. Mr. Summers said he could not try the case, but he could have officiated if he wanted to. The law states that a police judge shall hold court at 9 o'clock in the morning. The fact that he had to go to Newark was no excuse at all for Summers to offer."

ONLY TEN YEARS MORE OF CHRISTMAS TURKEY.

Unless something is done to rehabilitate turkey growing there will be no such thing as Christmas or Thanksgiving turkeys in the United States within ten years.

The census bureau has issued a bulletin, showing that in 1910 there were only 3,668,708 turkeys on farms in this country, while in 1900 there were 6,594,095. At this rate the turkey will be in the dodo class by 1920.

There was also a reduction of about fifty per cent. in ducks during the ten years, and the number of geese dropped considerably. Chickens increased, however, the total for the country going from 233,566,021 in 1900 to 280,345,133 in 1910.

the Trust Company has developed a high degree of efficiency.

The number of Court appointments of Trust Companies as receivers for insolvent commercial and industrial concerns is constantly increasing.

The facilities, powers and experience of the Trust Company enables it to provide a management for such concerns, which frequently results in placing the business on its feet again, while in any event its service is apt to be rendered more economically than any individual's could be.

LOCAL PINNERS' PLACES IN ELKS' N. J. LEAGUE.

The fight for the first six places in the Elks' League is attracting the attention of bowling enthusiasts. At the present time two teams are tied for first, two for third and two for fifth places. The Elizabeth and New York wood topplers are on even terms for first place with eleven victories and four defeats, while the locals and Rutherfords are tied for third honors with ten wins and five defeats. The tie for fifth place is between New Brunswick and Hoboken teams, each having won seven and lost five games.

Starr, of the New York quintet, is showing the way in the race for individual honors with 201.10 average for twelve games. Miller, of the Hoboken team, is second, and Hirsh, of the champion New Brunswick quintet, third. The Plainfield pinners stand as follows: Campbell, sixth with an average of 186.6; Kiely, fifteenth, 182.2; Blatz, twenty-fifth, 178.8; Nash, twenty-sixth, 178.7; Stout, forty-first, 170.1; Pope, fifty-second, 162.5; Laing, sixty-third, 148.4.

POP ANSON SAVES TWO BOYS FROM DROWNING.

Chicago, Dec. 27.—Adrian S. ("Cap") Anson, veteran of the baseball diamond, saved two young boys from drowning in a lagoon at Jackson Park Monday afternoon. Anson was playing golf when he saw the two boys break through the thin ice of the lagoon and sink from sight. Plunging into the lagoon. Anson rescued and swam to short with one boy at a time. While making his two trips into the icy water, Anson was severely chilled, but said he expected no bad effects from the exposure.

FROM PRIZE RING TO PULPIT IS YOUNG'S JUMP.

Laporte, Ind., Dec. 27.—From prize ring to pulpit will be the unusual career of Eddie Young, former lightweight boxer of the Pacific coast, who returned to his home at Columbus, Ind., yesterday after an absence of almost a decade. Young is a protege of Evangelist Billy Sunday.

Ty Cobb Outpoints Ketchell.

Ty Cobb, of Philadelphia, outpointed Young Ketchell in a fast ten-round bout at the Mount Vernon Athletic Club last night. Cobb's showing toward the end of the bout was better than that of his opponent, although the White Plains boy held his own in the early rounds. Cobb used a left jab effectively, and time and again in the final rounds shot it through Ketchell's defense. The bout was full of action, and both boxers landed clean, snappy punches. There was little clinching, and the followers of both contestants were out in full force rooting for their favorites.

No Johnson-Flynn Fight.

Salt Lake City, Utah, Dec. 27.—Jack Curley, manager of Jim Flynn, the Pueblo fireman, emphatically denied Monday night the report that he had challenged Champion Jack Johnson on behalf of his protege. Curley also ventured the opinion that Johnson's demand for $30,000, win, lose or draw, in a match with Flynn was exorbitant, and that he doubted whether any promoter would offer a purse on such conditions.

FOR AUTO OWNERS' BENEFIT.

For the purpose of caring for the welfare of automobilists, the League of American Motorists, with a capital stock of $10,000, filed a certificate of incorporation in Trenton yesterday. The incorporators are Harry N. Goldsmith and S. Leon Ganz, Philadelphia, and Frank Voigt, Camden.

The concern was incorporated to aid in the establishment and maintenance of a uniform system of laws relating to the regulation and use of automobiles and rights and privileges of the owners to promote the construction and maintenance of good roads and improvements of highways, and to secure hotel accommodations for automobilists.

For District Superintendent.

Rev. Dr. James W. Marshall, pastor of the First M. E. church of New Brunswick, is among the ministers in the New Jersey Conference whose name is being considered as a possible successor to Rev. N. J. Wright, district superintendent of the Bridgeton District. Mr. Wright's term expires at the coming session of the conference, which meets at Asbury Park next spring. Dr. Marshall is finishing his second year as pastor at the First church. Another name suggested is that of Rev. Edward R. Brunyate, pastor of the Ocean City M. E. church, who is now on his fourth year there.

"He has a remarkable gift of self-concentration, I am told."

THE FORUM.

THE OVERSEER QUESTION.

Editor, The Daily Press:

Your article on the overseer question in yesterday's issue side-steps the real question involved. That question, fairly and squarely put, is, Shall the city run its poor department as a city department in accordance with the laws, or shall that department be turned over to Charity Organization Society interests to be run in accordance with those interests' ideas? No verbal gold dust, such as "the rising tide of intelligent and determined public sentiment," "right leadership," "poverty is a curable disease," "best methods of conservation and scientific management," "the greatest forward step of the new century," and such what not, should be thrown into the eyes of the people to blind them to the real issue involved.

The new law about which so much is predicted has already been in operation since July 1. Has the present overseer failed to fulfill the duties incumbent upon him under that law? The testimony of the article is to the effect that he has not. The fact that Mr. DeForest wants him as assistant and is willing to turn over to him the entire salary of the overseer and more out of his own pocket speaks most strongly as to Mr. Ayers' worth to the city. But the new law does not provide for assistants except in cities of the first class, and then they are to be appointed by the governing body. True, there was a law passed in 1910 (P. L. 1910, Chapter 34, page 50) which provides that, "In cities of the second class the overseer of the poor may employ an assistant, who shall be authorized to perform the duties of the overseer of the poor during his temporary absence or incapacity, and who shall be paid for his services by said overseer of the poor." For which causes mentioned in the law, absence or incapacity, does Mr. DeForest expect to 'qualitfy to appoint an assistant? If incapable, why should the Council choose Mr. DeForest; if he is knowingly to be absent for a sufficient part of the time as to necessitate the appointment of an assistant, would it be good policy to choose him?

The law contemplates that the overseer shall give his entire time to his job. Does any one have an idea that Mr. DeForest is going to give up his law practice in New York to take an $800 position in the City of Plainfield and then appoint an assistant and give him the $800 and more besides?

Why try to hide the real issue involved in this matter? Why not have the contest decided fairly on its merits? Shall the poor law be administered by the city according to the intent of the law, or shall it be administered with all the latest isms attached by the interests back of the Charity Organization Society?

Respectfully,
W. S. ANGLEMAN.

BAPTISTS ARE RICHER BY QUARTER MILLION

A campaign by the Baptists to raise $250,000 by Christmas ended successfully, it was announced at the headquarters in New York last night. It will be Friday or Saturday before the full data will be ready. The Rev. Dr. E. T. Tomlinson, of Elizabeth, the Rev. Dr. Henry L. Morehouse, and other Baptist leaders who had charge of the campaign were receiving congratulations yesterday.

The campaign was started in October by the offer of $50,000 on condition that others give $200,000 by Christmas Day. The maker of the offer said he would not extend the time. The purpose of the fund is to help aged ministers. There have long been State agencies, but this was the first of the Northern Baptist Convention, a body representing many States. In the list of beneficiaries missionaries are included as well as ministers. The $250,000 is the first of a fund of $1,000,000 which it is hoped to raise within a few years for this purpose. Speaking of it the Rev. Dr. Tomlinson said last night::

"While most of the money was secured in the East, the West did nobly. I want to say that Baptists, as a whole, gave this $200,000. There were no large gifts. Many people had part in it. Great credit is due the Rev. Dr. Henry L. Morehouse for his part in it. We are all happy tonight."

The part of the Rev. Dr. Morehouse was a gift of $10,000 if needed to meet the conditions. The giver is one of the best-known home mission secretaries in America, and the gift represents the savings of a life-time. It was said Monday that many were disinclined to accept the money unless needed.

KAMPF PRESIDENT OF TIMBO SOCIAL CLUB.

The Timbo Social Club elected and installed the following officers for the ensuing year last night: President, R. P. Kampf; vice president, T. J. LaRue; secretary, Archibald Davie; treasurer, Albert Wagner; trustee for three years, Frank Schuck. The reports of the secretary and treasurer were received and showed that the organization is in a flourishing condition. On assuming the chair, Mr. Kampf thanked the members for the honor conferred and asked for cooperation during the coming year. Following the installation and business session a social time was had and refreshments were served.

Miss Helen Harrington, a student at Dana Hall, Wellesley, Mass., is spending the Christmas vacation at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Harrington, of Central avenue.

COLD WAVE COMING TOMORROW SAYS W.B.

Colder weather is on the way, according to the weather bureau experts. The drop is expected tomorrow. The mercury in Alaska yesterday stood at 52 degrees below zero. In Northwestern Canada it was 28 below. Zero weather prevailed all over the Dakotas, down through Nebraska, Kansas, and even to the northern parts of New Mexico and Arizona. Through the Mississippi Valley there is a wide area of storm and disturbed atmospheric conditions.

Under these circumstances, the New York Weather Bureau figures that today will probably be as warm as the days that have just passed, but add ominously, that by tomorrow night it will be cold, very cold perhaps, and that when the figures come to be averaged up December, 1911, will not stand at the top of the warm Decembers of history.

DRIFTED THREE HOURS WITH CAPSIZED BOAT.

Henry Santer, caretaker on Buckwheat Island, off Elizabethport, was landed at Perth Amboy Monday night by Captain James Goodlow of the towboat Grace Keller. Santer was picked up off Tremley Point after drifting more than three hours clinging to his capsized bateau. He was capsized in attempting to row from Elizabethport to the island. Santer was cared for at police headquarters all night and at 7 o'clock yesterday morning he got into his boat to row back up the sound to Buckwheat Island, little the worse for his experience.

BIG VERDICT AWARDED TO WIDOW AND BABY.

Two-month-old Cornelius McMullen and his mother, Mrs. Margaret McMullen, of New Brunswick, recovered a verdict of $9,500 against the American Smelting and Refining Company of Perth Amboy Friday night. Some of the jurors, it is said, wanted to award a $15,000 verdict.

Cornelius McMullen, the baby's father, was killed last April in an accident at the defendant company's plant. He was crushed between two freight cars.

P. O. S. of A. Elects.

Washington Camp, No. 30, Patriotic Order Sons of America, elected these officers at its meeting, last night: Past President, G. H. Couch; president, E. J. Smith; vice-president, B. L. Wilson; master forms, Edward Dunham; financial secretary, W. D. W. Williams; treasurer, Theodore VanPelt; conductor, E. J. Ayers; inspector, E. D. GaNun; guard, Charles Trotter; trustee, 18 months, B. L. Wilson. The officers will be installed in January.

STOLEN PURSE STORY. COLORED WOMEN'S YARN.

Investigation made by the police yesterday of the complaint made by Mrs. Clifford Hoffman, colored, of South Second street, that a man snatched her pocketbook while she was walking under the Liberty street railroad bridge on Monday night, disclosed the fact, the police say, that she had had a quarrel with some one whose name she refuses to divulge and that in the scuffle the hand bag had been lost. It was found almost directly in front of her home yesterday with the contents, including the $1.50 in money, undisturbed.

When Mrs. Hoffman first reported the alleged theft, she said that a man had grabbed her hand bag and made off so quickly that she could not tell whether he was white or colored. Further questioning elicited no more definite information, but aroused the suspicion that she was concealing something. Later she declared she had found the purse and then refused to answer all further questions.

FRUITARIAN HATS.

The humanitarians will be particularly pleased with one of the most successful ideas in millinery that has been developed this season. Plumes and feathers can well give way to what may be termed the "fruitarian" millinery in which every fruit of nature is pressed into the service of trimming.

Frankly, there is often scant resemblance to the real thing, and a cynic may detect little difference between a bunch of apples and tomatoes, but to the woman who loves variety and change the success of this millinery lies in the fact that the artificial coloring of the fruit has been brought to a pitch of high artistic excellence, and she may remark with truth that after all the color and not the form is the most important thing in the accessories of millinery.

Red, cerise and yellow are the three most prominent shades in the fruitarian trimming, and these are employed in peaches, apples, oranges, plums, small melons, and even grapes.

As berries may come under the nomenclature of fruit, it ma yalso be mentioned that some of the most charming hats show red berries that may be taken either for strawberries or cherries. Strings and clusters of these vivid cerise or red berries dangle coquettishly over the brim in front or are laid gracefully in picturesque wreaths round the crown, giving a vivid glow of color to an all white or an all-black hat.

This fruitarian trimming is especially successfully when employed in conjunction with the striped ribbon bows that are now so much used.

Dry Cleaning

like everything else, is cheapest when you get the best, for your garments are cleaned and pressed better—and therefore the work lasts longer and is better for your clothing or household furnishings.

Besides a saving, good cleaning is sanitary. Since this is so, get the best, for handwork in small tubs is sure to carry some dirt along from other clothing belonging to other people.

You don't experience anything of that nature in a first-class place.

Harper Smith Dead.

After signing several checks as Christmas presents for his servants, J. Harper Smith, a seventy-seven-year-old retired woolen manufacturer, died suddenly at his home in Altmont place, Somerville, Monday. Mr. Smith had been ill with Bright's disease for a long time. He had just drawn his last check and presented it to his housekeeper, when he arose from his desk and placed his hand over his heart. He staggered across the room to where his wife was seated and died in her arms.

KEEP THE KIDNEYS WELL.

Health is Worth Saving, and Some Plainfield People Know How to Save it.

Many Plainfield people take their lives in their hands by neglecting the kidneys when they know these organs need help. Sick kidneys are responsible for a vast amount of suffering and ill health—the slightest delay is dangerous. Use Doan's Kidney Pills—a remedy that has cured thousands of kidney sufferers. Here is a Plainfield citizen's recommendation.

Mrs. Margaret Reville, 732 West Third street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "For a long time I was troubled by lame and weak back and I never found anything that would help me until I got Doan's Kidney Pills from Randolph's Drug Store. My back was so painful and sore that I dreaded to stoop and whenever I caught cold or exerted myself, I suffered more severely. I tried several kidney remdies but it was lft for Doan's Kidney Pills, which I obtained at Randolph's Drug Store, to cure me. They are certainly a most effective preparation for kidney trouble."

Frank McEntee, who will be seen at the Plainfield theatre Thursday, January 4, has a great desire to present the whole play of "Hamlet," word for word. He directed such a performance in conjunction with Ben Greet in the mammoth Greek theatre at the University of California six years ago. It required over five hours, without change of scene. The play was divided into two parts; the first two acts given in the morning and the last three in the afternoon. Critics all along the Pacific slope proclaimed it to be the most remarkable representation of a great tragedy ever witnessed in this country.

May Irwin's seasons grow shorter each year. She is a woman of independent means and a lover of home. Perhaps there is no other person in public life, at least on the stage, whose interest in domestic matters is as great as May Irwin's These are the main reasons why the popular comedienne spends comparatively little time in professional service. This season she is acting in a new comedy of satire, called "She Knows Better Now," written by Agnes Crimmins, of Boston, a new comer in the field of dramatic writing. Miss Irwin will be seen in this city in the new comedy on January 5.

FOUR BAYONNE YOUTHS WERE STRANDED HERE.

Four youths, Thomas Bradley, James Dowd, William Dougherty and Joseph McNamara, averaging ten years in age, applied to Captain Frederickson at police headquarters last night for assistance in reaching their homes in Bayonne. They started out yesterday morning under the guidance of Dougherty to visit his aunt in this city, who had but fifty cents when he said he would take his chums on an outing. On arriving here his money was all gone and then he learned that his aunt did not reside in Plainfield.

McNamara's mother and Dougherty's father came on in response to a telephone call and took their sons home. The other two boys were sent home this afternoon.

Thomas Fay, formerly a local resident, is spending the holidays with his daughter, Mrs. William Waglow, of East Fifth street. Mr. Fay lost the sight of his left eye in an accident two months ago and was recently discharged from the Newark Eye and Ear Hospital.

Spain's Free and Easy Railways.

An idea of the free and easy methods of the railways in Spain is given in this incident, related by Henry A. Franck in "Four Months Afoot in Spain:"

When I reached the station next morning the platform gate was locked and the train I had hoped to take was legally departed. A railway hanger on in rags and hemp sandals, however, climbed the iron picket fence and shouted a word to the engineer. Then, beckoning to me to follow, he trotted back into the building and rapped authoritatively on the closed window of the ticket office.

"Senor," he said as the agent looked out upon us, "be kind enough to sell this caballero a ticket."

"The train is gone," answered the agent.

"Not so, senor," replied the bundle of rags haughtily. "I am having it held that this cavalier may take it."

"Ah, very well," responded the official, and, having sold me the ticket, he handed to the hanger on the key to the platform gate. As I passed through it the latter held out his hand, into which I dropped a copper.

"Muchisimas gracias, caballero," he said, bowing profoundly, "and may your grace forever travel with God."

Germs In the Teeth.

Everybody knows in a general way how important it is to give the teeth a good cleaning and to rinse the mouth out first thing in the morning. The object, of course, is to remove the accumulation of bacteria which gathers on the teeth, gums, tongue and palate during the hours of sleep. How many germs do you suppose accumulate during the night's sleep? In answer to this question E. C. Bousfield, writing in the London Lancet, gives some interesting and rather startling figures, which are worth quoting. He states that he has found the mouth on waking in the morning to obtain about 3,000,000,000 bacteria capable of being removed by a fivefold rinsing with twenty-five cubic centimeters of water each time. After ordinary washing of the teeth with a hard toothbrush about one-fourth the number could still be rinsed away. After using tooth paste only 120,000,000 were left.

Gorillas.

At present there is not a live gorilla in America. There have never been more than three, and only one of these lived more than a few weeks.

"I would give $10,000 for a gorilla in good condition," said the superintendent of a noted zoological garden, "and we could get the money back in a few months owing to the crowds of people who would come to see it. A gorilla would be a great drawing card, but gorillas cannot be got for money. They grow sometimes to 400 pounds in weight. Their home is a small strip of marshy land on the west coast of Africa. The strip is perhaps 250 miles long and 100 miles deep, and the gorillas stay back from the coast and are hard to get. Once out of their native element they die from climatic changes and lack of proper food."—Detroit Free Press.

Caste In Music.

"Sometimes it is a disadvantage to have a musician with a reputation at the head of a hotel orchestra," said a hotel manager. "We found this out not long ago, when people from the middle west, who are among our best patrons, wanted our orchestra to play at a wedding in which they were interested and which took place in a private house. As the company got a little warmed up they decided they would have some dancing, so the hostess asked the orchestra leader to play. Would he? Not on your life. He was an artist, he was, and it was not his business to descend to playing for dances. The result was that one of the guests had to play the piano, and we almost lost the trade of the family we were trying to be especially nice to."—New York Sun.

Heine Made Goethe Smile.

When I visited Goethe, in Weimar, and stood before him, I involuntarily glanced at his side to see whether the eagle was not there with the lightning in his beak. I was nearly speaking Greek to him; but, as I observed that he understood German, I stated to him in German that the plums on the road between Jena and Weimar were very good. I had for so many long winter nights thought over what lofty and profound things I would say to Goethe if ever I saw him. And when I saw him at last I said to him that the Saxon plums were very good! And Goethe smiled.—Heinrich Heine, "Reisebilder."

The Advantage of Waiting.

Her Father—But, my boy, surely you are too young to marry Aurelia. How old are you? Her Suitor—One and twenty, sir. Her Father—And she is twenty-seven—too great a disparity. Why not wait half a dozen years? Then you'll be twenty-seven and she'll probably be just about the same age as you.

High Life.

"Is it meet and proper that you eat your heart out so?"

She did not answer.

"Dear heart!" he whispered intensely.

Then she lifted her eye tearfully to his. "Everything to eat is dear, these days!" she faltered brokenly.—Puck.

Deadlocked.

He—I am willing to make concessions. His Wife—Really! He—Yes, but it seems impossible to make the supply meet the demand.—Boston Transcript.

FOREIGNERS HEAD CRIME LIST, REPORT

Trenton, Dec. 27.—The State's penal, correctional and charitable institutions are discussed in the annual report of Rev. George B. Wight, State commissioner of charities and corrections, submitted yesterday to Governor Wilson.

The report shows that the appropriations totaled $2,573,790.70, which is more than $1 for every man, woman and child in the State, as shown by the census of last year. These figures were made up of $1,823,651.97 for maintenance, $712,447.73 for permanent improvements at State institutions and $37,691 for the operation of allied departments, such as the State Board of Children's Guardians. These figures do not include any moneys paid out by counties, cities and other municipalities, except in a single instance. That instance is the appropriation by the State of $291,400 to counties that have institutions of their own for the care of the insane.

Weekly per capita figures are as follows: State Hospital for the Insane at Trenton, $4.67; State Hospital for the Insane at Morris Plains, $4.84; State Village for Epileptics, $6.21; State Home for Feeble-minded Women, $3.65; Training School for Colored Youths at Bordentown, $4.38; Tuberculosis Sanatorium at Glen Gardner, $9.20; Soldiers' Home at Vineland, $3.53; Soldiers' Home at Kearney, $3.82; State Prison, $1.74; Rahway Reformatory, $5.76; State Home for Girls, $6.57; State Home for Boys at Jamesburg, $1.68.

In giving the nativity of the 1,420 inmates at the State Prison Dr. Wight says 355 are natives of New Jersey, 522 natives of other States and 543 of foreign birth.

SLAYER HACKED TO BITS BY ANGRY MOB.

Baltimore, Dec. 27.—King Davis, a negro, who Saturday night shot and killed Frederick A. Schwab, a white man, at Fairfield, was taken from the Brooklyn (Md) jail Monday and killed by a mob. Davis was chopped to death with hatchets. His body was frightfully mutilated.

The lynching was conducted with secrecy, the town authorities having no inkling of it until Chief of Police Irwin was notified by a newspaper carrier, who discovered the body of the negro in the rear of the lockup as he was delivering his papers early yesterday.

No guard is kept at the jail at night, and there is as yet no clue to the perpetrators of the deed. The front door of the jail had been burst open and the lock had been cut off the door of the cell in which Davis was confined.

The trouble which caused the shooting of Schwab started in a saloon at Fairfield over a game of pool between Frank Schwab, a brother of the dead man, and Davis. Schwab declared the negro called him vile names.

After the party left the saloon Frederick Schwab took up his brother's quarrel with Davis, who drew his pistol and sent a bullet through Schwab's heart, killing him instantly. Davis then fired two shots at Frank Schwab, without effect, and fled, but was arrested an hour later. He said that he shot in self-defense, declaring Frederick Schwab had struck him.

IN BIDDING MOTHER "MERRY XMAS," WARS WITH FATHER.

When Paul Phillips, jr., of 333 Bond street, Elizabeth, went to the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Phillips, of 453 Bond street, to wish his mother a "Merry Christmas," he alleges that his father applied vile epithets to him and that as a result of the altercation that followed he was obliged to strike his parent. The father had his son arrested and most of the family was in police court Monday.

Paul claims that his father persecutes him because he recently got married. A younger son testified in court that his father was about to attack Paul with a knife when the latter called Monday and that the son was compelled to defend himself by felling his father with a piece of wood and taking the knife from him. Judge Mahon discharged the young man.

STIPULATION DEFINES SADLER OUSTER ISSUE.

The stipulations in the qou warranto proceedings by which former Adjutant-General R. Heber Brientnall seeks to oust Wilbur F. Sadler, Jr., from the office of adjutant-general was filed with the Supreme Court yesterday. It states that the cause, which will be heard by Justice Garrison, sitting for the court, shall be tried upon the issue of whether, at the time of the assumption by General Sadler of the duties of the office, such office was vacant, for any of the following reasons:

"By voluntary retirement of Brientnall, by the compulsory retirement of Brientnall, or by the nomination and appointment of Sadler to the office by Governor Fort, with the advice and consent of the Senate, and due qualification of Sadler.

SKIDDING MACHINE KILLS AUTO OWNER

Lake Hopatcong, Dec. 27.—The skidding of an automobile on Brown's bridge, between Hopatcong and the culvert to Netcong, was responsible early Monday morning for the death of Edward South, 33 years old, proprietor of a garage in Chester. In the machine with South was William Perry, a conductor of the New Jersey Central Railroad, who was slightly hurt. South's neck was broken.

Perry was anxious to get from Landing to Ledgewood early Tuesday morning, in order that he might catch a train that would allow him to report for duty in time. South offered to take him to the railroad station and they started away soon after 6 o'clock.

At Shippenport there is a sharp turn in the road just before the bridge over the canal is reached. Here the machine, which was going at a good rate of speed, skidded in the mud. South's effort to hold the auto to the road was in vain.

The machine struck the bridge with a crash, throwing South against the framework of the structure. His neck was broken and his body pitched forward into the canal.

Perry, who was slightly hurt, managed to get assistance and soon South's body was removed from the stream. A local undertaker prepared it for shipment to South's home.

Perry cannot account for his escape from serious injury. The machine was almost a total wreck.

ANNOUNCE BREAKING UP OF BROWN-STRYKER TROTH.

The announcement of the breaking of the marriage engagement of Miss Jennie S. Stryker, only child of Prosecutor and Mrs. William A. Stryker, of Washington, N. J., and Creed H. Brown, of San Francisco, came as a surprise, as it was generally understood that Mr. Brown came Wednesday to claim his bride, and the wedding was scheduled so the couple would start for California on Thursday. When the breaking of the marriage agreement was made public Mr. Brown had started upon his westward trip alone. Miss Stryker is a graduate of Chevy Chase College and Mr. Brown is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania. The young people became acquainted at a social function given by Chevy Chase College.

The marriage engagement was announced by the parents about a year ago. Since then the young people had not seen each other until Mr. Brown arrived Wednesday to claim his bride. Mr. Brown is an only son. His father is a clerk of the United States Court in San Francisco.

In the new history of Warren county, recently published, there is this statement in connection with Mr. Stryker's biography: "Mr. and Mrs. William A. Stryker have one daughter, Jennie, the wife of Creed H. Brown, of California." Mr. Stryker supplied the information for his family history when the compiler of the book made the canvass last summer, but it is obvious that he understood the book would not be issued until about January 1.

ODD FELLOWS' HALL IN HOBOKEN BURNED.

The loss of $100,000 was sustained by the Hoboken Odd Fellows, Free Masons, Eagles, Royal Arcanum, Foresters, Knights of Pythias and several other societies which occupied the old Odd Fellows' Hall, when the structure burned to the ground early Monday. It is believed that a cigarette thrown among a number of toys left in the building from a Christmas celebration started the blaze.

The various organizations named had charters, paraphernalia and other property in the building, all of which was destroyed.

The building was owned by the Odd Fellows' Hall Association and leased by Frederick Hagen. It was erected in 1853, and in 1891 was gutted by fire, only the walls being left standing.
larged.

Richard Stevens was to have given his annual Christmas dinner to the newsboys of Hoboken in the hall Monday afternoon. Because of the fire it was held at the Union Hill Scheutzen Park.

TOO LATE WITH HIS GOLD.

Patrick Tierney, then a clerk in the store of Thomas & Co., of Somerville, suddenly disappeared 14 years ago. After their son's disappearance his parents recalled that he had talked a great deal of going to the Alaska gold fields. Friday night Tierney returned. He went to the old homestead. His knock at the door was answered by a strange woman. He asked for Mr. and Mrs. Tierney. The strange woman told him that Michael had died five years ago and his wife about a year later.

The young man staggered back and grabbed a pillar of the portico for support. He had returned and brought with him as a Christmas present from Alaska enough gold nuggets to give his parents comfort in their old age.

GOUNOD'S TEST.

The Budding Composer Changed His Schoolmaster's Opinion.

When Gounod was at the school of one who was called the good Papa Pierson he was constantly scribbling musical notes. One day the school master sent for him into his study.

"Your parents complain," said Pierson. "They do not wish any musician in their family. You must be a professor."

"Never!"

"Your only choice is between Greek and Latin."

"But I will be a musician," said Gounod.

"You will? Give it up, I say; it is no profession at all. However, we will just see what you can do. Here's pen and paper. Compose for me a new air to Joseph's words, 'A peine au sortir de l'enfance.'"

It was the recreation hour.

Before the bell sounded for the studies to begin again Gounod came back with his paper completely covered.

"Already?" cried Pierson. "Well, sing it then!"

Gounod sang and accompanied himself and so deeply affected poor Papa Pierson that with tears he pressed him in his arms and exclaimed:

"Oh, my dear boy! Henceforth they may say what they like, but a musician you shall be and nothing else."—From the German.

LOVE'S LABOR LOST.

He Intended to Be Generous, but His Bride Thought Otherwise.

"What is the matter?" inquired her dearest friend as she was ushered into the boudoir of her newly married chum and found, instead of the vision of happiness she had expected, a disheveled heroine largely dissolved in tears. "What is the matter?"

"Algernon has gone away for a week"—

"But, my child, you don't mean to say that you are such turtle doves that you can't spare him for a week without making a scene like this?"

"Oh, no, it isn't that at all! Of course it is hard to live alone, but he has at last shown me what a monster he is."

"Why, this is shocking! What can he have done? You haven't found he was already married or"—

"No, no, no! It's only that he is a heartless, miserly creature. Only think! I asked him to leave me a check to pay for things while he was away"—

"Well, surely he didn't refuse?"

"No; worse than that—far worse! He just wanted to wound and humiliate me! He left me a check, all dated and signed, complete, except that he didn't put any amount in! Wasn't that very cruel?"—Judge.

Analysis of Laughter.

For the benefit of a melancholy world an English professor has been devoting his careful, scientific attention to laughter and has prepared an expert analysis of the whole business, according to the Providence Journal. "Laughter," he says, "is a convulsive action of the diaphragm. In this state the person draws a full breath and throws it out in interrupted, short and audible cachinnations. This convulsion of the diaphragm is the principal part of the physical manifestation of laughter, but there are several accessories, especially the sharp vocal utterance arising from the violent tension of the larynx and the expression of the features, this being a more intense form of the smile. In extreme cases the eyes are moistened by the effusion from the lachrymal glands."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Walnuts as Food.

The ancients held the walnut in high esteem. Mortals could and did exist on acorns, but walnuts were so delicious in taste and flavor, so palatable and nutritious, that they were revered as food only for the gods to dine upon. Modern investigation and modern customs have popularized the uses of the walnut to such an extent that it is now regarded not only as a luxury, but as a food of great nutritive value. A chemical analysis of the nut shows that it is six times as nutritious as meat. No vegetable or fruit, with the possible exception of the olive, can be compared with the walnut as a strength giving and fat producing food. All nuts are possessed of elements of nutrition, but the highest in rank is the walnut.—Manchester Guardian.

Strangled the Tree.

A Victoria clergyman had an orange and a pine tree in his garden. One spring it was noticed that the orange tree was drooping, and on digging down he found that the roots of the pine, which stood at some distance, had twisted around the taproot of the orange tree and were strangling it to death. The offending roots were untwisted and cut away, and the drooping plant revived. The tree eventually died. Then on digging down at a greater depth the clergyman found the pine had attacked the orange root lower down and accomplished its murderous end.—London Graphic.

He Wanted a Permanent One.

Joshua was buying a fieldglass.

"This one," said the clerk, "is just what you want. Its magnifying power is twenty-five times."

"Then," Joshua replied; "I want to use it oftener than that."—Success Magazine.

So He Rose.

An Irish M. P. once declared with great solemnity, "Mr. Speaker, I cannot sit still here and keep silent without rising and saying a few words!"—London Telegraph.

SAYS ICE CREAM IS POORLY MADE.

About ten per cent. of the 415 ice cream factories in New Jersey use satisfactory methods in the manufacture of the product, according to the annual report of George W. Maguire, chief of the department of creameries and dairies of the State Board of Health.

Mr. Maguire asserted that the manufacture of wholesale ice cream is a problem that is not at all considered by most makers, and their main object seems to be to prepare a salable article without regard to it purity. Ice cream, says Mr. Maguire, is eaten in an uncooked state and is very susceptible to contamination through careless handling. The report sets forth that of the 415 ice cream factories visited perfect methods were found in only forty. In 215 the methods were fair, in 155 poor and in four bad.

PICKED A SAFE SPOT.

He Wanted an Easy Fall if He Missed the Big Bear.

The red bear of Asia lives in lofty mountain solitudes, rarely coming below an altitude of 8,000 feet. For the greater part of the year he is content with a vegetarian diet and leads a blameless and estimable life, but in the spring he becomes mischievous, and then a man who pursues him in his native haunts must be a mountaineer as well as a hunter. The following incident from "Sport and Life In the Further Himalayas," by R. L. Kennion, illustrates the double danger.

My Gilgit stalker used to tell of a bear that was a terror to the goat herds sent to graze the village flocks in the Rakhiot glen, not only a robber, but a trucculent one, who committed his crimes in the broad light of day and cared for neither man nor dog. Gul Sher encountered him when out with T., a noted shot from among the small party of officers then at Gilgit. Behind them yawned a precipice; in front was the big beast, grunting and slavering at the mouth. They faced one another "while men could count a score," and still T. did not shoot. The bear advanced.

"Shoot!" cried Gul Sher, but T. only looked round over his shoulder. The bear came on. Then T. slowly put his rifle up and shot him dead through the head.

"And why had not T. shot him before?" I asked.

"That is what I wanted to know," the stalker said, "and he told me that be was just looking for the easiest place to go down the precipice in case the bear was not killed."

I was sitting hearing the story at the exact spot where it happened and, going to the edge, looked over. The first thing to break a fall was a green lawn of pine treetops 2,000 feet below.--Youth's Companion.

AN ANTIQUATED GUN.

"El Camilo," at West Point, a Relic of the Mexican War.

Among the old guns from past wars on Trophy point there is one that is fondly remembered by every graduate of the West Point Military academy. It is "El Camilo," literally "the camel," a relic of the Mexican war, but dating far back of that.

This antiquated piece of ordnance, which is three parts silver and painted a light green, bears its name and the royal coat of arms of Spain over an inscription relating that it was the property of the regiment of the Golden Fleece, commissioned under Ferdinand and Isabella at the time when Columbus set out on his famous voyage to discover a new world. It would be interesting to know what the Spanish grandees would have thought if they could have foreseen that the very cannon which probably thundered godspeed to the explorer would one day be captured by the unborn nation of the undiscovered continent to which Columbus was bound. The ancient gun was probably carried to Mexico as part of the armament of a Spanish ship and many years later was pressed into service in the Mexican army, where the "sinews of war" were always at a premium. It was taken at Monterey by the Americans and sent to West Point as the most appropriate place for such an interesting relic.—New York Press.

Tax on Bachelordom.

During the period under William III. when bachelordom was taxed peers had to pay more dearly than commoners for the privilege of single bliss. The yearly tax levied on bachelors ranged from £12 11s. in the case of dukes and archbishops down to 1 shilling in the case of those scheduled as "other persons." Furthermore, a duke was compelled to pay £50 when he married, £30 when his eldest son was born, £25 when every younger son was born, £30 when his eldest son was married, £50 when his wife was buried and £30 when his eldest son was buried. And the other members of the peerage had to pay similar taxes graduated according to their rank.—London Chronicle.

An Economic Suggestion.

Gladys—Tommy Tightwad is the meanest man I've ever encountered. Gwendolyn — What has he done? Gladys—He's engaged to Tilly Tilton, you know. It appears that he picked up a ring at a bargain sale and had the nerve to offer it as an engagement ring. It was much too small for her finger. What do you suppose he suggested? Gwendolyn—What? Gladys—That she diet until she could get it on.—Detroit Free Press.

Plenty of Rest Is Necessary.

The best work, however hard, is always methodical enough to permit of timely rest and regular nutrition, and the full recognition of this fact is a mere question of public utility which we hope to see more and more widely admitted into practice.—London Lancet.

A Help When Ironing.

A floor pad of newspapers, piled two inches high or so, will be the delight of the busy ironer. One side should be covered with floor linen, the other with carpeet—the linen for summer and the carpet for winter. It is an unbelievable relief to tired feet.—Philadelphia North American.

No Time to Think.

MARRIED BESIDE BIER OF THE BRIDE'S FATHER.

Miss Carrie Amunds and Rudolph Paulson were married Monday night beside the bier of the bride's father at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Ellingson, 47 Ranklin street, Elizabeth. Those who attended the wedding were also the mourners.

Extensive preparations had been made for the wedding and the bride's father, Reinhart Amunds, was preparing to leave Binghamton, N. Y., last Wednesday night to attend the wedding ceremony of his daughter, when he stepped in front of a locomotive and was killed.

The dead body was brought to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ellingson and the wedding plans were temporarily discontinued. At the suggestion of the bride, however, the ceremony was performed.

The funeral of Mr. Amunds was largely attended. Among the mourners were many members of Elizabeth Lodge, No. 289, B. P. O. E., under whose auspices the funeral was held. The bearers were members of the Elks. They were George C. Otto, John C. W. Lammering, R. J. Quien, John Clifford, Henry Schreiber and Richard Pollatschek.

The prayer meeting at Warren chapel tonight will be a missionary service and the last one of the year.

The Willard Loyal Temperance Legion Christmas entertainment will be held in the W. C. T. U. rooms tomorrow night, instead of Friday night.

'THE MAN OF THE HOUR' NEW YEAR'S OFFERING

There is no denying the fact that one of the best liked plays on the American stage is "The Man of the Hour," which will be presented at the Plainfield theatre. "The Man of the Hour" was written by George Broadhurst, who also wrote "Bought and Paid For," now running at William A. Brady's playhouse, New York. This great political play with its "boss" Herrigan and Alderman Phalen, of the 8th, has enjoyed a long and very successful run in every large city in America. "The Man of the Hour" will be playing to delighted theatregoers when most plays running today will be forgotten. "The Man of the Hour" is the play that Colonel Theodore Roosevelt said was the best play that he had ever seen. During its long run in Washington he went twice in one week to see it.

A splendid company will be seen here at the Plainfield theatre on New Year's afternoon and night. As there is sure to be a big rush for seats it is advisable for our theatregoers to secure them as soon as they possibly can after the sale opens.

MILITANT PASTOR UP AGAINST FREEZE-OUT.

Warm as are the sermons of Rev. Carl F. W. Ahrens in denouncing those in the Westwood Calvary Baptist church who oppose him as pastor, the church needs coal just the same. J. H. Bate, treasurer, is one of the officials whom Rev. Mr. Ahrens has denounced most vigorously and Mr. Bate says as the treasury is very low he cannot give an order for the coal. Unless somebody donates fuel there may be no Christmas festival tonight.

It is said that the Baptist State convention, which gives the church financial aid, is disinclined to continue the aid as long as Rev. Mr. Ahrens is pastor. The pastor has appealed for financial pledges, explaining he is doing it for the church and not for himself, as he can get a new and better job any time he wants it.

The trouble between the pastor and a part of his flock is said to have arisen from the fact that on a salary of $20 a week he operated an automobile. In chiding his critics he referred to some of them as Benedict Arnolds and Judas Iscariots.

PRINCETON ENROLLMENT EXCEEDS ALL RECORDS.

Official figures given out yesterday by the registrar of Princeton University show that the present enrollment is greater than at any other time in the history of that institution. The total registration is 1,543, in comparison with 1,442 last year.

The biggest gains are to be found in the senior and freshman classes. The graduate school shows about the same registration as a year ago, there being a gain of only three students. The senior class has an enrollment of 312 in comparison with 246 last year, while the freshmen show a gain of fifty-five men. The 1915 class is the largest that ever entered Princeton, having an official total of 395 members.

New York still heads the list in number of students, while Pennsylvania has regained its old position of second place. Every State is represented by at least one student, and there are students there from eleven foreign countries.

Socialist Editor May Resign.

D. L. H. Ferguson, a Socialist editor of Elizabeth, may soon resign his position there to become associated with Victor L. Berger, the only Socialist in Congress. Congressman Berger plans to have Mr. Ferguson as one of his assistants in advancing the Socialistic doctrine and to take charge of a Socialist monthly publication in the District of Columbia.

Struck By Train; May Die.

HOLD TWO YOUTHS FOR SLASHING WITH RAZOR.

Mike and Frank Cozentino, aged 18 and 19, respectively, of 144 Rector street, Elizabeth, are being held at police headquarters to await the outcome of injuries they are said to have inflicted with a razor on Caspar Eihling, a baker of 654 Magnolia avenue, Elizabeth. Eihling is in such a condition that he is unable to recognize the two youths, who are said to have committed the assault in an effort to get Eihling's money.

From the story told the police by Mrs. Eihling the young men pounced upon her husband from the rear and began to slash him with a razor. Had it not been for Peter Neece and two companions the youths would have accomplished their purpose, she said.

Eihling had purchased some toys for his children and it is believed that the two assailants saw his money as he paid for them. Eihling was waiting in front of his home for his wife and children preparatory to taking them to the theatre when the assault took place. Neece and his friends so beat up Mike Cozentino that he was removed to the General Hospital. He was later taken to police headquarters with Frank Cozentino, his cousin.

KATZENBACH UNDECIDED REGARDING HIS COURSE.

Trenton, Dec. 27.—Former Mayor Frank S. Katzenbach, Jr., announced yesterday afternoon that he has not yet reached a decision as to whether he will go into the primaries in May to make the fight against Governor Wilson.

"I am not in a position at this time," said Mr. Katzenbach, "to give an opinion; I really have nothing to say in reference to the matter now."

Mr. Katzenbach was told there had been much gossip in the press, which political friends claimed to be semi-official, to the effect that he was going as a delegate against Governor Wilson, and that an expression of his intentions would be of considerable public interest.

"There is not anything that I can say now," reiterated Mr. Katzenbach. "I have read some of the newspaper stories as to my plans, but, nevertheless, I do not care to express any opinions now."

DECLARES FATHER'S NAME WAS FORGED TO A WILL.

John J. Smith, son of the late Police Sergeant John P. Smith, of the Elizabeth department, charges that the name of his father was forged to the will that was accepted for probate in the office of the Union County surrogate last year in a bill in chancery that was filed yesterday for a partition of the estate. The son also alleges that the testament was not signed, sealed and published according to law and that the signature of one of the witnesses to the document was erased after the will was executed.

The estate involved consists of real and personal property estimated to be worth about $10,000. By the terms of the will that is being contested all of the property was left to the late sergeant's daughter, Elizabeth, although seven other children survive him.

"ARRESTS" STABLE'S GOAT AFTER NANNY RUNS AWAY.

Frank Lehman, the big, good-natured "jailer" at police headquarters, Elizabeth, was the butt of many a Christmas joke Monday because of his "arrest" of Betsey, a black goat, celebrated as the mascot of the city stables.

Betsy wandered away from her companions and became the victim of a band of small boys imbued with the Christmas spirit for each other, but not for goats. Lehman heard of Betsy's plight and went to the rescue of the goat. She is now safely incarcerated in the police patrol barn.

The Christmas cantata by the Bible school of Trinity Reformed church will be held in the lecture room Friday night, under the direction of Miss S. Etta Raybert. The entertainment for the beginners and primary department will be held at 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

RADIANT KIDDIES

Salvation Army Made Two Hundred and Fifty Youngsters Happy.

SANTA CLAUS WAS THERE.

Gifts For All the Little Guests and An Entertainment They Hugely Enjoyed.

Childhood with all its happiness was witnessed at the Salvation Army, last night, when Captain and Mrs. Hewitt entertained about 250 of the poorest children of the city. The auditorium was packed to the doors with children and parents to enjoy the annual Christmas tree entertainment. A musical program was prepared in which the children of the army's Sunday-school took a leading part.

There was an abundance of toys, oranges, games, stockings, gloves, etc., displayed about the large Christmas tree, which was illuminated with colored electric lights, while a large numbers of dolls suspended on wires floated in the air giving the appearance of fairy land. About eighty dolls were distributed to as many girls. The dolls were dressed by the women guests at Truell Inn, the women at the Hartridge School and several prominent homes of the citty.

Santa Claus made his appearance at 9 o'clock, and for ten minutes the children joined in one mighty avalanche of applause and enthusiasm, after which Santa distributed gifts. This was the closing effort of the Army's relief work, which included dinners for the poor on Christmas eve, coal for the most needy, a service and treat for the prisoners at the county jail at Somerville and the distribution of gifts last night, which in the aggregate brings the total number of persons helped in some way to at least nine hundred. Last night's program follows:

Korff; selection, orchestra; hymn, In a Manger Lowly, Sunday-school; recitations, Little Mothers, eight children; Filling the Empty Stockings, Genevieve Sweeney; Two Primary Children, Mary Connett; When Mother Was Away, Katherine Robbins; A Christmas Incident, Mary Connett; Where Does Santa Come From? Miss Matilda Raddick, of this city, and Phillip Brown, of Pleasantville, N. J., were married at 8:30 o'clock last night at the Calvary Baptist church, by the pastor, Rev. G. W. Bailey. There was a large gathering of friends, including many white people; also Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Woodruff, of East Second street, by whom the bride has been employed for a number of years.

The bride was gowned in white, and carried a bouquet of white roses. The maid of honor was Miss Vorginia Bowman, of this city, and the bridesmaids were Miss Anne Green, Miss Lucy Green, of Passaic, and Miss Eliza Edwards, of this city. The best man was William Perry, of Newark. J. Walter Johnson, of this city, and Willis Green, of Passaic, were the ushers. The bride received a large number of gifts. After a trip the couple will reside at Pleasantville.

Boys Given Suspended Sentences.

Frank Harding, of John street, and William Locke, of Lee place, were arraigned before Judge William G. DeMeza in the city court this morning on charges of disorderly conduct at Hope chapel. Harry Thomas, of Spooner avenue, was with the boys, but eluded William Doig, who caught them on the roof of the structure. He will be arraigned tomorrow morning. The boys said that a ball with which they were playing was thrown on the roof and they went up to get it. Sentence was suspended.

Cody Was Impertinent.

John F. Cody, of East Front street, received a suspended sentence in the city court this morning, when arraigned on the charge of disorderly conduct. He was arrested by Patrolman McDonald, for impertinence after a collision between the wagon he was driving and a Netherwood trolley car.

CHRISTMAS PARTY OF SUNDAY SCHOOL

The children of the beginners and primary departments of the First M. E. Sunday school, held their annual Christmas party in Vincent chapel yesterday afternoon to which the parents and friends were invited. The members of the cradle roll were also presnet and joined in the festivities. There was a large Christmas tree, attractively decorated, and Santa Claus in the person of E. A. Edgar appeared and delighted the hearts of both young and old, especially the former in the distribution of gifts. The girls received dolls and the boys were given games. Afterward ice cream and cake were servd. The beginners and primary department children also repeated their program of Sunday.

During the serving of refreshments, Miss May Randolph poured chocolate for the mothers of the children. The affair was in charge of Miss Edna French, Mrs. L. D. Albin, Mrs. Thomas MacDonald and Mrs. Maurice McGrath. The older members of the Sunday-school will have their Christmas party tomorrow night in Vincent chapel, the program being of an informal character.

COULDN'T SWEAR IN MAYOR-ELECT TODAY

According to plans made yesterday, Mayor-elect Robert Clark, Jr., of North Plainfield, was to have been sworn in by Mayor Smalley today, but Attorney-General Wilson sent a telegram from Trenton this morning that caused the ceremony to be postponed until January 1.

When the mayor-elect was notified that Mayor Smalley would be ready to administer the oath of office today, if agreeable to him, Mr. Clark's recollection of the law caused him to doubt if he could legally take the oath before the beginning of his term. He made an appointment to be on hand at Borough Clerk Martin's office today, so that he could take the oath if it proved permissible, but proceeded to get an authoritative ruling.

He consulted with his son, Robert M. Clark, who is a lawyer, and the latter went to Trenton to submit the question to the attorney-general. The latter telegraphed the Mayor-elect as follows:

"Under the law the term of office begins at noon on January 1. An oath taken before that time would be a nullity."

Mayor Smalley was waiting at the clerk's office this morning when Mr. Clark came with the telegram. Mayor and Mayor-elect exchanged polite queries as to the state of each other's health, and the latter gave the former a holiday cigar.

Mayor Smalley said he wouldn't mind giving the few minutes necessary at noon of New Year's Day to administer the oath, and Mayor and Mayor-elect parted through friendly wreaths of smoke.

McCoy, the new rector, will be in charge of the service and will make a brief address. The choir will sing carols.

A feature will be a manger placed near the chancel, in which the children will put their gifts for St. Bernards' School. After this service all will adjourn to the parish house where refreshments will be served under the direction of a committee from the Sunday school.

HOSPITALS' MONEY

Union County Board of Freeholders Distributes $22,000 Among Institutions.

MUHLENBERG GETS $5,250.00.

Director J. N. Cady to Be Re-elected at the Organization Meeting on Monday—County Sealer Contest.

The Union County Board of Freeholders at its meeting yesterday afternoon appropriated $22,000 for the five hospitals located in Elizabeth, Plainfield and Summit. The money is divided as follows:

Elizabeth General Hospital, $8,000; Alexian Brothers' Hospital, Elizabeth, $3,000; St. Elizabeth's Hospital, Elizabeth, $3,750; Muhlenberg Hospital, Plainfield, $5,250; Summit Hospital, $2,000.

Developments at the meeting yesterday indicate that J. W. Fink, of Westfield, who has been the county road inspector, will be named as county road supervisor, a position paying $1,200 a year that was created by a law passed by the last Legislature.

An appropriation of $1,375 was made for repairs to the Bridge street bridge, Elizabeth.

A resolution was adopted for the paving of Springfield avenue, Springfield, from the Summit line west to Morris and Springfield avenues, and that part of Morris avenue from the junction of Morris and Springfield avenues west to Glenside avenue.

It is understood that the committees of the board will not be appointed until the organization meeting next Monday owing to the fact that a director will have to be chosen first. Director J. N. Cady has no opposition for reappointment but he will be obliged to get the votes of the majority of members before he can name the committees. This is a departure from the custom of other years. As the board remains practically the same as last year few changes in the committees are expected.

As constituted at present there will be only one change in the personnel of the board. Freeholder William H. Swain will be succeeded by William I. McMane, of Summit. The new board will be made up of fourteen Republicans and six Democrats.

Considerable interest is manifested in the appointment of a county sealer of weights and measures. Those said to have the best chance are former Assemblyman Augustus W. Schwartz, of Elizabeth, and former Freeholder John Farrell, of Rahway. The position, which is a new one, will pay a salary of $1,200 a year.

The ensuing year will be the last under the present system as a new board of seven members will take office in 1913. The final session of the present board will be held on Saturday.

CARRIER BOYS SEND TOKEN TO A.L. FORCE

"To all the boys who've worked for you
"You've proved a faithful friend;
"Regretting that you leave 'The Press,'
"This Christmas gift we send."

The above lines written on a Christmas card attached to a large and beautiful bouquet of roses, were presented to A. L. Force, the retiring proprietor of The Daily Press, by carrier boys of the paper on Christmas in appreciation of his friendship for them during the time that they have been in his employ.

The gift was appreciated and accepted in the spirit in which it was presented. Mr. Force will remember the kindly act of the boys long after he retires from active business. There has always been a particularly strong friendship between Mr. Force and his carriers and the gift of the roses symbolized it in a fitting manner.

The bouquet was the gift of thirteen of the carriers. The thirteen included comparative newcomers, as well as "veterans" of the force. The former feel the approaching retirement of their kindly chief as keenly as the latter.

These are the donors of the flowers: Bach, Higgins, Snyder, Hummel, Schinkel, Harper, Peterson, Kyle, Townley, Mullin, Nicholson, Switchzer, McDonnell.

He will furnish a bond, make an inventory of the stock, arrange for the sale of the property, under the direction of Surrogate George T. Parrot, and report back to the court which will order a distribution of the dividends. Mr. Lister has made an inventory of the stock and according to his figures it totals $1,371.40, while the list of creditors shows a total amount of $2,264.98 due them.

Mr. Lister has been engaged in business on North avenue for several years, but owing to a depression in trade in his particular line was forced to make an assignment.

CALIFORNIAN CLAIMS A PLAINFIELD BRIDE

Miss Jennie Olive Nelson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Clark Nelson, of 29 Somerset place, and Hawley Rittenhouse Crum, of Los Angeles, Cal., were married yesterday at Nutley. The bride's grandfather, the Rev. William C. Nelson, of Nutley, performed the ceremony, and it was in order to have him officiate that the couple made the journey to the Newark suburb.

They were attended only by Mr. and Mrs. Nelson and the bride's sister, Miss Minnie Nelson. The ceremony was simple.

Mr. and Mrs. Crum will leave for Los Angeles tomorrow, to begin housekeeping. Mr. Crum is a master builder in Los Angeles, although a young man in the twenties. He came East several years ago to work in Elizabeth and Newark, and during that time he met his bride in this city. He travelled East from California again last week to claim her.

ASKS FOR DISMISSAL OF DIVORCE PETITION

City Judge W. G. DeMeza and Winfield S. Angleman, of counsel for David Dreier, formerly of this city, made an application before Vice-Chancellor Emery at Newark, yesterday, for the dismissal of both Mrs. Dreier's divorce petition and an alimony order, on the ground of lack of jurisdiction. It is claimed that Mr. and Mrs. Dreier are residents of Brooklyn. The application was opposed by Abe David, of Elizabeth, counsel for Mrs. Dreier. While the whereabouts of David Dreier, who up to November, 1909, lived in this city, is unknown, his wife is in a fair way to get alimony at the rate of $10 a week indicertly from the executors of the estate of Mr. Dreier's father, Samuel Dreier, who was a large property holder in this city.

When the elder Dreier died he left an estate valued at $250,000. The defendant is entitled to one-fifth. On October 6 the vice-chancellor made on order restraining the executors from paying over any share of the estate to him. The alimony order was made November 14. Mr. and Mrs. Dreier were married in this city, January 5, 1905. The husband's final desertion of his wife took place two years ago last November. The vice-chancellor stated yesterday that he would not give his decision until the final hearing which will probably be held in March of next year.

"Trapping Santa Claus," a recitation by Joseph Naylor, was a feature. Emil Vogel was Santa Claus and distributed gifts. A silk umbrella was presented to Mr. Galloway.

CAUCUS IN BORO

All 1912 Councilmen Talk Over Appointments at Mayor-Elect Clark's House.

DOVE OF PEACE ALSO PRESENT.

Clark Supporters Expect New Mayor's Appointees Will Be Confirmed As Result of Conference.

Administration and so-called anti-administration councilmen got togeather in caucus at the home of borough Mayor-elect Robert Clark, Jr., on Jackson avenue, last night. Listeners on the outside heard no clock-bombs go off, and one of the chief Clark supporters said today that as a matter of fact the conference was decidedly harmonious.

The meeting was called by the Mayor-elect to consider the appointments to be made at the organization meeting of Council next Monday afternoon. All but one of the councilmen and the one councilman-elect, Edmund Rushmore, were present. The councilmen on hand were L. B. Woolston, J. J. Stahl, Alexander Milne, M. C. Van Arsdale and W. J. Buttfield. Councilman William L. Smalley, who retires on January 1, was invited but he announced several days ago, when he received the invitation, that as he would have no say on the appointments he could see no reason for attending the caucus.

At Mr. Clark's suggestion the conferees agreed to give out no information respecting the deliberations, and those who were questioned after the meeting referred all querists to the Mayor-elect. One of the conferees did say that he thought it would betray no pledge of secrecy to state that he came away from the meeting with the impression that all the councilmen were satisfied with the appointments finally slated, and that he expected the Mayor's appointees would be confirmed.

When Mr. Clark was asked about the caucus he regarded the end of his cigar thoughtfully and said:

"You can say that we smoked pleasantly together, and talked ancient history. The fruits of the talk will come out on Jnuary 1."

It is understood that when the caucus broke up the following tentative slate had been prepared for the chief offices to be filled: Recorder, M. F. Gano; clerk, C. M. Dolliver; street commissioner, William J. Hudson; chief of police, George Weiss; chief of the fire department, William McCullough; chief engineer of the fire department, John Schenck; overseer of the poor, Frank Neidig or William G. Debele.

That slate represents five changes. C. M. Dolliver is the present recorder, Frederick A. Martin is borough clerk, John Y. Barrett holds the street commissionership, Frank Schuck is the present fire department engineer and Fred Becker is the overseer of the poor. Chief Weiss and Chief McCullough hold over.

MRS. E. HAVILAND DIES IN 91ST YEAR

Mrs. Elizabeth Haviland, aged 91 years, widow of Justus C. Haviland, died at her home, 91 Westervelt avenue, yesterday afternoon from the infirmities of old age, thus removing another one of the oldest residents. Although Mrs. Haviland had always been in delicate health, she had been especially feeble of late and failed quite rapidly. She possessed rare womanly qualities and was a devoted Christian, beloved by a large circle of friends and acquaintances.

Mrs. Haviland was born at Cornwall, N. Y., and was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Townsend, of that place. She had been a resident of this city for twenty-two years, coming here from Millbrook, N. Y. In 1849 she was married to Justus C. Haviland. He died a number of years ago. Mrs. Haviland was a lifelong member of the Religious Society of Friends and during her residence here was identified with the Plainfield meeting. Until ill-health prevented she was a faithful attendant at the services.

Mrs. Haviland is survived by a [illegible], William Haviland, of Bellefon[illegible]ne, Ohio; two daughters, Mrs. Justus H. Cooley, of the borough, and Miss Anna Haviland, who lived at home. The eldest son, Thomas Haviland, died in Florida a month ago. The funeral service will be held at the late home Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock, and Rev. A. C. Nickerson, an intimate friend of the family will officiate. The burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

COLD WAVE CHASES APRIL-LIKE WEATHER

A cold wave out of the west reached town last night, changing the April-like weather of the past few days into winter within a few hours. People who have been going about with light clothes are today bundled up in their heaviest wraps and are none too warm at that. Weather Prophet John Neagle reports that the lowest point touched by the thermometer during the night was 27 degrees, but the sudden change made everyone believ that zero weather had arrived.

Those who have been watching their coal bins with evident satisfaction during the mild days now realize that the present cold snap will make a large hole in the supply of black diamonds and perhaps, after all, it will not last as long as they at first believed. The merchants welcome the change for they all say that trade has been a little slow on winter supplies, and there is a chance that dealers in skates may yet be able to get rid of their stock. However, everyone seems pleased over the disappearance of the recent disagreeable spell of weather, believing that the present brand is more seasonable and healthy at any rate.

LAVINIA DOUGLASS IS NOW MRS. GARRETT

Miss Lavinia Margretta Douglass, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Douglass, of 610 East Third street, and Fletcher Garrett, of Charleston, S. C., were married at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents, in the presence of 150 guets from this city and out of town. The ceremony was performed by Rev. E. G. Clifton, rector of St. Stephen's Episcopal church, New York city.

The bride was gowned in oyster white charmeuse, trimmed with Irish princess lace with court train. She wore a veil with orange blossoms and a brooch the gift of the groom; also a pearl necklace the gift of the late Mrs. Minnie Edgerton. She carried a white kid prayer book with a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley.

The bridesmaid was Miss Minnie Mitchel, who wore a gown of pink messaline and carried a shower bouquet of pink carnations; Miss Anna Broadnax, as maid of honor, who wore a gown of white marquisette over pink messaline and carried a shower bouquet of pink and white carnations. Mrs. James F. Lawson was the matron of honor and she was gowned in white crepe meteor and carried a shower bouquet of white roses. The best man was Hunter Garrett, brother of the groom and the ushers were J. W. Mauray, A. P. White, Frank Kelso, W. H. Jones, Sr., and W. H. Jones, Jr.

The wedding march was played by Professor William Tuyers, of New York, and Walter F. Craig, of Brooklyn, piano and violin. After the ceremony a reception was held, during which the couple received the congratulations of the guests. An elaborate supper was served during the reception.

The couple left later in the evening for a southern trip, after which they will reside at 610 East Third street. Mr. Garrett holds a position in a wholesale cotton house in New York city. Mrs. Garrett received a large collection of gfts from relatives and friends.

The bride's mother was gowned in black embroidered marquisette over Kingsblue messaline, trimmed with cut steel and jets. The bride's aunt, Mrs. T. H. Wright, of Brooklyn, was gowned in oyster white marquisette, trimmed with crystal.

UP TO OBJECTORS

Tell Us Where to go With Sewer Plant, Says Commissioner Gavett.

ACTION IS NOW A NECESSITY.

No One Has Caught a Hint of What State Board Intends to Do With Protest Filed Yesterday.

No hint of the final decision by the State Board of Health on the protest against the proposed enlargement of the sewage disposal works on Rock avenue has followed the hearing, held yesterday at Trenton. Street Commissioner Andrew J. Gavett, who by virtue of his position and professional standing, would be among the first to receive any intimation of forthcoming action, said today that he could gather no impression of the effect the various statements and contentions had made on the Board.

The Street Commissioner voiced his regret over continued delay in the work of improving sewerage conditions. The present beds were not up to the mark, he said, and it was time that somebody thought up some plan, whether it involved a nearby or a distant plant, that could be pushed to the point of operation. Plainfield was willing to move the plant away, he thought, if it could be shown how to do it without rousing objection.

"There is little to be said in comment on the hearing," said Street Commissioner Gavett today. "One could gather no impression of the effect of the statements on the Board, because their attitude was strictly that of silent listeners. One member of the Board did say afterward, in informal conversation, that he was pleased at the friendly spirit that marked the hearing, but neither he nor any other members of the Board gave a hint as to how long the matter would be held under advisement or what the ruling would be when it was made.

"As to the question at issue itself, there is this to be said, that Plainfield has been struggling two years with the problem and something should be done. The city was checked in a project to take the sewage disposal to a place beyond its borders, and it now stands ready to do something with the present plant. It calls for attention. It is not up to the mark, and needs cleaning and improvement.

"If we are not to be allowed to improve the present beds as they should be improved, then it is up to the objectors to tell us what we can do. I do not think Plainfield is particularly keen on retaining the present situation for the plant. A way to carry the plant to some other point, generally satisfactory, will be welcomed by all sides."

The choir sang Christmas hymns, while the children, in the old country style, marched in an around the tree.

Toys were given to the children and everyone received a box of candy and coffee cake. The committee in charge comprised Mrs. Chris Lundbeck, Miss Mattie Madsen, R. F. Jenen, F. Goldmann, Miss Clara Hansen, Miss Christine Madsen and A. Rasmussen served refreshments.

MISS HILDA MITCHAM DR. A. D. FOSTER'S BRIDE.

Miss Hilda Mitcham, sister of Mrs. C. H. Mallery, of this city, and Dr. Albert Douglas Foster, of the United States Marine Hospital, located at New Orleans, were married yesterday afternoon at St. James' church, Hackettstown, the ceremony being performed by Rev. W. M. Mitcham, rector of the church, a brother of the bride, assisted by her brother-in-law, Rev. C. H. Mallery, rector of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, this city.

Miss Edith Mitcham, sister of the bride, was the bridesmaid, and Miss Alice Mallery, a niece, was also an attendant. Following the ceremony the chimes in the church steeple were sounded. The wedding party adjourned to the rectory of the church, where an elaborate luncheon was served. Dr. and Mrs. Foster left on a trip for Detroit, and later they will make their home in New Orleans.

POPE SHOWS MORE FAVORS TO AMERICAN.

Rome, Dec. 28.—Cardinal John M. Farley was yesterday again the recipient of many warm messages and beatuiful flowers on the occasion of his name day.

Together with his suite and some American visitors the cardinal drove to the Vatican for his farewell audience with the Pope and was received with great honors. The Pontiff met him at the door of his private library and remained in conversation with him for over half an hour, during which he granted all the requests that Cardinal Farley made, including honors for the clergy and laity of New York, which Cardinal Farley wishes personally to announce on his return to America.

The Pope spoke in appreciative terms of the United States, and of its loyal and zealous Catholic population. He said the rise of Cardinal Farley to the cardinalate was one of the greatest satisfactions of his pontificate.

SHOT AT LAST SPRING, NOW HIS HOUSE BURNS.

While Alexander Niper, a veteran of the Civil War, was chopping wood near Glen Gardner, Tuesday, his home, with its contents, was destroyed by fire. About two years ago Mr. Niper had a small house erected on the mountain south of Glen Gardner, and had since resided there alone, chopping wood during the day. Last spring, while thus engaged, he was shot in the face and hands by some person hiding in the woods.

Mr. Niper says some person set his house on fire, as everything was safe when he left. He is at a loss to know who his enemy is. He came to Glen Gardner from the West two or three years ago.

KEAN'S JANUARY 1 OPEN HOUSE THING OF PAST.

What had become a political institution in county and State circles has passed. Former Senator John Kean will not have an open house at his home on New Year's day. It will be the first time in years that Mr. Kean has not received at his Ursino home. The former statesman has accepted from President William H. Taft an invitation to spend the day at the White House.

Formerly politicians, big and little, gathered at the former Senator's home every New Year's day and discussed county, State and national politics. The majority of the visitors were Republicans, but not a few were followers of Thomas Jefferson. Each guest signed his name in a large book provided for the purpose. The former member of the Senate treasurers this book as one of the most valuable in his library.

BURGLAR ESCAPES AS VICTIM HUNTS FOR GUN.

While Jacob Wind, an architect with offices in Elizabeth, was searching for a revolver with which to scare off a burglar in his Lyons Farms home early yesterday the intruder got away, taking $100 worth of valuables. The robbery is said to be the fifteenth in Lyons Farms in the past two weeks.

Mr. Wind was awakened at 2 o'clock by a sound as if some one were knocking at the door. As he entered the dining-room he saw a man crouching in a corner. Not knowing whether the intruder was armed he went to another room for a revolver. In the meantime the burglar made his escape through a window.

TO CAUCUS ONCE MORE ON COMMISSIONERSHIP.

The Democratic majority in the next Board of Aldermen in Elizabeth will hold another caucus tonight to see if a decision can be reached on the street commissionership. It seems to be the general opinion, however, that nothing will be done until the board passes an ordinance increasing the salary of the position from $1,500 to $2,500.

The ordinance, if introduced, at the board's first meeting, New Year's night, will have to lay over two weeks before it can be taken up for third reading and final passage. The latest report on the commissionership is that Fire Commissioner John J. Collins will likely be chosen for the job at an increased salary and that he will appoint as his deputy Nathaniel K. Thompson, the present incumbent of the office.

SPORTS News and Notes

FOOTBALL RULES TO BE DISCUSSED.

One of the most important meetings in the history of the National Intercollegiate Athletic Association will be held today in the Hotel Astor, Manhattan. Although it does not pretend to govern football or, for that matter, any college sport, the association, of which Captain Palmer E. Pierce is the leading spirit, exercises a strong influence over the strenuous game.

Widespread dissatisfaction was expressed with the rules governing gridiron contests last season and this will be the first opportunity for their discussion by a body of men admittedly competent to judge of their effectiveness.

Two items set for the evening session are discussions of the amateur law and of the professional coach.

AUTO RACE PLANS.

Vanderbilt Cup Contest May Return to Long Island.

That racing is not dead is evidenced by the activity displayed by the members of the contest board of the American Automobile Association, who are busy arranging the motor speed calendar for 1912. Already many bids have been filed for speed contests, but as yet no applications have been received for races in Greater New York. However, this does not mean that there will be none, as Promoter Moross has not yet returned from Cuba.

It would not surprise the contest board to receive an application for the Vanderbilt race to be held in Suffolk County this year. There is considerable agitation afoot for a revival of this famous classic, and it is fitting that it be held on Long Island. It is understood that if good roads can be found sufficiently far from New York the contest board will not insist upon policing the course with uniformed militia. If it simply is a question of a good course at some distance from New York there are plenty of Long Island automobilists who think they can find one within a day's run.

It is not likely that Savannah will again apply for the sanctions for the Grand Prize and the Vanderbilt.

Elgin has already applied for a sanction for August 30 and 31, and the Santa Monica race will probably be a fixture for May. At present there is every indication of another race in California, at Bakersville. This will probably come off on Washington's Birthday.

ALLGAIR GETS HIS LICENSE.

The application of former Freeholder Joseph Allgair for a liquor license in New Brunswick was renewed Tuesday before Judge Peter F. Daly and granted. The license was rejected some months ago by Judge Adrian Lyon, who refused to renew it on the ground that under the "bishops' law" this could not be done. The Supreme Court reversed this decision, holding that Judge Lyon lacked jurisdiction at the time he thus ruled, because of certiorari proceedings in connection with the case.

Upon the application coming up again before Judge Daly, the latter declared that Judge Lyon could not have acted otherwise than he did when the matter came before him. He said he was satisfied that Mr. Allgair would conduct his business in a way that would be conducive to the public benefit. The court, therefore, granted the application.

The license was fought by the Sayreville branch of the W. C. T. U. with money left by the late Joseph Sayre, of Newark. It succeeded in knocking out five licenses on the ground that minors were sold liquor and other violations of law permitted. In this case it was held there was gambling for drinks.

MAYORS TO GATHER TO FIGHT GRADE CROSSINGS.

To continue the fight they began against grade crossings at a meeting in East Orange recently the Mayors of the State will convene in Elizabeth on January 6 at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. The session will be held in the City Council chamber.

The Mayors of the cities having grade crossings are shaping a bill providing for the abolition of the crossings within the next ten years, the entire cost to be borne by the railroads. The first-class counties will be given a longer time than those of the second class. It is expected that the bill will be fully prepared at the meeting at Elizabeth.

Contested Will Settled.

The Collins-Ham controversy has been settled by Mrs. Ralph C. Collins giving Frank B. Ham, executor of the Ham estate in Westfield, a release for all claim against the estate or himself, in consideration of which Mrs. Collins receives the sum of $10,000. Mrs. Collins was the youngest daughter of the late B. F. Ham, of Cranford, whose will Mrs. Collins intended to contest in the courts.

NEW RULE IN DISCHARGE OF CIVIL SERVICE MEN.

Because of the extension of the civil service law to a number of cities and counties the Board of Civil Service Commissioners has adopted a rule designed to facilitate moving for the discharge of employes from the service. The rule adopted by the board follows:

"The officer or board appointing a person sought to be removed shall formulate charges and specifications against such person, and shall allow a reasonable time in which to make a written reply or plea thereto, and both the charges and specifications, the reply and the pleading thereto, with the consequent action of the appointing officer thereon, shall be at once forwarded to the Civil Service Commission for review and such action as it may deem necessary in the case.

"If, in the opinion of the commission, the provisions of the law do not appear to have been fully complied with, or if an affidavit that they have been violated shall be presented, it shall fix a time and place for a hearing of the case, of which written notice shall be served upon the appointing officer and the person sought to be removed, at least five days prior to the hearing.

"At the hearing the respective parties may be represented by counsel, and the commission shall hear witnesses and receive all other evidence produced, and determine the case upon such evidence as may be presented."

CEMETERY COMPANIES' ACCOUNTS DEMANDED.

Dr. George T. Welch, of Paterson, is the plaintiff in an action against the Rosedale Cemetery Association and the Linden Crematory Association, both of Union county, which was argued yesterday before Vice Chancellor Stevenson in Newark. He demands an accounting from the officials of the two companies, in each of which he owns fifty shares.

The two cemetery associations own adoining cemeteries in Linden, Union county, and each is identical with the other in the personnel of its stockholders and directors. The State law forbids one company from owning more than 135 acres of land for burial purposes.

Welch alleges that no accounting has been rendered by the officials of the two companies during the last eleven years. He also insists that one-half of the receipts from the sale of lots be divided among the stockholders as required by law.

The plaintiff is represented by William T. Welch and former State Senator Wood McKee, of Paterson. Judge Osborne, of Newark, and J. W. Benedict, of New York, are counsel for the two defendant corporations.

Highwaymen Hold Up Blacksmith.

Jay Van Arsdale, a blacksmith, reported to the Somerville authorities Tuesday that while he was driving Monday night he was held up by three highwaymen, who robbed him of his money. Van Arsdale had knocked two of the men down, and was about to tackle the third, when one of those he hit first came from behind and felled him. Then the trio pounced upon him and took his money.

SUN CULT ALSO LURED SCION OF N. J. FAMILY.

Chicago, Dec. 28.—Startling evidence that twelve-year-old "Billy" Lindsay, the Philadelphia boy heir, whose custody is to be settled in the Juvenile Court, was but one of many boy victims of Ottoman Zar-Adusht Hanish, high priest of Mazdaznan, the Sun Cult, came unexpectedly from Dean Walter T. Sumner, of Sts. Peter and Paul's Cathedral, Tuesday.

Dean Sumner declared that he had recently prompted a police investigation into the cult and the practises of its devotees, in an effort to save the scion of a wealthy New Jersey family from falling into the toils of Hanish.

It was said yesterday that prior investigation in the East proved that Hanish, instead of being the lineal descendant of a proud Indian family of the highest estate, is extremely Celtic and that before he began to have "inspirations" his name was Hennessy—hence Hanish.

Dean Sumner's statement gave strength to other charges that the Sun-temple was a lure to boys, some of whom entered and were never seen again.

The Juvenile Protective Association yesterday began a separate investigation into the strange case with the hope of protecting the interests of the Lindsay boy. Mrs. Gertrude Howe Britton ordered the investigation.

DOG KILLING PROCLAMATION.

Because two persons in Rockaway were bitten by a mad dog, recently, Mayor Harry W. Mutchler issued a proclamation, Tuesday night, that all dogs found running at large, unless properly muzzled, shall be killed. The proclamation will take effect Friday and will remain in force until May 1 next. The Council resolved to have the proclamation posted in twenty public places.

Orders were issued to Marshal C. H. Hull and Assistant Marshal Mahlon M. Moore to carry out the provisions of the Mayor's proclamation and to summon assistance if not able to cope with the dog nuisance single handed.

The marshals Tuesday killed the dogs of Michael Flotell and Frank White, in Maple avenue. They are supposed to have been bitten by a mad dog two weeks ago.

THE OVERSEER QUESTION AGAIN

Mr. Angleman's letter published in this paper yesterday is interesting and gratifying from several points of view. In the first place, it is gratifying to know where the idea of the deep laid plot of the Charity Organization Society originated. Mr. Ayers' personal counsel would not do justice to his own reputation as a lawyer or to his client's interests if he did not advance some striking theory for his appeal to the jury of public opinion.

The letter is further interesting because it brings out more clearly than the editorial in The Daily Press of the preceding day, the fallacy of the plot idea and the reason why the device is so clever as an argument. In dealing with the general run of politicians it is natural to take for granted that a candidate for public office has some ulterior motive of private gain for himself or his friends. Mr. Angleman's mistake in respect to the present case is pardonable only because he does not know the character of Mr. De Forest. His argument amounts to this: Mr. De Forest cannot perform the duties of the office of overseer without great personal sacrifice, while at the same time he offers not only to assume all the duties but to turn over the whole salary and perhaps have to pay something more to his assistant. Nobody can tell Mr. Ayers' campaign managers that this is all for the sake of doing a public service for the people of Plainfield. Its very absurdity convinces them. The answer is the reputation for integrity and fair dealing of Mr. De Forest. The man and his record are not unknown to the Common Council, and it is a satisfaction to know that they recognize and appreciate just such public spirited motives, and have been searching earnestly for just such a man,—a man whom they can trust implicitly, and who could not be a party to so despicable and deceitful a treachery as that which Mr. Angleman finds to be the only real issue in the case.

That issue is a simple question of fact. If Mr. De Forest is the dupe and catspaw of any private interest whatever, if his announced motive and purpose to serve the city and the people of Plainfield with an eye single to their interests, is a snare and a device, we sincerely hope that the Common Council will find him out in time to save the city from falling a victim to such a plot. But strange as it may seem all who know Mr. De Forest are convinced of the sincerity of the man and are equally confident that he will make good and give to the city an efficient business administration of this important office.

AN UNDERPAID OFFICIAL.

There is one office in the city to which the salary attached is by no means in proportion to the services rendered. That is the city judgeship. It must be evident to everyone that it is expecting too much to ask a lawyer to give practically one-half of his time to a single client for a fee of $1,000 a year. That amount is hardly sufficient to pay the office expenses of the average lawyer in a small city. Why then, should the municipality only allow such a meagre salary, particularly when the duties incumbent upon this city judge are two-fold what they were in the same office but a few years ago?

Judge DeMeza devotes practically every morning in the week to the discharge of his duties. Moreover, he sits frequently in the afternoons. He must be at the beck and call of the city at all times, day and night, Sundays included. During the first year of his term he has heard over 1,200 cases. Among these were more than two-score "speak-easy" and gambling cases. Instead of merely holding the prisoners for the grand jury he has established a new order of things. He disposes of the cases himself and the fines go to the city instead of the county. This has not only been the means of increasing the municipality's revenues by some $2,000, but has saved the taxpayers considerable expense as no longer does the city have to pay for the subpoenas and for the witnesses necessary when the actions were on trial at the county court. No longer does the city have to send its policemen to court at Elizabeth for such matters.

We submit that Judge DeMeza is underpaid by his client, the city of Plainfield, and we believe that the taxpayers are of one mind in this matter. A salary of $1,600 a year is none too generous and we firmly believe that the Common Council will share this opinion.

MARKED DOWN TO $1,000.

It does seem strange that Robert L. Lee should offer his services to the city in return for a paltry sum if he is able to do all that he promises. Most mortals would be very apt to place a $10,000 per annum value on themselves were they indeed so able and so industrious as to accomplish in a satisfactory and business-like manner all that he proposes himself.

Mr. Lee's political record is still fresh in the memory of the taxpayers. He was chosen as a member of the Common Council, it will be recalled, on Dec. 5, 1899, and held that office until Nov. 11, 1904, when he resigned and was appointed as tax collector to fill an unexpired term. When that unexpired term came to an end on Jan. 1, 1906, Mr. Lee's public services ceased for he had failed to receive a nomination from the voters of his city for a regular term.

The salary of the city clerk at the time Mr. Lee was elected a member of the Common Council was $1,200 a year. It still remains the same. This leads us to ask, if he as a member of the Common Council at that time thought that the salary was all right and that the present incumbent was discharging his duties to the satisfaction of the people, why should he now want a change made, particularly when the work has more than doubled? Is it because he considers that he has more ability than Mr. MacMurray and can save the taxpayers money, or is it because Mr. Lee wants a job?

The annual meetings of the American Society of Naturalists, the American Society of Zoologists and the American Association of Anatomists opened at Princeton Tuesday with a smoker by the zoologists in the evening at the Nassau Club. The reading of scientific papers and the other business for which these meetings are held began yesterday, and will extend through tomorrow. About 250 of the leading scientists of the eastern and central United States are gathered for these meetings.

One of the most interesting parts of the conferences are the various scientific exhibits. One of these is of prepartions showing the electrical organs of all the electrical fishes known to scientists. This exhibit is by C. F. Silvester, curator of the Biological Museum of Princeton University, and is installed in the museum in Guyot Hall.

SWACKHAMER FAVORS "VOTES FOR WOMEN."

S. S. Swackhamer addressed the Men's Association of the Church of the Heavenly Rest last night on the subject of "Woman's Suffrage." Following the lecture there was a general discussion of the topic by the members, nearly all present voicing their views. At the business meeting of the association it was decided to hold a mock trial early in February and the entertainment committee, through its chairman, Arthur Caleen, was instructed to make the necessary arrangements. Refreshments and a social time brought the meeting to a close.

Mr. Swackhamer's remarks were all in favor of woman suffrage and were based largely on the legal and moral right propery-holding and taxpaying women residents have to vote. He received an invitation to again speak to the association on the night of Monday, January 22.

Barber Shop Burglarized.

Some time Tuesday night a burglar picked the lock on the door of Joseph Clement's barber shop on West Fourth street, and after ransacting the place found $20 which the proprietor had left there at the close of business. None of his razors or other articles of value were taken, he said, and although he resides over the place he heard nothing during the night. The matter has been reported to the police.

THE FORUM.

City Clerkship.

Editor, The Daily Press:

Referring to Robert Lee's offer printed in last night's issue of your valuable paper relative to his application for the position of city clerk, I think Mr. Lee's offer as outlined in his letter to each member of the 1912 Common Council should receive careful consideration by that body. Mr. Lee, if successful, will save the taxpayers approximately $1,160 yearly. This feature should appeal to the members of the Council.

Every large corporation doing business today is making a careful study of economy. Experts are engaged to find out how business efficiency may be increased with the least possible expenditure of money. A city is a large corporattion doing business and it is the duty of the members to make a careful study of the needs of the city and proceed along economical lines with the end in view of always getting the highest efficiency possible in all city departments. Mr. Lee says he will be on duty every day and will work with departmental heads of the city where his services can be used there by reducing the necessity of hiring extra clerks when the volume of business demands additional help. This is another feature that should appeal to the Common Council as it is along the lines of economy.

I hope that the Common Council will consider Mr. Lee's offer before making the appointment of city clerk as I feel that he can make good if allowed to serve the taxpayers.

Firemen's Dance.

Editor, The Daily Press:

In justice to the members of Excelsior Hook and Ladder Company, of Scotch Plains, I wish to inform the public that we had no interest, directly or indirectly, in the dance of the "fire laddies" of Scotch Plains held in Saengerbund Hall, North Plainfield, last Friday night.

Y. M. C. A. Orchestra Rehearsal.

The next rehearsal of the Y. M. C. A. orchestra will be held Wednesday night, January 3, instead of on Monday night, January 1. At this rehearsal the program for the next concert, on Tuesday night, January 23, will be gone over. Conductor George G. Daland has carefully selected this music and will personally direct the rehearsals.

FORD FREED ON PROMISE TO SUPPORT HIS CHILD.

William F. Ford, a former Plainfielder, who was extradited from New York last October on a charge of desertion, made by his wife, was released upon probation yesterday by Judge Daly, of the County Court at New Brunswick, following his agreeing to pay $10 a month towards the support of his child, who has been living with her maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Van Horn, of Highland Park.

After Ford's arrest it developed that there were two charges of forgery against him in Trenton and he was sent there to meet them. The Mercer authorities did not press the charges. He has been in jails in New York, New Brunswick and Trenton, for nearly three months.

Mayor Moy appeared with Ford yesterday. Ford pleaded non vult.

Judge Daly placed the defendant on probation for the full term of three years.

ORPHANS ENTERTAINED BY THE ELKS OF ELIZABETH.

Elizabeth Lodge, No. 289, B. P. O. E., entertained sixty-eight children of the Orphan Asylum and thirty-two of the Egenolf Day Nursery at its clubhouse yesterday. They were taken to the clubhouse in stages.

A vaudeville performance was given and the children enjoyed it to their hearts' content. Refreshments were served and each child was given a present. Esteemed Leading Knight Welcome W. Bender headed a committee in charge of the affair.

Gets $3 Damage.

The suit of Freeman Straight against Fred Ivamy, based on a broken contract for removing garbage, was tried in the District Court this morning and resulted in favor of the plaintiff. He was awarded $3 damages. He brough suit to recover $13, but the evidence showed that Mr. Ivamy had rescinded the contract on account of unsatisfactory service, which the court held he had a proper right to do. The verdict was awarded for an alleged unpaid month's bill at the time the contract was broken.

Clan Mackenzie to Elect.

Clan Mackenzie, No. 204, Order Scottish Clans, will meet tomorrow night for the election of officers. After the business session, a social and package party will be held to which all friends of the clan are invited. There will also be a discussion of plans for organizing a Daughters of Scotia Lodge in this city. The New Jersey representative of the order will be present to explain the details of organization.

Miss Edith Schenck, of Westervelt avenue, a graduate of the North Plainfield High School, '10, now a student in Trenton Normal School, is spending the holiday season with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Schenck, of the borough.

Dry Cleaning

like everything else, is cheapest when you get the best, for your garments are cleaned and pressed better—and therefore the work lasts longer and is better for your clothing or household furnishings.

Besides a saving, good cleaning is sanitary. Since this is so, get the best, for handwork in small tubs is sure to carry some dirt along from other clothing belonging to other people.

You don't experience anything of that nature in a first-class place.

Furs for New Year's

We offer to the people of Plainfield their greatest chance to buy furs at prices which no one can duplicate elsewhere. We give the people the advantage of low prices now, when cold weather is with us and their need of furs is greatest. Why should the people of Plainfield pay fancy prices for their furs when they can buy the same goods from the Charles Kurtzman Fur Store, each piece guaranteed and at prices far more satisfactory to them. When you are thinking of buying furs stop in here. Our prices are positively one-third cheaper than elsewhere. Quality the highest. Our being in town many years and having leased our store for many years to come prove that we mean every word we say.

U. GRANT PIERSON MISSING FROM HOME

Friends and the family of U. G. Pierson, of East Fifth street, are much worried over his absence from home since Tuesday morning. He left home as usual on that day for his butcher shop on Watchung avenue and has not been seen or heard of since and Mrs. Pierson in conversation with a Daily Press reporter this afternoon said that she has no idea of where he is or what caused him to go away.

Her reasons for feeling worried are because for several months past, Mr. Pierson's health has been poor and she fears that he is sick and unable to tell who he is or who his friends are. When he left home he had a considerable amount of money with him, all that he received from the Christmas business, and whether he had gone to New York on business and met with foul play or not is as much of a mystery as his disappearance.

Mrs. Pierson also stated that she thinks he will return or send some word soon, providing he is not sick or has been detained for some other reason.

SQUASH PUFF.

Press dry cooked summer squash through a sieve. To one and one-half pints of squash add two tablespoonfuls of melted butter, one-fourth cup of milk, one-half teaspoonful salt and one-fourth tablespoonful pepper and two beaten egg yolks. Mix thoroughly; fold in two beaten egg whites and turn into a buttered mold. Set in a pan of hot water and bake in the oven until centre is firm. Serve turned from the mold, accompanied by a rich cream sauce.

Renovating Carpets.

They must have been well beaten and freed from dust first. Then put a gallon of water into a saucepan with a half pound of good soap, shredded, and boil. When the soap is dissolved pour the whole into a clean pail and stir in a quarter pound of salts of tartar. Wash a small portion of the carpet with this solution and immediately after with warm, clean water, and rub dry with a clean cloth. Repeat this until the whole surface of the carpet is cleaned.

"PROPS" CAME HIGH.

Enter Marshall Darrach with another story concerning Tom Wise, the heavy-weight comedian.

"In an Indiana town, with 'The Gentleman of Mississippi,'" told Marshall, "Tom sent out the property man of the theatre for two carnations which were needed in the action of the play. 'Props' returned with the carnations, but they were very small—ludicrously so, I might say.

"'These are too small,' said Tom. 'It is important that I should have two regular carnations. Take these back.'

"'Props' returned again, with two carnations that had been sort of fluffed out.

"'These the best you could get?' asked Tom.

"'The very best.'

"And when Tom got his itemized bill from the manager of the house there appeared these two items:

"'Two carnations, 25 cents.

"'To fluffing out two carnations, 10 cents.'

"Which happened in an Indiana one-night stand," concluded Marshall.—San Francisco Chronicle.

A PLEASANT VOICE.

Would you have a voice that is musical and pleasing. Americans should listen while a foreigner talks and then compare their voices with the soft sounds of the people of other lands. Practise the low sweet tones that are possible to every one, if but a little time is taken to give the voice a musical intonation. The habit will grow, like most habits, and reward the one who has devoted her thought to it.

One must start in youth and be on the watch night and day, while at work and while at play, to get and keep a voice which shall speak at all times the thought of a kind heart.

But this is the time when a sharp voice is more apt to be acquired. You often hear boys and girls say words at play with a quick, sharp tone, almost like the snap of a whip. If one of them is vexed you hear a voice which sounds as if it were made up of a snarl, a whine and a bark.

PRESERVING FRUIT, FLOWERS.

Fruit and flowers may be preserved from decay and fading by immersing them in a solution of gum Arabic in water two or three times, waiting a sufficient time between each immersion to allow the gum to dry. This process covers the surface of the fruit with a thin coating of gum, which renders it entirely impervious to the air, and thus prevents the decay of the fruit or the wilting of the flower. To insure success be sure that the whole surface is completely covered, for entrance of air is fatal.

Neal; financial secretary, F. D. Fuller; treasurer, F. C. Smith; trustee for three years, Charles W. DeGraw. They will be installed Wednesday, January 17.

The quartet choir of Trinity Reformed church, under the direction of Arthur L. Titsworth, organist, will repeat the Christmas music at the church Sunday night.

Mr. and Mrs. George Benston and family, of the borough, are spending a few days with relatives in Martinsville.

ROMANCE OF A SHOVEL.

An Idea That Won a Fortune For a Railway Laborer.

The simplest labor saving device may quite possibly be worth a fortune. One day a good many years ago a number of men were at work on the roadbed of a line of railway in course of construction between Birmingham and Manchester. They were cutting through a hill and moving the material by loosening it with picks, shoveling it into barrows and wheeling it away. The shovels they were using were known as Irish shovels, with a square cornered blade about fifteen inches long. The work progressed but slowly, and the subcontractor in charge rebuked his workmen for not making quicker progress. One of them replied that if he would grind off the corners of the shovels it would be easier to get them into the earth, and, consequently, they would be able to work more quickly.

The contractor ridiculed the idea, which he considered a piece of insolence on the part of the workman, but the navvy was quite in earnest and not easily discouraged. When the work was completed he discussed the matter with a friend of his at Sheffield, who persuaded an ironmonger he knew to make a dozen or so as an experiment. The tools were offered to a large contractor, who promised to let some of his men use the new shovels and report results.

About a week afterward the contractor returned with the information that his men were fairly quarreling as to who should use the new tools, some arriving to work a quarter of an hour before time in order to be there first when the tool box was opened. The navvy's suggestion had proved a good one. A patent was secured and an agreement made between the navvy, the manufacturer and the contractor. When the navvy died he left a fortune of over £65,000, the proceeds from royalties on the manufacture of shovels under his patent.—Pearson's Weekly.

DEATHBED SCENES.

And the Question of Prolonging Life to Its Utmost Limit.

Even the lengthening of a man's life by a day may make death easier by giving him the opportunity of soothing a guilty conscience, of signing a will, of redressing an injustice, of healing a breach of friendship the memory of which might imbitter another life, of saying farewell to a son or daughter who had come in haste from a great distance. Any one who has seen deathbeds knows how anxieties of this sort may darken the last hours and how their removal may reconcile the sufferer to death. It seems to us that this talk of the right to die and the wrongdoing of doctors in seeking to prolong a life that is hanging by a thread springs from the unwholesome sentimentalism and the inevitable accompaniment of selfishness which are among the unhappy notes of the present time.

To the older writers the death agony was the final struggle of the soul leaving the body, and by a confusion of thought due to the acquired meaning of the word it has come to be generally believed that the parting of the spiritual from the material part of man is painful. Those whose lot it has been to stand at many deathbeds know that this is not the case. Sir William Osler says that he has careful records of about 600 deathbeds, studied particularly with reference to the modes of dying and the sensations of the dying. Of these ninety suffered bodily pain or distress of one sort or another, eleven showed mental apprehension, two positive terror, one expressed spiritual exaltation, one bitter remorse. The great majority gave no sign one way or the other.—British Medical Journal.

Chinese Criminal Law.

Curiously like the Mosaic and Roman customs, the fixed laws of China are carved in stone and set up in the streets. Chinese criminal law, which is founded on the "Chau Kung," or ritual of Chau, is based upon the accused confessing, and no punishment can ensue until this is brought about. Before the condemned are decapitated they are offered all the samschu they desire to drink, and in most cases they are allowed to choose whether they will ride in a ricksha or be carried in a sedan.—J. S. Thomson's "The Chinese."

Severing Old Ties.

Willie was sent out by his mother to the woodshed to saw and split some stove wood out of a pile of old railroad ties. Going outdoors shortly after, she found the youth sitting on the sawhorse with his head bowed down in his hands. She asked her hopeful why he didn't keep at his work.

"My dear mother," he replied with much feeling, "I find it so hard, so very hard, to sever old ties."—Lippincott's.

Plenty of Purpose.

"I have here a poem."

"Is it a poem of any serious purpose?" inquired the editor of the Highbrow Magazine.

"It is, sir. It was written to pay my board bill with."—Kansas City Journal.

Wasting Coffee.

A pleasing odor ascended to the guest room, and one of the visitors sniffed it daintily. "The coffee smells good," she said, hastening her preparations for breakfast. The other guest shook her head sadly. "Yes," she replied, "it is good coffee, but it makes me sorrowful to have anybody make coffee so long before a meal is ready. So many persons do that. It shows at once the difference between an ordinary cook and a culinary artist. A careless cook often makes her coffee the first thing and puts it on the back of the range to keep hot, thinking thereby to have it ready for the table without further trouble and well out of her way. It is a fatal mistake. All the rich, delicate aroma of the coffee is lost in that way. We are getting it up here now, as you perceive. It is, as you have said, very appetizing, but coffee is not intended especially for an appetizer, and you don't wish it while you are combing your hair. To be perfect, with all its aroma and strength preserved, coffee should be served piping hot, just as soon as it is made."—New York Press.

They Were "Ulys" and "Mrs. G."

Mrs. Grant had no secretary to attend to her correspondence, the great bulk of which was referred to the office for action. She used to receive an enormous number of appeals for help, for charities, for assistance, in aid of almost every cause that could be imagined. Being a warm hearted, sympathetic woman, some of these appeals made a strong impression upon her. I can remember several instances when Mrs. Grant requested her husband to give this person or that a position that was asked for or to accede to some other request of like nature. She always called the president "Ulys," and, excepting upon the most formal occasions, he always addressed her as "Mrs. G." Both the president and his wife were plain people, simple in their tastes to an extent that would cause surprise today, when everything has so changed throughout the social fabric of the entire nation.—W. H. Cook in "Memories of the White House."

An Interesting Illusion.

A curious and interesting effect may be produced in the following simple manner:

Take a sheet of paper or thin cardboard about five inches square and roll it into a tube, with one end just large enough to fit around the eye and the other end somewhat smaller. Hold the tube between the thumb and first finger of the right hand—do not grasp the tube with the whole hand—and place the larger end of the tube close against the right eye. With the left hand place a book against the side of the tube. If both eyes are now kept open there will appear to be a hole through the book, and it will appear that objects are seen through this hole and not through the tube. The effect is even more odd if the left hand instead of a book is held against the tube, when the hole will appear through the center of the hand. Many other strange effects are also apparent.—Detroit Free Press.

Metals In the Human Body.

The human body contains, among other constituents, about two pounds of phosphorus, which is essential to the health of the bones and the vigor of the brain. This phosphorus, if extracted and put to another use, would make up about 4,000 packages of friction matches. Besides phosphorus, the body contains a few ounces of sodium and half an ounce of potassium. The quantity of the latter would be sufficient for many experiments in a class in chemistry. In addition to sodium and potassium there are a few grains of magnesium, enough to make the "silver rain" for a family's stock of rockets on a Fourth of July evening or to create a brilliant light visible at a considerable distance.—Harper's.

What She Asked For.

Uncle Jack, who was visiting them from the west, wished to talk to Elizabeth's father at his office. He could not find the telephone directory and thus appealed to three-year-old Elizabeth for information regarding the phone number: "Elizabeth, what does mother ask for when she talks to daddy at his office?"

Elizabeth was wise for her days.

"Money," she lisped.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Plenty of Ends.

"Mamma," queried small Edgar, "how many ends are there to a stick of candy?"

"Two, of course," was the reply.

"That's funny," mused the little fellow. "I have bitten off three or four ends, and there are two left yet."—Chicago News.

It Was Born So.

Stranger In Town—So that is the haunted house? What gave it such a significance? Resident—Well, there's been something uncanny about it from the beginning. Even when it was built it didn't exceed the contractor's estimate.—Puck.

A Continuous Performance.

"Our baby gives us considerable trouble. Yells unless he has his own way."

"Ours yells anyhow. You don't know what trouble is."—Washington Herald.

Something Wrong.

Billy—Huh! I bet you didn't have a good time at your birthday party yesterday. Willie—I bet I did. Billy—Then why ain't you sick today?—Philadelphia Record.

There is no friendship between those associated in power. He who rules will always be impatient of an associate.—Lucan.

PORTABLE SCHOOLS ARE PROVIDED FOR.

The Elizabeth Board of Education held an adjourned meeting last night to finish its business of the present year. Bills were passed and the report of the superintendent of schools was received. Resolutions were adopted authorizing the borrowing of funds in anticipation of the receipt of the State school money, and authorizing the payment of money on account of the erection of portable schools in Elizabeth.

The meeting last night was different from the last usually held in a calendar year because the present board will hold over until February 1, next, on account of the change from an elective to an appointive board. Two members of the present board, however, will retire January 1, because of their election to City Council. They are Commissioners Butler and Cummings.

IS HELD ON CHARGE OF ILLEGALLY HOLDING GIRL.

On the charge of illegally detaining Rosie, the 10-year-old daughter of Florian Kutcher, of New York, Julius Kopchantis was held by Justice of the Peace Charles W. Sedam at New Brunswick yesterday morning.

The girl's father, who alleged that she had been kidnapped three years ago by Kopchantis, whose wife was a sister of Kutcher's first wife, failed to appear yesterday to claim the girl and she is still with her aunt. The girl declares she will never return to her father. The aunt lives at Bonhamtown, near New Brunswick.

Church Has Golden Jubilee.

The fiftieth anniversary of the consecration of the Episcopal Church of St. John the Evangelist was celebrated at New Brunswick yesterday. In the morning communion services were held and at night addresses were given by the Rev. Dr. Baker, of Princeton; the Rev. E. B. Joyce, rector of Christ church, New Brunswick, and the Rev. W. Dutton Dale, of St. George's church, Rumson, formerly of St. John's, New Brunswick. The Rev. E. W. Hall is now the rector in charge.

Ancient Puffs and Switches.

The Greek, Egyptian, Carthaginian and Roman ladies of twenty-five centuries ago made us of the most astonishing quantities of borrowed hair, and the Roman women of the time of Augustus were especially pleased when they could outdo their social rivals by piling upon their heads a greater tower of additional tresses. They also arranged curls formally around the head. An extensive commerce in human hair was carried on, and after the conquest of Gaul blond hair such as grew originally on the heads of German girls along the Rhine became very fashionable in Rome. Caesar did not disdain to mix a little commercialism with his military enterprises and collected a vast amount of hair from the vanquished Gauls, which he sent to market at Rome, and in the Roman provinces a cropped head was regarded as a badge of slavery or at least of subjection. The hairdressers of Rome were persons of real importance and charged exorbitant prices for forming the hair into fanciful devices, such as harps, wreaths and diadems.—New York Herald.

The Prince's Majority.

The famous "mad" king of Bavaria, Louis II., and Prince Otto, his brother, were brought up with great strictness and simplicity. Their father, Maximilian II., an excellent constitutional king but in private life not particularly genial, allowed them no pocket money but what they earned by good marks at their lessons, on the modest scale of 1 pfennig per mark, and he would fine them a thaler without compunction if they were reported idle. Their table was more frugal than that of the sons of most country gentlemen. When Louis attained his majority at eighteen he was provided with an establishment of his own and sat down on the first day of his emancipation to his usual dinner—one dish of meat and some cheese.

"Am I now my own master?" he asked with a smile of his servants.

"Yes, sir," was the answer.

"Then," said the prince gleefully, "you may bring me some chicken and a mehlspeisen (pudding)."

Suicides at $100 Each.

A gentleman who lived a number of years in the city of Amoy, in China, told me that he could secure any number among the common people of that town to commit suicide for $100 apiece. As human nature is the same everywhere, he explained that as we may find many who will lay down their lives for their country and whom we highly honor on that account, so an ordinary Chinaman is willing thus to die for the benefit of his children in order that they may worship him afterward as an ancestor who died for their benefit. This explains also that noble reverence for their parents which the Chinese display, because their parents will soon be endowed with all the mysterious powers of the next world.—W. H. Thomson, M. D., LL.D., in "Life, Death and Immortality."

Pronunciation In Ireland.

Many persons seem to see, or to hear, rather, something to be amused at in the soft Irish brogue. As a matter of fact, most of the words of the Irish "dialect" are not Irish at all, but the purest of English—English a trifle antiquated, it is true, but nevertheless the real thing. The ears of Milton, Dryden, Spenser and Chaucer would not have been surprised to hear an Irishman speak of "a rough say" or "a clane shirt." At the court of good Queen Bess the cultured Englishman carefully garnished his conversation with "goolde" rings and brave "swoordes" and bored his friends with accounts of the smart sayings of the "childre" at "hoom." This was the English originally imported into Ireland by the cultured Irish, and the Irish have found it good enough to preserve.—Chicago Tribune.

Granulated Butter.

The Chinese preserve their eggs indefinitely by drying them, the yolks and whites being first separated and then each reduced to powder by evaporation. In India butter is treated in much the same way, so that it never becomes stale and may be kept fresh for a hundred years. The butter is boiled till all the water and curds are got rid of and nothing remains but clear oil. When the oil cools into a solid it is granulated and in this form will remain fresh indefinitely. This is what they call ghee, and ghee is nothing more or less than dried butter.—Chicago Journal.

The Other Kind.

"As you don't seem to know what you'd like for your birthday, Freddie," said his mother, "here's a printed list of presents for a good little boy."

Freddie read over the list and then said:

"Mother, haven't you a list for a bad little boy?"—Ladies' Home Journal.

Safe.

Flubdub—Why have you never married, Singleton? Singleton—Well, the women have always regarded me as an unfortunate fellow who wasn't bad enough to need reforming or good enough to make a desirable husband.—Life.

Hamlet.

"I maintain that Shakespeare really meant Hamlet for an actor."

"How can you prove it?"

"Because he was so anxious to see the ghost walk."—Exchange.

Something Just as Good.

Peddler—Can I sell you a watchdog, mister? Pedestrian—Don't need one, my friend. I've the wolf at my door.—Exchange.

Paint that Stays Painted

That has been my slogan for years. I aim to do the best possible painting—using only the best materials that the manufacturers can furnish, and employing the most skilled mechanics that can be procured. I stand back of every job I do, and when I am allowed to use my own judgment in regard to the best method of doing it, I will gladly make good any work that by any chance proves defective.

CLEMENS THE BOY

The Budding Humorist Was the Terror of His Mother.

HE YEARNED TO BE A PIRATE

Cruising the Mississippi, Fishing Swimming and Marauding Struck Him as the Ideal Life—The Stick He Selected For His Own Whipping.

Mark Twain the boy was leader of a band of young incorrigibles, according to Albert Bigelow Paine, Twain's secretary and biographer, who in Harper's tells something of their juvenile goings on:

His mother declared that he gave her more trouble than all the other children put together.

"He drives me crazy with his didoes when he is in the house," she used to say, "and when he is out of it I am expecting every minute that some one will bring him home half dead."

He did, in fact, achieve the first of his "nine narrow escapes from drowning" about this time and was pulled out of the river one afternoon and brought home in a limp and unpromising condition. When with mullein tea and castor oil she had restored him to activity she said:

"I guess there wasn't much danger. People born to be hanged are safe in water."

She declared she was willing to pay somebody to take him off her hands for a part of each day and try to teach him manners.

Besides his mother, who had to contend with the bad boy, was his schoolteacher, a certain Miss Horr. Mr. Paine tells how unlike to a bed of roses was her lot.

Miss Horr received 25 cents a week for each pupil and opened her school with prayer after which came a chapter of the Bible, with explanations and the rules of conduct. Then the A B C class was called, because its recital was a hand to hand struggle, requiring no preparation.

The rules of conduct that first day interested little Sam. He calculated how much he would need to trim in to sail close to the danger line and still avoid disaster. However, he made a miscalculation during the forenoon and received warning. A second offense would mean punishment. He did not mean to be caught the second time, but he had not learned Miss Horr yet and was presently startled by being commanded to go out and bring a stick for his own correction.

This was certainly disturbing. It was sudden, and then he did not know much about the selection of sticks. Jane Clemens had usually used her hand. It required a second command to get him headed in the right direction, and he was a trifle dazed when he got outside. He had the forests of Missouri to select from, but choice was difficult. Everything looked too big and competent. Even the smallest switch had a wiry, discouraging look. Across the way was a cooper shop with a good many shavings outside. One had blown across and lay just in front of him. It was an inspiration. He picked it up and, solemnly entering the schoolroom, meekly handed it to Miss Horr.

Perhaps Miss Horr's sense of humor prompted forgiveness, but discipline must be maintained.

"Samuel Langhorne Clemens," she said (he had never heard it all strung together in that ominous way), "I am ashamed of you! Jimmy Dunlap, go bring in a switch for Sammy." And Jimmy Dunlap went, and the switch was of a sort to give the little boy an immediate and permanent distaste for school. He informed his mother when he went home at noon that he did not care for school; that he had no desire to be a great man; that he preferred to be a pirate or an Indian and scalp or drown such people as Miss Horr.

Young Sam conceived the notion that a pirate's life would be joyous and, with a couple of pals, cruised the Mississippi.

Some of their expeditions were innocent enough. They often cruised up to Turtle island, about two miles above Hannibal, and spent the day feasting. You could have loaded a car with turtles and their eggs up there and there were quantities of mussels and plenty of fish. Fishing and swimming were their chief pastimes, with general marauding for adventure. Where the railroad bridge now ends on the Missouri side was their favorite swimming hole—that and along Bear creek, a secluded, limpid water with special interests of its own. Sometimes at evening they swam across to Glasscock's island, the rendezvous of Tom Sawyer's "Black Avengers" and the hiding place of Huck and Nigger Jim. Once, though this was considerably later, when he was sixteen, Sam Clemens swam across to the Illinois side and then turned and swam back again without landing, a distance of at least two miles as he had to go. He was seized with a cramp on the return trip. His legs became useless, and he was obliged to make the remaining distance with his arms. It was a hardy life they led, and it is not recorded that they ever did any serious damage, though they narrowly missed it sometimes.

INSPECTING NEW HOME, WOMAN FINDS A SUICIDE.

When Mrs. Hyman Frank, of Bayonne, went to Elizabeth last night to meet her husband and inspect a new home that he had rented at 422 Court street, she found him dead on the floor of one of the rooms with the gas flowing from an open jet. A note lay beside the dead man in which he asked the forgiveness of his family for his suicide. So far no reason for the deed has been given.

Dr. M. Frank, of 16 West Twenty-second street, Bayonne, a son of the dead man, with whom he lived, was notified of his father's suicide and hurried to Elizabeth. He declared that he could not account for the self killing.

UNION COUNTY SOLDIER DEAD 33 DURING YEAR.

At the meeting of the Board of Freeholders Saturday, a report will be received from General J. Madison Drake, as supervisor of soldiers monuments. He will show that during the year there were thirty-three deaths of soldiers and sailors in Union county and that funeral expenses were paid for eight of these. He caused the removal from potter's field of the body of John Brinckerhoff, who died in Westfield. The body was interred in the soldiers plot in Fairview cemetery.

INTOXICATED MAN HAD MONEY IN ALL POCKETS.

Police Judge Owen P. Mahon and Detective James Ward were proceeding to the Alexian Brothers' Hospital, Elizabeth, yesterday on an errand when they saw an intoxicated man at Catherine street and Elizabeth avenue. They took charge of him and it was found that he had more than $100 in his pockets. The money was in every pocket and it varied in denominations from a $10 bill to a penny.

BORO HIGH FIVE 50, BOUND BROOK HIGH 35

The North Plainfield High School basketball five defeated Bound Brook High School team at Debele Hall, yesterday afternoon, the final score being 50 to 35. The contest was the first one this season for the championship of Somerset county. The Bound Brook team put up a hard fight, but the borough boys were able to keep in the lead from the start.

The game was marked by much rough playing on the part of the visitors and there were a number of fine shots made on both sides. Dunning carried off the honors for N. P. H. S., getting nine field goals. C. Taylor also made some difficult goals, scoring 16 points for the borough team. Seven of the twelve fouls called on Bound Brook counted as points for the borough boys.

Freeza played the best game for Bound Brook, scoring seven field goals and five goals from foul. The lineup:

N. P. H. S.—Forwards, W. Taylor, C. Taylor; center, Dunning; guards, Townley, Burner.

Bound Brook—Forwards, Matthews, Neagle; center, Hegney; guards, Freeza, Capona.

Referee, Webster; scorer, Kenney; time of halves twenty minutes.

MATHEWSON LOSES LESS WEIGHT, SAYS BROWN.

Mordecai Brown, the Chicago Cubs' three-fingered pitcher, says he sometimes loses as much as eight pounds in a game whne he pitches against the Giants. "It's not only the work," he says, "but the worry. I tell you, worry during a ball game can reduce you as fast as anything else. Why, I've known slender pitchers like Tom Hughes, for instance, to lose five or six pounds in an ordinary game. Christy Mathewson loses less weight in a game than any other pitcher I know of. There is one exception, however, and that is when he pitches against the Cubs.'

Lynch Will Confer With Johnson.

President Lynch, of the National League, stated yesterday that at the meeting of the National Commission on January 3 he would confer with President Johnson, of the American League, and decide on a date for the joint meeting of the rules committees of the two leagues. Mr. Lynch declared that there would be no meeting of the joint schedule committee in New ork this week, as was reported.

COMING MATCHES IN ELKS' BOWLING LEAGUE.

No matches are scheduled to be rolled in the Elks' League until Thursday, January 4, when Plainfield will roll at Rahway, New Brunswick at Hoboken and Jersey City will shoot at Newark. The following night Queensboro will bowl at Rutherford. Tuesday, January 9, the leading New York five are scheduled with Plainfield here.

Joe Jeanette Wins.

Outweighing his opponent by nearly 20 pounds, Joe Jeanette defeated Jack ("Twin") Sullivan in a 10-round bout at the Buffalo Athletic Association. It was the negro's fight from the third round, but the elusive "Twin" put up a great defense and occasionally sent across rights and lefts to the face that caused the negro to be wary. In the last two rounds Jeannette tried hard for a knockout, and several times had Sullivan clinging to the ropes or doing a Marathon to evade his onslaughts. Three thousand persons saw the fight.

Boxing Not for Girls.

Boxing among the girls of the Los Angeles High School was put under a ban yesterday. Dr. E. C. Beach, physical director of the city high schools, said it was not the aim of the instructors to turn out a generation of feminine fighters and there was no desire to develop an unnaturally combative disposition, "which would interfere with the natural laws of the home." "Suppose a pretty girl's nose was broken while boxing?" asked Dr. Beach. "It probably would mean disfigurement and might seriously injure her social prospects."

Carl Morris Trims Kennedy.

Carl Morris, the Oklahoma fireman, helped the "white hope" cause by defeating Tom Kennedy by a big margin in New York last night. Morris was unable to finish Kennedy, but had him in bad shape at the final bell. Kennedy had some advantage in the early rounds, but Morris' superior strength soon told, and in the final rounds he had Kennedy on the defense. Kennedy saved himself from being knocked out by clinching and stalling tactics.

Coombs Recovers from Injury.

Pitcher Jack Coombs will be his old self when the Athletics take the field for another campaign this spring. The club physician has pronounced Coombs completely recovered from the injury he received in the last world's series, and declares the twirler will be as good as ever physically. It was feared that the injury might permanently handicap the Athletics' pitcher, but he is assured by the surgeons that he is physically as good as ever.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

Theodore Roosevtl was not counted a very great theatre-goer when he was the president of the United States, but when a play struck him favorably he invariably "took it in twice." That is what he is reported to have done when the "Man of the Hour" played Washington to "standing room only" for three weeks. He scowled on Herrigan the "Boss" and applauded Alderman Phalen of the 8th. Mr. Roosevelt said it was the greatest play he had ever seen. The "Man of the Hour" is a great moral lesson for any young man contemplating going into politics. Every character in this great play can be seen in every city in America. Every city has its Herrigan and its Phalen. There is also a very pretty love story running all through the play. The company producing this great natural play this season is a very good one and includes such well known names as C. L. Phillips, William Kent, Edna Lyman and many other well known names. "The Man of the Hour" will be presented here on New Year's, afternoon and night.

Liebler & Co. have supplied May Irwin, who will soon be seen in this city in the new farcical satire, "She Knows Better Now," with a cast of players of much greater distinction than is usually seen in a farcical comedy. Among the players with Miss Irwin are Franklyn Roberts, last season leading man with Olga Nethersole; Muriel Hope, one of the favorite players of the Irving Place theatre when Heinrich Conreid was directing its artistic destinies; Hubert Wilke and James Bradbury, two actors who have appeared in many notable American successes, and Mary K. Taylor, one who has been in Miss Irwin's company for several seasons. Miss Irwin will appear at the Plainfield theatre on Friday night, January 5.

"The Spring Maid," with her joyous comedy and alluring music, has been booked for an engagement at the Plainfield theatre for Monday night, January 8. The announcement that this tremendous New York success is coming will attract widespread attention from all lovers of opera in this city. When "The Spring Maid" went into the Liberty theatre in New York, last season, its immediate success was startling. Within a few days all New York was hummin "Day Dreams," "Two Little Love Bees" and "The Foundain Fay" song, and for two seasons the "400" filled the theatre at every performance. Nothing of such class has been presented in the metropolis in a decade and it is a matter of congratulation that this city will be among the first to see it. Under the direction of Werba and Luescher "The Spring Maid" will be presented here with a notable cast headed by the dainty Russian prima donna, Gene Luneska, and the celebrated English comedian, Charles McNaughton. The latter has been brought back from abroad by Werba and Luescher, after being loaned to the English company in which he created the principal comedy role. It is in this role that he will be seen here.

COUNCIL'S ROUTINE

Retiring Governing Body Finishes Up the City's Business For 1911.

ANNUAL REPORTS PRESENTED.

Some Matters Referred to Incoming Body—Health Boards Draws Attention to Vacancies in That Body.

The final meeting of the Common Council for 1911 was held last night, when reports for the year from the different heads of departments were presented and numerous matters were referred by various committees to the 1912 body and in fact all business for the year was closed up, including the adoption of the minutes of the meeting.

The Board of Health called attention to the fact that in addition to the two vacancies which will occur in that body January 1 next,there is another one that has been allowed to exist this year. This matter, together with a communication from the Plainfield-Union Water company, acknowledging the receipt of a letter; also a protest from Elmer R. Miller and against the plan to allow the Standard Oil Company to erect a large gasolene tank near Rock avenue, and the resolution from the Board of Health opposing the plan to enlarge the sewage beds, were all referred to next year's Council.

Building Inspector T. O. Doane reported the granting of twelve permits during the past month, and in his annual report he stated that a total of 296 permits were granted, 204 being for frame buildings and the balance for all kinds of material. Some of these permits covered as many as twenty-four buildings.

Horace G. Adams, clerk of the District court, reported receipts of $86.19 for the past month and expenditures of $24.69, leaving a balance of $64.50. The annual reports of the city judge, W. G. DeMeza, playground commission, alms committee, city physician, Dr. C. B. Lufburrow; Fire Chief T. O. Doane, City Treasurer W. F. Arnold, committees on streets, sewers, shade trees work and Chief of Police P. S. Kiely, were all filed. Mr. Buxton moved that the report of the city treasurer be published as usual according to law.

Mr. Buxton reported back a communication from Corporation Counsel W. M. Stillman, a petition from E. M. French regarding the return of purchase price on property at 1621-1633 South avenue, and they were referred to next year's Council.

Mr. Gloak offered a resolution, which was adopted, authorizing the payment of damages in excess of benefit in the matter of the opening and laying out of Astor place, between Hunter and Clinton avenues, according to the findings of the commissions, and Street Commissioner A. J. Gavett was empowered to tender the various amounts, and to act in conjunction with City Treasurer W. F. Arnold under the advice of Corporation Counsel W. M. Stillman, and Tax Collector W. R. Townsend was also authorized to collect and receive the assessment from the affected property-owners.

Councilman D. W. Taylor also reported back a number of matters from his committees and they were referred to the 1912 body. After all bills were reported correct, they were paid and the minutes of the meeting were read and adopted, which was followed by adjournment.

DANCE AT PARK CLUB FOR MISSES ARNOLD

One of the charming social affairs of the holiday season was the dance given at the Park Club last night by Mr. and Mrs. William F. Arnold for their daughters, the Misses Marguerite F. and Edith M. Arnold. The affair was attended by about eighty young people from the city and the borough. The clubhouse was resplendent in its holiday decorations, adding much to the enjoyment of the guests.

There was a popular program of dances, music for which was furnished by Muller's orchestra, of Brooklyn, and in addition there were a number of encores. During the evening there was an intermission, and an elaborate supper was served by Mrs. Henry Johnson, after which dancing was continued until a late hour.

MONROE AVE. M. E. S. S. ENTERTAINMENT

The Sunday school of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church enjoyed its Christmas entertainment last night. Superintendent Walter McGee was in charge. The church was decorated by John McCormick, there being a large illuminated star over the pulpit, from which greens were suspended in festoons. The entertainment was furnished by a professional magician from New York and he delighted everyone. The school also joined in singing carols, after which there was a distribution of gifts.

Sunday morning Rev. C. S. Kemble will exchange with Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, of the First M. E. church, and in the evening a watch night service will be held at the Monroe Avenue church, beginning at 9 o'clock with the Epworth League in charge. There will be greetings from former pastors, including Rev. Dr. T. S. Henderson, of New York; Rev. H. B. Munson, of Brooklyn, and others.

GRACE CHURCH SCHOOL HAS CHRISTMAS TREE

The Christmas entertainment for the seniors of the Grace church Sunday school was held last night from 6 to 9 o'clock and consisted of a supper in the basement of the church which was followed by the exercises in the auditorium in the parish house. The tree, handsomely lighted, was presided over by Miss Florence Stewart. Candy was distributed to each pupil and the rector, Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, was presented with a cut glass taboret, while his assistant, Rev. John G. Currier, received a gold mounted desk set. Pupils who had attained distinction in the school during the year for attendance and application to lessons also received awards of merit.

Through the generosity of Seymour Perkens, a splendid program by professional entertainers was provided consisting of vocal and instrumental music, prestidigitation and monologues. This was followed by dancing. The committee in charge comprised J. P. Nolting, George F. Edwards, Henry C. Finch, Seymour Perkins, Mrs. Avery and Mrs. Peterkin.

The affair was held at the home of Mrs. Marie Kuenlen, of 912 West Front street. The evening was spent in singing hymns and relating Christian experiences. Miss Philapina Sauermilch and Edward Krause gave several selections on the piano.

A purse of money and many other useful things were presented to Mr. Schneegas and his wife, and during the evening supper was served. Mr. and Mrs. John Wirth donated a handsome birthday cake. The guests numbering about twenty-five were from Dunellen, Scotch Plains, North Plainfield and this city.

The members of the Sunday-school of the Netherwood Reformed church had an enjoyable Christmas entertainment last night. The school was in charge of Horace J. Martin, Sr., who directed the children in the singing of carols. The main school gave recitations and also a sketch in two acts entitled, "Santa Claus and the Christmas 'Chimneys." There were also exercises by the primary department. Dr. G. T. Longbotham made a fine Santa Claus and delighted the children.

Rev. G. H. Donovan, of Rocky Hill, made a short address during the evening. In the distribution of gifts, Mrs. P. H. Woods was remembered by the primary department of which she is superintendent, while the consistory gave Miss Iona Wood a brooch in appreciation of her services as organist and pianist. Claude Gonod, superintendent of the school, had charge of the program of the evening.

BEALS' XMAS MORNING PLEASES THE CHILDREN

The feature of the Christmas entertainment at the First Presbyterian church, last night, was an original sketch in two acts by Allen E. Beals, entitled "Christmas Morning." It was presented in a clever manner by Miss Addie Dietrich, Mrs. C. E. Herring, Mrs. Freeman Shotwell, Allen E. Beals, Alvin E. Hoagland and Elston Hoagland.

In the first act everyone getsin the wrong stocking in searching for gifts and the tangle following is amusing. All trouble is straightened out in the second act. Other features of the entertainment were selections by an orchestra, banjo selections by A. A. Farland, the well-known banjo artist, after which there was a distribution of candies and other gifts among the members of the school.

WON'T PAY LAWYER

Common Council Refuses to 'O.K.' W.S.Angleman's Bill For Legal Services.

FOR A CITY DEPARTMENT.

Chairman Herbert Buxton, of Finance Committee, Says Work Performed was Unauthorized Suit May Be the Result.

The unpaid bill of Winfield S. Angleman against the city amounting to $150, for legal services rendered the poor department, was brought to the attention of the Council at its final meeting of the year, last night, by Mr. Buxton, the retiring chairman of the finance committee, and upon his motion, it was voted not to pay the bill.

This action was taken after Mr. Buxton explained that the bill had been received on December 4, had been referred to the finance committee, and then Corporation Counsel W. M. Stillman. An opinion was read from Mr. Stillman in which he said that unless Mr. Angelman's services were engaged by the city, it was not liable, but in his opinion any individual who engaged his services without authority would be liable.

Mr. Buxton then read a copy of a resolution adopted last February authorizing the finance committee to engage counsel from time to time as the occasion demanded. This action was taken because the city was without a corporation counsel. He had no recollection of engaging Mr. Angleman and he then moved that the bill be returned and it be not paid.

Mr. Gloak asked the chairman of the finance committee if it was not true that the chairman of the alms committee, F. L. Montgomery, engaged Mr. Angleman, to which Mr. Buxton replied; "I don't know."

The services performed by Mr. Angleman were for the poor department he having appeared in court to represent the city in several cases. He rendered an itemized bill showing that it covered work actually performed in court, and he further stated that the city is now receiving stated amounts from individuals as a result of the settlement of the cases in favor of the city.

Mr. Montgomery at a previous meeting stated publicly that he had approved Mr. Angleman's bill. Mr. Buxton said last night that Mr. Montgomery had informed him that he did not recall the adoption of the resolution by the Council authorizing the finance committee to engage counsel, and although that action was taken in February, Mr. Buxton produced a letter written to him by Mr. Montgomery in March last, in which he requested the finance committee to furnish the alms committee with counsel. Mr. Buxton explained that afterward his committee met and authorized Gilbert Collins to act as counsel.

Unless the bill is paid Mr. Angleman will take legal steps. This was intimated last night. It is believed that the matter will come up again early in the New Year.

MISSION BAND HEARS OF WORK IN ALASKA

For the entertainment of the Junior Mission Band of the First Baptist church, Mrs. Reuben Knox gave an exhibition of Alaskan pictures at her home on Rockview avenue yesterday afternoon. Edgar Fountain operated the projectoscope. The subject of the winter's study is Alaska and the work of the band is to be devoted to an orphanage at Wood Island, Alaska. Many of the pictures were kindly loaned by Mrs. J. M. Whiton, who during the past year made a tour of Alaska.

Preceding and following the exhibition of pictures, instrumental music was delightfully rendered by members of the band, the Misses Emma Charlotte and Elsie Verschuur, who play respectively the piano, violin and 'cello and Misses Dorothy and Gladys Lee, who gave piano duets and were also accompanied by Miss Charlotte Vercheur with the violin.

Tea was served at the conclusion of the entertainment and boxes of candy were given the members of the band.

COUNCIL DEADLOCKED ON 2 APPOINTMENTS?

The members comprising the Common Council for 1912 held another caucus last night, following the final meeting of the old body, but according to several members who were interviewed today it was just as unproductive of results as those previously held.

There is a well defined rumor that there is a deadlock in the new Council in reference to the selection of a city clerk to succeed James T. MacMurray and an overseer of the poor to succeed A. D. Ayres. One member declines to commit himself one way or the other, while five members favor Mr. MacMurray and Mr. Ayers, while a like number favor H. L. DeForest for overseer of the poor, and Robert L. Lee for city clerk. One member said today: "I guess the matter will have to go over until next year and be fought out on the floor of the Council."

FRIENDS' INNOVATION; HAVE REAL SANTA CLAUS

Santa Claus, impersonated by Norman Stringham, made his first appearance at the Christmas entertainment of the First-Day Sunday-school of the Religious Society of Friends at the meeting house on Watchung avenue, last night. There was also a Christmas tree laden with beautiful gifts for the children. This innovation of having a Santa Claus was greatly enjoyed by the children as well as the older ones, and Santa kept everyone in good humor.

Miss Mabel Vail, superintendent of the school, was in charge of the program, which included several recitations and concert readings, Oranges, candy, etc., were distributed and the members of the school were served with ice cream and cake in the upper room.

HIGH SCHOOL ALUMNI RECEPTION AND DANCE

"When We Were In School" was the theme of conversation in the Plainfield High School auditorium last night when the classes of 1908, 1909, 1910 and 1911 of that institution held a reunion, reception and dance. One hundred members of the former classes spent a most enjoyable evening renewing old acquaintances and reviving once more their former school days. Each of the four classes was well represented, the 1908 delegation being the largest.

Dancing was the feature of the evening, twenty-two dances being on the program which started after an informal reception and handshaking. Miss Katharine F. Ball, who was one of the most popular teachers on the P. H. S. faculty during the student days of the reuniting classes, chaperoned the affair.

A "Paul Jones" in the first half of the program enabled everyone to meet everyone else and thus make the evening a pleasant one. The eighteenth dance was a cotillon, led by a member of '09 and one from 1910. The music was furnished by a three piece orchestra under the direction of Charles Suhr, while a colation was served between the eleventh and twelfth dances by Benjamin Evans. Orlando Lounsberry, '08, and Walter Knowlton, '09, were the committee on arrangements and it was largely through their efforts that the affair was a success.

Mrs. Marie DeMolli, wife of David DeMolli, the caterer on West Front street, died at 5 o'clock this morning, following an illness of five months of a complication of diseases. She was born in Italy, her maiden name being Marie Scaltriti.

Mrs. DeMolli had been a resident of this country about twenty years, and had lived in this city about seven years. She was married eleven years ago in New York. During her residence here Mrs. DeMolli made many friends. She is survived by her husband. Arrangements for the funeral will be announced later.

The general disbursements aggregated $162.80.

LOTUS GLEE CLUB PROVIDED PROGRAM

The Lotus Glee Club, of which Charles L. Lewis, of this city, is a member, furnished the Christmas entertainment for the Sunday-school of the Crescent Avenue church last night. The quartet gave one of its best programs and responded to several encores. Frank Smith was at the piano, his accompaniment being a feature.

Following the entertainment there was a social hour and ice cream and cake were served by a committee from the school. In the afternoon the primary department, of which William D. Murray is the superintendent, enjoyed its Christmas festivities. The little ones played games and had a genuine good time, after which there was a distribution of gifts and refreshments were served.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF MRS. ELIZA B. REED

The funeral service of Mrs. Eliza Breck Reed, aged 97 years, widow of Dr. Samuel P. Reed, was held at 2:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon at Grace church. There was a large attendance of relatives and friends, and all the children were presentexcept two sons, one of whom is ill and the other is in California and could not reach here in time for the service. There were a number of beautiful floral tributes, expressive of the high regard in which Mrs. Reed was held by those who knew her in this city.

Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of the church, conducted the service, and the choir, under the direction of S. Frederick Smith, organist, sang Rock of Ages, Jesus, Lover of My Soul, and Forever with the Lord. The remains were placed in the receiving vault at Hillside cemetery and the burial will take place later, possibly at Mrs. Reed's former home in Bristol, Pa.

BUXTON'S FAREWELL SPEECH AS CITY FATHER

Herbert Buxton, one of the retiring members of the 1911 Common Council, was calleh upon to make a speech just before a final adjournment was taken at the meeting last night. He said that in the words of a former Governor of Illinois, "I welcome the retirement which seems assured me."

"There have been little scraps during the six years I have been a councilman," said Mr. Buxton, "but hard feelings quickly disappeared. As chairman of the finance committee for four years I wish to thank the members who have stood by me and assisted in carrying on the city's work. The city is fortunate in having a man like City Treasurer W. F. Arnold, and should be congratulated in having such a thorough, accurate and efficient official.

"I am sorry that the city clerk is not here for I would like to say a word to him. According to the present situation his office seems to be a little to the 'Lee-ward.'"

Mr. Buxton's reference to the absence of City Clerk MacMurray led President Tolles to remark that the stenographer was present and he could take down anything that the member cared to say regarding Mr. MacMurray. This remark brought forth a hearty laugh among his colleagues.

HUNT FOR PIERSON

Father of Missing Man Believes He Wandered Away While Temporarily Unbalanced.

SEARCH IN N. Y. HOSPITALS.

Another Theory is That Butcher Met With Foul Play—Happy at Home and His Business in Good Shape.

Nothing has yet been heard by the family or friends of U. Grant Pierson, of East Fifth street, whose mysterious disappearance from home last Tuesday morning was told of exclusively in The Daily Press yesterday. The attention of the local police was called this morning to his absence by Mrs. Pierson and although the machinery of the department was set in motion at once in an endeavor to locate the missing man, there has not been sufficient time passed to receive reports from other cities where a search is being made.

When seen this morning, Mr. Pierson's father said that his son has been suffering from nervous and stomach trouble for several months and he fears that the extra worry of his large Christmas trade has temporarily unbalanced his mind. With this as his belief the elder Pierson went to New York today for the purpose of visiting all hospitals and while there will seek the aid of the New York police.

A number of business houses in Philadelphia with whom Mr. Pierson traded and where he was known, have also been communicated with in the hope that they can assist. He purchased most of his Christmas poultry in that city and his family think that he might again have gone there to lay in his New Year's supply. As to the business, the father said that there was no cause for worry as his son's accounts are all in good shape and there are no large outstanding debts to upset him.

It is known that when he left home Mr. Pierson had a large amount of money with him, and spoke of it to his wife upon leaving home saying that he wanted to get it banked as soon as possible in order to be rid of the worry of carrying it about. For this reason his relatives fear that had this fact been known he might have met with foul play, but this version is not given as much credence as the fear that he is demented and unable to tell who he is or who his friends are.

Pierson's aged parents and wife are as much at a loss to account for his act as his most slight acquaintance, as his home life was ideal they say. They are nearly prostrated with grief, but believe that he will be heard from soon.

WESTFIELDER'S AUTO STRIKES A SMALL BOY.

While crossing South avenue, near his home, this morning, James Erikson, eight years old today, was hit by an automobile driven by John Hinel, chauffeur for Edward F. Lowe, of Westfield. Mrs. Lowe and the chauffeur were the only occupants of the car. She alighted immediately after the accident and taking the injured lad into her car ordered Hinel to drive to Muhlenberg Hospital.

Examination of the boy's hurts at that institution showed that they are not serious and he will be able to go home in a few days. Mr. Lowe was sent for and he reported the accident to police headquarters in person, going his driver's security for appearance if wanted. According to eyewitnesses young Erikson was hid from view of the automobile and prevented from seeing it by a coal wagon. His worst injury consists of a badly skinned face and hip.

An enjoyable Christmas celebration was held last night by the members of the Baptist Sunday school and their friends. Santa Claus was present to lend tone to the affair, it being reported that he would include the Scotch Plains school on his return north and he did not disappoint the little ones who had looked forward anxiously to the visit. The church looked pretty with its tasty decorations of holly and greens and the program rendered, consiting of vocal and instrumental music and recitations, was enjoyed by all. Presents there were in plenty, the pastor, Rev. Franklin K. Mathiews, being surprised by receiving a generous purse from his people. Mrs. Mathiews was also remembered as well as Martin A. Korff, the musical director. Altogether 1911 Christmas was one of the best the old historic Sunday school has held in some time.

FAVORS THE ABOLITION OF ALL DIVORCE LAWS.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Dec. 29.—"Abolish the divorce laws of Michigan," is the advice of Judge F. D. Kinne, who has sat on the Circuit bench of this county for the last quarter of a century.

"Of late," says Judge Kinne, "the privilege of divorce has been so misused and I have witnessed such flagrant disregard for truth, morality and decency that my former convictions have experienced considerable modification—if not revolution.

"In my opinion there is just one way to solve this problem. Let the next Legislature enact a law that never again for any cause whatsoever shall there be granted a divorce from the bonds of matrimony in the State of Michigan. In certain cases let there be a decree of separation, but no dissolution of the marriage contract."

NEW POSTOFFICE FOR JERSEY CITY STARTED.

The work of excavating for the new Jersey City Postoffice at York, Montgomery and Washington streets, began yesterday. It is understood that negotiations for the purchase of another piece of ground on the Montgomery street side will be started within a few days. This building is owned by Randolph Perkins and is known as 47 Montgomery street.

Governor Dix at Albany asked for the immediate resignation of Dr. Alvah H. Doty as Health Officer of the Port of New York.

NEW JERSEY SECOND IN POTTERY OUTPUT

Washington, D. C., Dec. 29.—New Jersey ranks second in the Union in the annual value of its pottery products with $8,588,455, being exceeded only by Ohio with $14,294,712. In the other clay-working industry, brick and tile, New Jersey stands fifth with $9,245,854, being outranked by Pennsylvania, $19,814,355; Ohio, $17,231,236; Illinois, $14,331,414, and New York, $9,778,288. These figures are from a report of the United States Geological Survey on mineral resources for 1910. Products of the clay-working industries in the United States last year reached the largest value ever attained, $170,115,974, compared with $166,321,213 in 1909.

Imports of pottery increased but little and the proportion of domestic production to consumption, 77 per cent., was the highest ever recorded. As late as 1875 the domestic production was but 15 per cent. of the consumption. The increase in the price of common brick was a feature of the industry in 1910, the most marked example being in Illinois, where the price advanced from $4.20 per 1,000 in 1909 to $5.62 in 1910. Every State and Territory, except Alaska and Hawaii, is a producer of burned clay.

The rapid growth of the clay working industries during the last ten years forms an interesting study. The total value of these products increased from $110,211,587 in 1901 to $170,115,974 in 1910, a gain of 54 per cent.

PASTORAL TIES DISSOLVED.

Permitting Rev. Dr. P. T. Pockman to accept a call to the Presbyterian church at Alden, N. Y., his relations with the First Reformed church of New Brunswick were dissolved at a meeting of the classis of New Brunswick, held Wednesday afternoon. Rev. E. F. Keator, of the Franklin Park Reformed church, presided as president of the classis.

A reception was given to Dr. and Mrs. Pockman at the church last night by the congregation. Next Sunday Dr. Pockman will preach his twenty-fifth year anniversary sermon as pastor of the First Reformed church. Early next month he will go to his new charge.

Poisoned By Tablets.

Hereafter, when he desires something to settle his stomach, James Nixon, of Washington, N. J., is not likely to take tablets given him by friends who collect those thrown around town as samples. He has been seriously ill as a result of taking two such tablets. A physician, who was called, stated that the "medicine" had poisoned the system.

AUTOISTS TAKE VICTIM TO HOSPITAL AND FLEE.

Crushed and mangled, a man who was identified as Frederick Schultz, a nurseryman, of Vaux Hall road and Valley street, Union Township, was carried into Orange Memorial Hospital, Orange, Wednesday night by three men, who went there in a racing auto. Schultz died a few minutes later and the trio managed to slip away without even having been asked their names or having the number of their machine taken.

It was through a premonition of his sister-in-law, Mrs. Mary Schultz, with whom the nurseryman lived, that his body was identified. The woman feared her brother-in-law would be killed at the time he left the house. When he had not returned at midnight she sent her son out to get some trace of his uncle, with instructions to call up the hospitals. The Orange institution was among those he called.

Who the autoists are that took Schultz to Memorial Hospital and where he was injured are what the police of Orange, South Orange and surrounding towns are trying to find out. Detectives Howard and Ducker, of the county prosecutor's staff, are also making investigations. It is believed that Schultz was struck in Springfield avenue, Hilton, by the auto which conveyed him to the hospital.

Willing to Divide.

Dr. H. W. Wiley, the food expert, was talking at a luncheon in Washington about a food adulterator, says the Washington Star.

"His first offer," said Dr. Wiley, "sounded, on the face of it, fair to the public, but it was in reality as unfair as the offer of the divorcee.

"A wife, after the divorce, said to her husband:

"'I am willing to let you have the baby half of the time.'

"'Good,' said he, rubbing his hands. 'Splendid!'

"'Yes,' she resumed, 'you may have him nights.'"

An Eye to the Future.

Hokus—Flubdub has moved out to Swamphurst so he can save enough money to go abroad for his health.

Pokus—Why, he hasn't anything the matter with him, has he?

Hokus—No. But he expects to have after he has lived out in Swamphurst for a while.—Puck.

Logical Conclusion.

"Ye dinna stop at the Curler's Arms the last time ye cam' up for the fushin' sir?"

"Quite right, but what makes you so certain?"

"Becouse yer gaun there this time."—Punch.

Must Wait Their Turn.

Wife—George, do you know that the children need new shoes?

Husband—So does the auto. The children will have to wait.—Puck.

APPEALS FOR AID IN PROTECTING GAME

Trenton, Dec. 29.—The annual report of the Fish and Game Commission, submitted to Governor Wilson yesterday, makes an appeal for the enforcement of existing laws to protect fish and game and particularly game birds, and recites what has been done in the way of stocking the waters of the State with the young of fish.

On the first proposition the commisioners, in their report, say:

"We ask of the people of the State their aid in our efforts to increase, thereby cheapening, the supply of fish and game, and for their assistance in the enforcement of the laws for the preservation and restoration of fish and game. Because of the unlimited slaughter of game in former years, and with the increased population, improved firearms, decreased cost of guns and ammunition, easy access to the former remote points through railroads, trolleys and automobiles and a general increase in the number of hunters, there is a yearly increasing necessity for the protection of our game by laws."

The commissioners do not consider it practicable to establish a joint fish hatchery and game farm. They favor a hatchery in North Jersey and a game farm in South Jersey.

Speaking of the stocking of waters the report says that during the past year 159,298 fish of all species were planted in the streams and lakes of the State. These included brook trout, black bass and white and yellow perch.

The board received during the year $58,270 in gunners' license fees and $7,130 in fines for violations of the fish and game laws.

Youthful Firebug Insane.

Frederick Smith, the Old Bridge boy, who confessed to burning the Asher Culver house, near that place, about a month ago, was taken to the State asylum at Trenton yesterday by Deputy Sheriff Houghton, of Middlesex county. He had been pronounced insane by County Physician Carroll, of Dayton, and Dr. J. Warren Rice, of New Brunswick.

White Fruit Cake.

One cup butter, two cups sugar, three cups of flour, one-half cup sweet milk, the whites of eight eggs, three teaspoonfuls baking powder, one-half pound of blanched almonds, one-half pound citron, one-half pound cocoanut—all sliced very thin and rolled in flour; one wine glassful of brandy.

Drowned in a roadside pool, the body of John McCarty, whose widow and three children live in the Oranges, was found about 7 o'clock yesterday morning midway between Bedminster and Pluckemin. He was sixty-five years old. Until recently McCarty was employed by William Moore, a contractor in Peapack, but lost his position owing to unsteady habits.

It is supposed that the man, wandering off the road, fell into the pool and could not extricate himself. His body was half submerged. Coroner Long, of Somerville, ordered the removal of the body to the undertaking rooms of George Layton, in Bedminster.

THIRD LEAGUE TO BE NEW JERSEY CORPORATION.

The promoters of the United States Baseball League are hard at work on their proposal to invade the field of organized baseball. They expect to file articles of incorporation next week in this State and will grant franchises to New York, Brooklyn, Washington, Pittsburgh, Chicago, Baltimore, Kansas City and Indianapolis.

In the first five cities that are mentioned, the major leagues are already established solidly. In New York and Chicago both major leagues have representation. Baltimore is now the exclusive territory of the International League, while Kansas City and Indianapolis belong to the American Association. It is stated that parks have been selected in each of the eight cities. Both the New York and Brooklyn plants will be located on Long Island, close to subway extensions.

Michigan Elks Plan League.

Plans for the organization of an Elks' State Baseball League in Michigan, which is expected to begin its existence next summer, have progressed so far that an eight-club circuit is thought to be assured. Saginaw, Bay City, Detroit, Kalamazoo, Manistee, Traverse City, Grand Rapids and Muskegon are named as probable members of the league. The promoters expect to have at least one game each week in each city in the circuit.

HERO MEDAL NO GOOD TO SPRING LAKE CLERK.

Washington, Dec. 29.—Hero medals are not passports to employment nor are promises of a $1,000 reward legal tender for board and lodging. With this thought in mind, Calvin C. Williams, once a hotel clerk at Spring Lake, N. J., where he rescued two girls from drowning three years ago, is walking the streets of Washington destitute and penniless.

In his breast pocket he carries a bronze medal for heroism, awarded him last May by the Carnegie hero fund, and with it a letter promising $1,000 reward "for a worthy purpose to be approved by the executive committee."

Williams, who is fifty-one years old, has been trying for several months to obtain the money to supply his needs and start a small lunch room, but thus far, he says, his appeals have not been answered. Friends are endeavoring to interest the Carnegie commission to expedite action.

Pastoral Relations Dissolved.

At a special session of the Presbytery of New Brunswick, held yesterday, Rev. Dr. Hugh B. MacCauley requested that his pastoral relations be severed with the Fourth church in order that he may devote his time as corresponding secretary of the Eastern District of the Federation Council of the United Churches of Christ in America. His main office will be in Philadelphia and the local pulpit will be declared vacant January 7. The serious illness was announced of Rev. Dr. Samuel McLanahan, formerly pastor of the Lawrenceville church, and now superintendent of synodical home mission work in New Jersey.

WORK ON STREETS DURING PRESENT YEAR

Following is the annual report of the Councilmanic street committee filed at last night's meeting of the city fathers:

Many of the city streets are macadamized for a width of only sixteen feet, leaving a dirt strip on each side. These strips are the cause of much expense and complaint, as they only look well when freshly scraped, and repeated scraping cuts them below grade, causing further complaint. We believe that the time has arrived for abandoning this type of construction and that, with few exceptions all streets should be paved or macadamized from curb to curb.

The macadam on a number of the streets has become too thin to sustain the present traffic loads, and was badly damaged last spring when the frost was coming out of the ground. While these streets are now in good condition, it is probable that in case many alternations of freezing and thawing should occur similar damage to that done last spring will result. All of these streets greatly need substantial resurfacing, using enough stone to give them a good crown and adequate depth of material. We recommend plain macadam for the lighter traveled residence streets; macadam with bituminous binder for all others except those adjoining the section now paved with brick, and that on these streets some form of more permanent pavement be laid.

Mention was made in the last annual street report, of "bleeding" in the asphalt roads constructed in 1909, requiring the addition of stone screenings. This trouble has practically ceased, and with slight repairs to level up the depressions, these streets will be very satisfactory.

Comment is sometimes made on the large amount appropriated each year for street repairs; it should be remembered, however, that much of the money placed at the disposal of the committee on streets is needed for purposes connected with, but not usually thought of as being street repairs. Some of the larger items of such expenditures this year are as follows: Street cleaning, $8,993; street sprinkling, $3,070; street oiling, $7,668; constructing, repairing and cleaning culverts, $1,439; constructing and repairing crosswalks, $1,084; repairing and cleaning storm sewers and catch basins, $206; cleaning brooks and storm ditches, $656; removing snow, $450; City yards, $402; Total, $23,968.

It is probable that the amount annually required for street cleaning will continue to increase, as new streets are being continually added, the dumps are farther away and there is a demand for more frequent cleaning of the streets than has been practicable.

The work of dust prevention was continued on substantially the same lines as in the past two years, and again most of the streets treated received but a single application. Where light oils were used, and on streets with much travel, water srpinkling was resorted to, to complete the season.

The cost of oil and other surface applications was $5,367.97 and the cost of cleaning the streets and applying the preparations was $2,300.18, a total of $7,668.15.

The total area covered by the dust-preventive applications was 370,200 square yards and the total length of streets included was 172,600 linear feet, nearly 33 miles. The cost of water sprinkling was $3,070.33.

A great many blue stone sidewalks have been repaired this year in compliance with notices served by order of the Common Council but still the general appearance of our stone sidewalks is very far from being satisfactory.

A comparatively small amount of new blue stone fagging has been laid this year, as the use of concrete for sidewalks is rapidly increasing, making a decided improvement in the walks, except in the few cases which show inferior work.

Considerable concrete curb, and combined curb and gutter have been laid this season. A great improvement to the city streets would result from the more extended use of curbing, and even more if the gutters could be paved, either with stone, brick or concrete.

As it was necessary to clean the snow from the sidewalks in front of about 450 properties after the recent storm, it would seem that many owners and occupants are intentionally neglecting the requirements of the ordinance, and that it will be necessary to use more straight methods in order to reduce the amount of sidewalk cleaning so that the present street force, augmented by as many extra men as can be obtained, will be able to promptly remove the snow from in front of the properties of absentee owners.

We recommend that proceedings be begun for opening Manson Place, Mc Dowell Street, Halsey Street and Bergen Street through to West Fourth Street, as called for by recent petitions.

We suggest that action be taken for the widening of Madison and Central Avenues from West Front Street to the railroad, as all the streets between Plainfield and Watchung Avenues are narrow and travel on the latter is impeded by the double track street railway.

The total length of macadam streets in the city is now 57.45 miles. There are 0.78 mile of brick pavement, 0.07 mile of concrete pavement and 23.31 miles of unpaved streets, a total of 81.61 miles. The length of strom sewers is 6.03 miles.

Receipts for the year $52,350.68 (which includes $3,610.01 from the Public Service Railway Cemapny for repairs and oiling streets). Disbursements total $51,582, which includes these items: General street cleaning and opening gutters, $8,993.01; street sprinkling, $3,070.33; dust prevention, labor and materials, $7,668.15; crosswalks, construction and repair, $1,084.26; culverts, construction and repair, $925.94; cleaning culverts, $513.11; cleaning brooks and ditches, $655.97; removing snow from streets, $460.60; assistants and inspectors on grades and street construction $665.68; tools and supplies, $522.19; automobile, $348.27; repairing and reconstructing on Richmond Street, $3,347.12; East Front Street, $2,447.77; West Seventh Street, $2,668.06; West Front Street, $10,396.62.

Amount due City from Public Service Railway Company for repair of streets and removal of snow, $2,619.70; amount certified to assessors for removing snow from sidewalks, $737.00; amount paid in 1911 on account of streets macadamized by contract, $45,059.45; amount expended in 1911 on account of sanitary sewers constructed by contract, $25,560.85; amount charged against property owners for constructing and repairing sidewalks and curbs, $915.28.

Respectfully submitted,

WANTS FREER USE OF THE FORWARD PASS.

A change in football rules so as to allow freer use of the forward pass, the promotion of soccer football, the elimination of the professional coach in college sports, the doing away with gate receipts and the recognition of summer baseball playing as legitimate were some of the questions discussed before 100 delegates to the sixth annual meeting of the National Collegiate Athletic Association in New York yesterday.

The present football rules on the whole are satisfactory and ought to be disturbed as little as possible, according to the report of the chairman of the rules committee, Dr. H. L. Williams, coach of the University of Minnesota, but were criticised by him as giving too much advantage on wet days to an inferior team, which, on a muddy field, he said, could nullify the most brilliant defense.

ITALIAN FLUENTLY SPOKEN BY NEGRESS.

The regular interpreter was among the missing when the City Criminal Court convened at Elizabeth yesterday morning and the first case before Judge Mahon was one in which the principals were Italians who couldn't speak English. For a moment it looked as though the proceedings would be indefinitely delayed. But the crowded courtroom gasped when a negress weighing not less than 300 pounds walked up to the bench and said:

"What's dis yeah trouble, anyhow? If you all wants somebody tuh talk Eye-talian ah's jes re baby dat can do it."

And she could. Turning to the principals she let loose a string of soft-voweled words and received a ready response. She was immediately sworn as interpreter.

She was Mrs. Fannie Cattalina, nee Morris, a negress who married a Sicilian in the Peterstown section of Elizabeth. She was present as a witness in the case of Luigi Vetle, star boarder at 312 Palmer street, and Mrs. Catherine Media, his landlady, both of whom were arrested charged with a statutory offense. They denied their guilt and were held for a further hearing.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

About time the Christmas skates had their inning.

"Al" Palzer, the new "White Hope," knocked out "Al" Kaufman in the fifht round in their contest at the National A. C. in New York last night.

George Schlei, formerly a catcher for the Giants, who received his release early last season from Manager McGraw, has signed to play the Chicago Cubs next season, and will help out Jimmy Archer behind the bat.

Otto Zeigler, once champion bicycle racer of the world, is totally blind at his home in Alameda, Cal., He has been out of the public eye for many years, failing eyesight compelling his retirement. Zeigler was the first rider to reel off a mile in less than two minutes, making the distance in 1.50 flat on the Alameda straightaway course.

Cleveland's great bowling quintet, the Bonds, world's champion five-man team, will defend its title next month at the national bowling tournament at Paterson, N. J. Last year the Bonds rolled up a total of 2969 pins in the national tourney at Buffalo, winning the title.

William McCready Injured.

William McCready, aged twenty-eight years, employed in a local livery stable, was kicked by a horse last night, and received a compound fracture of the left leg. He was removed to the hospital where the broken bones were set. His general condition today was reported to be good.

Cow Disease Puzzles.

M. J. Schoonover, of Mountainside, has lost several cows within the past week from a disease that seems to puzzle the veterinarians. The animals at first seem drowsy and not inclined to move and in a few hours they have convulsions and die.

WOMAN BADLY BURNED AS DRESS TAKES FIRE.

Mrs. David Burke, aged sixty years, of 408 Madison avenue, Elizabeth, was badly burned yesterday afternoon when she threw a lighted match into a waste paper box at her home. Only for the heorism of John Brady, a neighbor, and Plainclothesman Daniel McCarthy she would probably have been fatally injured.

Mrs. Burke lives on the third floor. She had been on the second floor, conversing with a tenant and, upon her return to her own rooms, lighted a match as the hallway was dark. Upon entering her home she threw the match in the box, apparently thinking the fire had gone out.

As she turned to walk away her dress ignited and she was soon a mass of flames. Her screams attracted Brady and McCarthy. They ran to her assistance. Dr. John Younglove was summoned and he treated her.

In the meantime a telephone call was sent to Engine No. 6, and the firemen of that company extinguished the flames that were burning the woodwork.

CATHOLIC CHURCH GETS $1,000,000 FROM RANCHER.

Austin, Texas, Dec. 29.—Ed Jackson, the bachelor millionaire sheep man who died a few days ago at his home at San Angelo, Texas, left a will, it was learned yesterday, by which he bequeathed to Fannie Jackson, a 2-year-old Mexican girl, who he will describe as "the daughter of my friend, Mary Luna." The remainder of the estate, valued at more than $1,000,000, is left by the will to the Catholic Church of America. Jackson was a newsboy in Kansas City, Mo., thirty years ago. He is said to have a number of relatives in that city.

LEVIES ATTACHMENT ON LINDEN CEMETERY'S FUNDS.

Deputy Sheriff Harris, of New York County, New York, has levied an attachment on the moneys of the Rosedale and Linden Park Cemetery Association, which has a cemetery in Elizabeth, through a complaint registered by Mrs. Mary C. Stewart. The company's finances in two New York banks were attached. It will not interfere with the business of the concern.

Dry Cleaning

like everything else, is cheapest when you get the best, for your garments are cleaned and pressed better—and therefore the work lasts longer and is better for your clothing or household furnishings.

Besides a saving, good cleaning is sanitary. Since this is so, get the best, for handwork in small tubs is sure to carry some dirt along from other clothing belonging to other people.

You don't experience anything of that nature in a first-class place.

PROCESSION BEGINS HOLY CROSS FESTIVAL

Picturesque effects marked the Christmas celebration of the Sunday school of the Church of the Holy Cross last night. It began with a procession of the children, their officers and the rector, which formed in the parish house and made its way to the church to the strains of "Hark! the Herald Angels Sing."

In the church members of the congregation in large numbers were already assembled. The church was decorated with greens, and at one side at the foot of the chancel stood a large Christmas tree. At the other side was a manger. When the service began the tree was unlighted. At a signal from the rector, Rev. W. S. McCoy, the lights of the church were lowered and the big tree suddenly glowed with strings of electric lamps.

During the service the children marched to the manger, in which they placed gifts for St. Bernard's School, a diocesan institution. The idea of giving as well as receiving is to be carried out to the extent of passing on the lavishly decorated tree to another school next week.

After the service in the church children and elders repaired to the parish house, where gifts were distributed, refreshments servd, and the young people had a dance.

At the church Rev. Mr. McCoy spoke briefly. He drew lessons from the tree and the manger. At the close of it, summarizing the discourse, he said the tree signified light and life, and the manger stood for love.

The program included a wealth of chorus, duet and solo numbers. Those who took part were:

The committee in charge comprised F. H. Andrews, Mrs. Willard H. Cook, Mrs. H. I. Neff and Miss Eunice Eckert. The accompanist was Walter Knapp.

In the afternoon the Primary and Beginners' Departments had their entertainment. All the children received gifts.

HERE AND THERE.

A Plainfield Republican who says he wants to see the Republicans win in 1912, has written a letter to a number of papers in this State, urging that John W. Griggs be nominated as the party's standard bearer. This seems to indicate, on the surface, that at least one Republican in this States does not want Mr. Taft to have another term: but second thought makes it certain that the Plainfield Republican is advocating a scheme to give New Jersey the next President, whether Republican or Democrat.—Newark News.

Auto Truck and Wagon Collide.

Swinging from Front street into Park avenue, this afternoon and endeavoring to escape hitting another machine, an automobile brewery truck owned by Berger & Fisher, of New Brunswick, and driven by Harray Kutzman, ran into a wagon owned by the Gayle Hardware Company, which was standing at the side entrance to the store. The rear end of the wagon was demolished. No one was injured.

Fire Alarm Out of Kilter.

The Elizabeth fire alarm system went on a tear yesterday as the result of a tree blown over by the high wind falling on some of the wires and breaking them. There was a series of blows on the alarm whistle that kept the firemen on the anxious seat for several hours.

Two Fined For Assault.

George Schutak and John Kumblaka, of 203 Geneva street, Elizabeth, were fined $5 and costs in the Elizabeth Police Court, Wednesday, on the charge of breaking into the apartment of George Godzinski, of the same address, and assaulting him.

Mrs. Alfred K. Willett, of Duer street, who underwent an operation at Muhlenberg Hospital early in the week, was reported today as doing well.

YEAR'S TOTAL ARRESTS 1,194 CHIEF REPORTS

The annual report of Police Chief P. S. Kiely showed that during the year there were 1,194 arrests. Of this number 1,031 were men and 63 women; 1,003 white and 191 colored; 519 American, 191 colored, 183 Italians and the rest distributed among Irish, German, Russian, Polish, Swedish and other nationalities. The greatest number of arrests, 339 was for disorderly conduct. For drunk and disorderly there was 106 and for just drunkenness 145. The other charges are based on larceny, gambling, etc., to dog license ordinance violations, failure to remove snow from sidewalks and for not carrying lights on wagons and bicycles.

The total amount of fines collected was $2,010 from 198 prisoners. Sixty-four were committed to the county jail, 53 dismissed, 82 held for the grand jury, 3 for the juvenile court, 23 probated, 721 sentence suspended and 32 turned over to various departments. Detective Sergeant Flynn made the largest number of arrests, 189. Patrolman Dobson is next with 104; Patrolman McGinley, 88, and the Chief himself, 82. The other arrests are averaged among the other patrolmen according to the posts they have.

The salary list of the department is $25,191.60. The other expenses of the department are $3,032.27. The department consists of one chief, one captain, two sergeants, one roundsman, twenty-one patrolmen and one patrol driver.

In its annual report the New Jersey Fish and Game Commission reports that 127 bucks were killed during the five days in November that deer were allowed to be shot. DEPICT CELEBRATIONS IN OTHER COUNTRIES

Christmas in Denmark, Germany, England and America were depicted last night at the Christmas celebration of the Sabbath-school of the Seventh-Day Baptist church. Groups of young people posed representing the different countries and Mrs. Lewis Kemble read the legends of Christmas of each land. The singing of the carols by the pupils was augmented by the presence of Mrs. Violet-Truell Johnston, violinist. Arthur L. Titsworth, presided at the organ and Charles P. Titsworth conducted.

Following the entertainment the children were served with supper around the tree which was handsomely lighted. The committee in charge comprised Mrs. Charles P. Titsworth, Mrs. F. J. Hubbard, Mrs. Asa F. Randolph and Frank Langworthy.

A former Plainfielder, now a resident of Newark, has adopted a good way of making his wife a Christmas present. During the year he saved up all his spare nickels, throwing them into a box reserved for that purpose and when he opened it Christmas eve he was surprised to find therein $185. In his opinion it goes to show what a person can save if they only try. Last year this particular man saved pennies.

ADVERTISE IN THE DAILY PRESS

OLD SHIP CLOCKS.

Crude Devices Mariners Used In Reckoning Time.

SANDGLASS MOST POPULAR.

If It Were Carefully Attended to the Skipper Could Tell the Days Fairly Well, but It Was Often Juggled—The First Chronometers.

To ascertain the time when at sea is now a matter of the utmost simplicity. But such was not the case in the old sailing days, and in order to acquire even the vaguest idea of longitude and time the seaman had recourse to curious devices.

Crude as these devices appear compared with present day instruments, they save the mariner from chaos and destruction, and even if he could not name the hour with any degree of certainty he at least knew the day of the week.

Eclipses of the moon and the positions of the stars afforded a little guide to the skipper, who was, nevertheless, greatly handicapped by his lack of astronomical knowledge and the inferior quality of his spyglass. Moreover, eclipses could not be arranged for every night in the week, and there were dark nights when the stars could not be seen, so various devices had to be pressed into service.

The most popular form of old sea clock was the sandglass. Many of these glasses were timed to run twenty-four hours, and prior to the ship leaving land the glass was set exactly at noon. If it were carefully watched and turned as soon as the sand ran down the skipper could reckon the days with fair accuracy.

Side by side with the large glass were placed half hour and minute glasses. The man at the helm carefully watched this old sea clock and announced the time at regular intervals by striking a bell. It was customary to estimate the duration of any incident by so many glasses. "To flog the glass" was an operation very congenial to lazy seamen. It consisted in turning the glass before all the sand had run down so that the watch was appreciably shortened.

When the twenty-four hour glass was employed a little juggling was indulged in for the purpose of finding the longitude. The difference between the twenty-four hour glass and the time by the sun was estimated and this difference was held to represent the longitude east or west, according as the sun's time might be before or after the time returned by the glass.

"Taking the sun" was a weird and wonderful operation. Clumsy quadrants were utilized, and toward midday the captain appeared on deck to perform his solemn duty. After much screwing of eyes and waggling of the quadrant the captain would bawl out to the mate, "Make it — bells!" the number varying according to personal idiosyncrasies.

A demand for a more satisfactory device for estimating time at sea was responsible for experiments being made with pendulum clocks, though with little success. The interest of inventors was aroused when the English government in 1714 offered £10,000 to any one inventing a method of reckoning longitude to within a degree, or sixty miles; £15,000 if within forty miles and £20,000 if within thirty miles.

John Harrison, an obscure Yorkshire carpenter, who had achieved a local reputation by repairing and cleaning clocks, came forward with a chronometer which at once attracted attention. Through the influence of Dr. Halley he was enabled to make a voyage in a government vessel to Lisbon, where he succeeded in determining the longitude to within 1 degree 30 minutes.

For this achievement he was granted £500 to enable him to proceed with his invention. After thirty years' hard toil he produced a chronometer on which the present marine chronometer is based. His invention was shaped like a large watch, and in 1761 Harrison's son embarked for Jamaica in order to carry out tests. On the voyage out the chronometer was only 5.1 seconds in error, and during the whole trip from Portsmouth to Jamaica and back the variation was only 1 minute 54.5 seconds.

The accuracy of the chronometer thus enabled the longitude to be determined within eighteen miles, a result which exceeded the admiralty's most sanguine expectations. After further demonstrations an act of parliament was passed in 1765 awarding Harrison £20,000, half of the money to be paid as soon as he explained how his timekeeper was constructed and the remainder when the government was convinced that these timekeepers could be made by others. Despite the fulfillment of these conditions, Harrison had to wait several years before the money was paid over.

Larcum Kendal, who had been Harrison's apprentice and who was ultimately his successor, followed on the lines laid down by his master and produced a chronometer which was used by Captain Cook during his daring voyage in the Resolution. Of this chronometer Cook wrote, "Our longitude can never be erroneous while we have so good a guide as Mr. Kendal's watch."

Various horologists have introduced so many improvements that little trace of Harrison's model is to be discerned in the modern chronometer, though to him must be assigned the credit of pointing out the way.

The heart has reasons that reason does not understand.—Bossuet.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

When George Broadhurst gave the American stage that great political play "The Man of the Hour," the theatre going public has much to thank the clever author for. It will live and be a great popular play when most other plays are forgotten. The reason of its great popularity is that it deals with the "graft politician" that imperils most every American city. The characters are all true to life, that exists in all large cities. Every city has its boss and grafters. Every city has its honest and straight politician. This is the play that Theodore Roosevelt went twice in one week to see and pronounced it the best play he had ever seen. A splendid company will present the great play here on Monday afternoon and night, and an advice is to get your seats as soon after the sale opens as possible for there is every reason to believe that the house will be large.

In addition to the regular presents to the children, those who had made records of merit for themselves during the year by regular attendance and commemorating texts were given rewards.

Cost of a Silk Secret.

The development of the silk manufacture in England began some time in the seventeenth century, but was greatly extended through the enterprise of John Lombe of Derby, who in 1715 went to Leghorn, Italy, to learn the secret of the Leghorn silk manufactures, a most difficult and dangerous adventure. Visitors were allowed to pass through the factories and see the machines in motion, but could learn nothing of their construction and operation. Finally, through the good offices of a priest, Lombe secured employment as a workman, slept in the mill, worked at a spinning machine and by night made measurements and plans. He worked at the mill until an English ship was sent on purpose to take him away. He had scarcely sailed when an armed brig was sent after him, and he barely escaped safely to England. It is said that he died at the age of twenty-nine, poisoned by the emissaries of his Leghorn employers, but the silk manufacture was securely established, became a great industry in England and has since been established all over the world.—National Magazine.

Trains Charged by Buffaloes.

In pioneer days the railroads crossing the plains were often delayed for many hours by buffaloes. Sometimes they caused more serious trouble. In 1871 and 1872 trains on the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe railroad were charged by the enraged beasts, cars were derailed and overturned and the lives of train crews and passengers endangered. Many tales of hairbreadth escapes were related by small parties of soldiers, frontiersmen and emigrants, and it is altogether possible that many an emigrant wagon with its occupants that left the Missouri river and was never seen again was overwhelmed by the buffaloes rather than wiped out of existence by the Indians, to whom all unexplained disappearances were attributed. Large buffalo bulls weighed 2,000 pounds or more, and cows weighed in the neighborhood of 1,200 pounds. Herds numbering many thousands were really irresistible and in a stampede carried all before them.—Outing.

Fatal Street Music.

In casting up the score against street musicians it must never be forgotten that to them was due the untimely death of one of England's foremost humorists, John Leech. The strain of ceaseless application to his work rendered Leech abnormally sensitive to street noises of all descriptions, and street music in particular drove him frantic. The organ grinders, it is said, knew of his enmity toward them and played within earshot of his studio simply to plague him. In a letter to Mr. Bass, M. P., who was framing a bill for the suppression of street noises, Mark Lemon, the editor of Punch, declared that beyond a doubt Leech's ultimately fatal malady, angina pectoris, or breast pang, was due to the disturbance of his nervous system caused by the continual visits of street bands and organ grinders.—London Chronicle.

The Senator's Sarcasm.

For many years there served in the United States senate a man of brilliant mind and many fine qualities, but who was forever estranging many with whom he desired to be friendly by reason of his incurably sarcastic manner both of speech and action. Once an intimate friend wrote the senator urging the appointment of another friend to a minor position in the government. The senator returned a most sarcastic reply, declining to recommend the appointment. It is said that he never forgot the merited rebuke he received from the friend who had suggested the appointment:

My Dear Senator—I think it would be well for you to reserve your sarcasm for the rapidly increasing number of your enemies, instead of offering it to the decreasing number of your friends, of whom I am one.

Navajo Blankets.

Much unadulterated nonsense has been written concerning the symbolism of Navajo Indian blankets and the poetry, legend, tradition and history woven by the squaw into its fabric. It is true that some designs have a symbolic meaning, but Hopi, Zuni and Apache symbols are used quite as freely as those peculiar to the Navajos. The Navajo squaw is one of the least imaginative and least poetical of human beings, and it is quite safe to say that even when sympolic designs are employed in blanket weaving it is without the remotest reference to their true significance.—Argonaut.

Tragic Family History.

The following inscriptions are to be seen on a tombstone at Debreczin, Hungary:

"Joseph Moritz, murdered at sixty-two by his son. Isabelle Moritz, wife of above, poisoned at forty-seven by her daughter. Elizabeth Moritz committed suicide at twenty after poisoning her mother. Joseph Moritz, Jr., murderer of his father, died in prison at twenty-seven."—London Standard.

Cutting Him Off.

"You?" snorted Miss Sharpe. "Marry you? Why, you're only an apology for a man."

"But," protested Mr. Small, "you will not"—

"No; I will not accept the apology."—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Relations Between.

"What are relations now between your wife and yourself?"

"Oh, only her mother, two uncles, a sister and a few cousins."—London Telegraph.

The root of all benevolent actions is filial piety and fraternal love.—Confucius.

SAVED THE NORTHWEST.

Dr. Whitman Kept It From Being Traded to England.

But for the foresight, it is said, of a missionary this country would have "traded off" to Great Britain that immense territory that now forms two of the greatest states of the northwest—Oregon and Washington.

Marcus Whitman had crossed the plains and the mountains to Oregon and knew from a year's residence the value of the country. He also knew that the Hudson Bay company was anxious to obtain possession of the whole northwest and had circulated the report that it was impossible for emigrants to cross the mountains in wagons.

At a dinner given in 1842, at which Dr. Whitman and several of the company's chief officers were present, news was received that a band of British emigrants had crossed the mountains. Toasts were drunk in honor of the event. "Now the Americans may whistle—the country is ours!" one of the Englishmen is reported to have exclaimed jubilantly.

But Whitman thought otherwise. The next day he started for Washington on horseback. He made the journey in winter and with frozen limbs called on Daniel Webster, then secretary of state. Upon his presentation of the situation Whitman was gruffly told by Webster that the country was worthless and that he, as secretary of state, was about to trade that "worthless region" for valuable concessions with reference to the Newfoundland fisheries.

Finding that a treaty had already been approved by the senate and was awaiting formal ratification and proclamation by President Tyler, Dr. Whitman sought the president. When the missionary had finished his story the president said:

"Sir, your frozen limbs attest your sincerity. Can you take emigrants across the mountains in wagons?"

"Give me six months and I will take 1,000 across," answered the doctor.

"If you can take them across," added Tyler, "the treaty shall not be ratified."

In 1843 a band of emigrants under the guidance of the doctor started from Missouri for Oregon. A deputation from the Hudson Bay company met them on the plains, advising them that it was impossible for them to cross the mountains in their wagons. The emigrants decided to leave their wagons and finish the journey on horseback.

As this course would have ruined Whitman's plan of saving the country to the United States, he labored with the leaders of the band until they consented to follow the doctor's advice and guidance. The band did cross the mountains in their wagons, the treaty was not ratified, and the fertile northwest was saved to the United States.—New York Herald.

An Odd Superstition.

A strange superstition is that of an otherwise perfectly normal western man who as a buyer for a very large department store of the country has had marvelous success. His talent seems to lie in reading the hidden thoughts of men and in that way securing bargains few others can ever seem to get. To a few of his intimates, not his trade friends, he gives a weird explanation of this power. Wherever he can be says he drinks water from the same glass as the person with whom he is about to do business, taking care to drink after him. There is not a doubt in his mind that there is truth in the old belief that if two drink water out of one glass the last to drink will know the other's secrets. At all events this man says the test never fails.—New York Sun.

Amulets of the Burman.

Highly prized by the Burman are the following gems: Ruby, diamond or crystal, pearl, coral, topaz, sapphire, catseye, amethyst and emerald. Collectively they ward off sickness or danger. The catseye is supposed to secure invulnerability in war. Incantations are muttered over some or all of these stones, and the water in which they are immersed is drunk in order to secure immunity from all evil. Spells are uttered over rubies, and they are inserted as amulets in the flesh of men who desire to be immune from wounds inflicted by sword, spear or gun.

One of Tom Hood's.

There was a noted brand of tobacco which the sailors of England chewed in the early years of the nineteenth century—"pigtail." And it is commemorated in one of the most ingenious of Thomas Hood's punning verses, in which he recounts the life, love and sorrow of a sailor, a British sailor:

His head was turned, and so he chewed
His pigtail till he died.

The lower deck today would be puzzled to see the joke of that!—London Tatler.

Brought the Wrinkles.

On one occasion an actress grew tempestuous with Perrin, the Parisian manager, and gave him a stormy quarter of an hour.

"And what did you do, my dear Perrin?" asked Febvre.

"I said nothing and watched her grow old."

He Knew.

"The Malays have a queer marriage custom," remarked the traveler. "The groom holds his nose against a small cylindrical object. I couldn't quite make out what it was"—

"A grindstone probably," interposed Mr. Grouch.—Exchange.

Comparison, more than reality, makes men happy and can make them wretched.—Feltham.

THE PAUSE AT DINNER.

Grim Story of an Englishman's Banquet In Egypt.

How completely in any domestic emergency the master can count on his Berber servants is illustrated by this grim anecdote from Mrs. E. L. Butcher's book, "Egypt as We Knew It." An Englishman of very high rank in the Egyptian service wished to give in his own house a dinner party to the prime minister and other Egyptian and English notables. He was a bachelor and did not often entertain, but he spoke to his servants and told them that he particularly wished the dinner to be successful.

The Egyptian, or, rather, Berber, servant has a quick sense for the honor of "our house," as every good servant calls his master's abode. So the servants bestirred themselves, and the guests sat down to an excellent dinner beautifully served.

Good fish succeeded good soup, and then there was a pause. The host talked his best, but began to feel nervous. However, after a delay hardly long enough to attract the notice of the guests the even procession of dishes began again, and the evening was most successful.

After the guests had departed the host said a word of praise to his head servant and then remarked:

"By the way, there was rather a long wait after the fish. Why was that?"

"May it please your excellency, the cook died of cholera."

"What!"

But investigation put the fact beyond a doubt. The cook, attacked at the last moment, but anxious for the honor of the house, had worked on till he fell dead at his post, and his body had been then hastily laid aside, and the marmiton finished the cooking.

I learned this story after the Englishman had left the country. I never heard that any of the guests suffered or even knew what had happened.

FEAT OF A MACGREGOR.

Wonderful Physical Strength That Was Used to Good Purpose.

Sir William MacGregor was the hero of such an adventure as one expects ordinarily to read about only in fiction of a certain hue.

The steamship Syria, with a lot of Indian coolies on board, struck on a rock about twelve hours from Suva, the capital of Fiji.

Dr. MacGregor, then acting colonial secretary, organized a relief expedition, clambered over a broken mast that was the only path to the emigrants and again and again returned with a man or woman on his back and sometimes a child, held by its clothes between his teeth.

A man of vast physical strength, MacGregor wanted it all for his final feat. Down below on the reef was a woman who had fallen overboard, had got at the spirits and was mad with drink. The captain of the ship and a police officer who had gone after her were being swept out to sea. MacGregor slid down a rope, caught the knot of the woman's hair in his teeth and with his hands seized the two men and dragged them both into safety. He went back to Suva in a borrowed suit of pajamas, having left all his clothes and a good deal of his skin on the coral reef.

Modest, like many heroes, MacGregor left himself out of his own report, and it was from the governor that the queen first heard the whole story.—London Graphic.

The Name of Arizona.

Arizona, probably Arizonac in its original form, was the native and probably Pima name of the place—of a hill, valley, stream or some other local feature—just south of the modern boundary, in the mountains still so called, on the headwaters of the stream flowing past Saric, where the famous Planchas de Plata mine was discovered in the middle of the eighteenth century, the name being first known to the Spaniards in that connection and being applied to the mining camp or real de minas. The aboriginal meaning of the term is not known. The name should probably be written and pronounced Arisona, as our English sound of z does not occur in Spanish.—H. H. Bancroft, "History of the Pacific States."

Charles Reade as He Ate.

One of the strangest men in regard to his diet was Charles Reade. Writing about his meals at the Garrick club, one of his friends placed one of his menus on record: "He took a cauliflower, flanked by a jug of cream, at first course and a great salad to follow, washed down by curious drinks of the shandy-gaff order. He would drink coffee associated with sweets, black pudding and toasted cheese to the amazement of any onlooker."

A Comfortable Roll.

There is a Philadelphia sporting man who is famous for the roll he always carries. Another man said to him one night:

"I suppose in strange hotels you always put your roll under your pillow, eh?"

"No; oh, no," said the sporting man. "I couldn't sleep with my head so high."—Exchange.

He Moved Away.

There was a merchant in our town who was not wondrous wise; he vowed that he could get along and never advertise. His rivals now are all convinced that advertising pays, for he was forced to get along in less than ninety days.—Chicago Journal.

Happiness and misery are the names of two extremes, the utmost bounds whereof we know not.—Locke.

Tomato Soup.

Gather together all the odds and ends of meat found in the pantry, like pieces of beefsteak, bones from leg of lamb, bits of roast, and any gravy that may have been left over, even small quantity of plain hash. Put all into a soup kettle and cover with cold water and stand over a moderate fire to cook slowly for two hours or more. When the meat is cooked all to shreds strain off the broth (which should have had hot water added as it boiled away so that the quantity will be kept about the same, and it may have had one-half cup of rice thrown in with the meat), and add one pint of cooked tomatoes. Cook all together for fifteen minutes, and strain again. Season highly with salt and pepper and serve hot with oyster crackers or soup croutons.

A RINSING HINT.

In washing fabrics of delicate color and in washing blankets, be careful to rinse in water the same temperature as that in which the garment was washed.

This is particularly necessary in the case of blankets, as careful washing is often rendered useless by too sudden change of temperature in rinsing. In neither case must the water be too hot.

TOPSY TURVY XMAS

Children of Trinity Reformed Sunday-School Give a Cantata.

ENJOYED BY LARGE AUDIENCE.

Solo Parts and Chorus All Well Taken—Will Repeat Entertainment for Library Fund.

"A Topsy Turvey Christmas," was the title of a delightful Christmas cantata given at Trinity Reformed church, last night, under the auspices of the Sunday-school and the direction of Miss S. Etta Raybert and Miss Lillian A. Force. The Sunday-school room was thronged with members and friends of the school and all thoroughly enjoyed the entertainment, agreeing it to be the best in the history of the Sunday-school.

Those who took the leading parts, Miss Maud McAfee, as grandma, Miss Adele Freeman as Prudence; Alfred W. Dunavan as Santa and Miss Eliza Dufford as Fairy Queen, were especially good, in fact every one took his and her part in a praiseworthy manner, receiving frequent applause.

One very amusing feature was the appearance of a number of children wearing false faces on the back of their heads, with their clothes reversed. The effect was extremely funny. Other features were the little tots appearing as mechanical dolls, and other children who impersonated cats. All were dressed in costume. During the early part of the cantata everything was topsy turvy, but the fairy queen finally got things straightened out. The helpers carrying dish pans and spoons added to the enjoyment of the program. The music was catchy and the solo and chorus parts were well received by the audience. It was decided to repeat the cantata next Friday night for the benefit of the Sunday-school library.

The same cantata was given in the afternoon for the younger children, when Miss Raybert took the part of Fairy Queen in place of Miss Dufford, who could not attend in the afternoon. After the entertainment last night, there was a distribution of candy to the members of the school. Those who took part in the cantata and their characters follow:

Grandma, Miss Maud McAfee; Prudence, Miss Adele Freeman; Santa Claus, Alfred W. Dunavan; Fairy Queen, Miss Eliza Dufford; guests—Theo Vail, Margaret Smith, Helen Thompson, Marion Woolley, Louise Seader, Marion Blair, Howard Willett, Harry Schlief, Charles Todd, Donald Willett, Harold Gayle, Ronald Schenck; helpers—Dorothy Seader, Marguerite Gulick, Mildred Clark, Helen McAfee, Helen Hand, Ruth Freeman.

Fairies—Marjorie VanEmburgh, Gertrude Rittenhouse, Helen Dunn, Gemimi Harrison, Helen Foster, Dorothy Gulick. Cats—Malcomb Sheppard, Alfred DeNise, Ben DeNise, Alfred Townley, Earl Cook, Warren Kellogg. Dolls—Dorothy Giles, John Mehlenbeck, Doris Bittenbender, Carmen Trembath, Ruth Gulick, Earl Wyman, Pauline Davidson.

Throughout the rendition of the cantata, Miss Lillian A. Force presided at the piano. Much credit is also due Miss Etta Raybert for her untiring efforts in the training of the children. The general committee in charge comprised Miss Etta Raybert, Miss Lillian A. Force, Charles M. Dolliver, Edgar F. Sheppard, Alfred W. Dunavan and Miss Helen Smith.

METHODISTS ENJOY AN OLD-FASHIONED PARTY.

The Christmas entertainment for the older members of the Sunday-school of the First M. E. church was held in Vincent chapel, last night, and resolved itself into an old-fashioned holiday party. There were about 250 members and friends of the school present and the evening was spent playing all kinds of games. Some of the younger people adjourned to the basement of the church where they played games.

There was the usua l Christmas tree prettily decorated and laden with gifts, and a feature was the selections on the Victrola by E. F. Glover. During the evening refreshments were served. Among those who were generously remembered was Isaac W. Kennedy, the faithful sexton.

Junior Anniversary.

The annual junior anniversary service for the distribution of attendance prizes will be held at the Salvation Army building tomorrow night. There will be special music, songs and recitations by the young people. The large Christmas tree used on Wednesday night will be lighted again.

Mrs. Mary B. Smalley, aged seventy-five years, widow of Samuel Smalley, an old resident of the borough, died at noon today at the home of her daughter, Mrs. William T. Campbell, on Somerset street, following an illness of six weeks with a complication of diseases. Mrs. Smalley was born at Bridgeton, N. J., and was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Cook, of that place. She was married when a young woman and removed to this city where she lived for forty-five years.

Mrs. Smalley was a member of the Seventh-Day Baptist church and a regular attendant at the services as long as health permitted. She is survived by three daughters, Mrs. George Weiss and Mrs. William T. Campbell, of the borough; Mrs. States Titsworth, of this city; also three sons, John and Walter Smalley, of this city, and Irving Smalley, of White Plains, N. J.

The funeral will be held at the home of Mrs. William T. Campbell, 110 Somerset street, the borough, Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. Edwin Shaw, of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, will officiate and the burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

MANY ATTRACTIONS FOR NEW YEAR'S DAY

New Year's Day will be generally observed here, as usual, and numerous events will combine to make the day one of pleasure for all. Proctor & Sanderson will offer a strong attraction at the Plainfield theatre, both afternoon and night in "The Man of the Hour," one of the greatest successes of recent years. The cast will be a superior one throughout. At Proctor's theatre there will be a continuous performance of the best vaudeville and motion pictures.

The Young Men's Christian Association will have open-house and in the afternoon there will be basketball games, while an added attraction will be the motion picture entertainment in the large hall in the evening. The Young Women's Christian Association has also provided special attractions for the day.

The riding members of the Watchung Hunt Club has planned to hold a hunt, provided the weather is favorable. They will meet the hounds at the Oak Tree schoolhouse at 10 o'clock in the morning and at the conclusion of the chase a breakfast will be served at the clubhouse on Plainfield avenue.

The Young Men's Hebrew Association will hold its seventh annual ball in Sebring's Hall in the evening and plans are complete for an enjoyable affair. Music will be furnished by a full orchestra.

Another event of interest will be the open-house at the rooms of the Democratic Club in honor of Councilmen-elect Fred Endress and Patrick J. Reville, who that night will take their seats in the Common Council for the first time. The reception will be for the public and refreshments will be served.

The members of the Park Club, as usual, will have open house in the afternoon, followed by a dance. Wives of the members will act as a reecption committee.

At Hope chapel Monday night the basketball team will meet the Suburban A. C., of Roselle, and this promises to be an exciting contest. In addition to the above events there will be a number of private entertainments.

O. A. R. MOTOR CO., FORMED IN THIS CITY.

The O. A. R. Motor Company was organized yesterday in this city, with an authorized capital of $60,000. Oliver A. Reed was elected president; Gustave Reinberg, president of the McKiernan Drill Company, was elected vice-president and H. G. Uhler, secretary and treasurer. The company was formed to manufacture the silent motor invented by Mr. Reed. Experts have declared the invention a valuable one and offers of purchase and of royalties have been refused by Mr. Reed.

The company will also do a general auto repair business; the office and shop being at 421 Sycamore street. J. H. Crane is counsel for the company. Oliver A. Reed, Gustave Reinberg, H. G. Uhler, Edward A. Kuhne, Ernest J. Kuhne and H. G. Uhler, Jr., are the incorporators.

Couple Married In This City.

Miss Elizabeth Ross, of Park avenue, and William McAlvanaugh, of Hackensack, were married this morning at the rectory of St. Mary's church by Father B. M. Bogan. This action dismissed the complaint made yesterday and on which the bridegroom was brought to this city.

HORACE CODDINGTON'S APPEAL DISMISSED

At the meeting of the Court of Pardons in Trenton yesterday forty-four paroles were granted and five prisoners were restored to citizenship. Among those released was David C. Cornell, who was serving a four-year term for exhibiting false minutes in connection with the failure of the Monmouth Trust Company, of Asbury Park. The petitions of Andrew J. Campbell, William A. Death, and Walter C. McAllister, serving thirty years for the murder of Jennie Boschieler in Paterson, were withdrawn by the applicants.

The petitions of ex-Mayor William H. Belcher, of Paterson, and Horace Coddington, of Somerville, were dismissed. Another reprieve was given Mariano Bellini, the Perth Amboy murderer, but clemency was refused Tony Luciano, who will be executed next month for the murder of a fellow-countryman in Newark. The life sentence of John Kocis, of Trenton, a murderer, was committed to twenty years.

DE FESTETICS AGAIN STOPS SON'S BURIAL

Gyula De Festetics, of Park avenue, has taken to the Court of Errors and Appeals the decision recently made by Vice Chancellor Howell, of Newark, that the body of his twelve-year-old son, now unburied a year and a half through the bitter legal fight between the "Count" and his wife, should be buried in Hillside Cemetery under the supervision of a master to be appointed by the court. This action by the "Count" will cause further delay in the burial.

The decision of the Chancery Court stipulated that the body be buried under the supervision of the master to be appointed, in a separate grave to be selected by him and that no other body shall ever be buried in the same plot. The master was also to supervise the interment personally and see to it that other requirements of the court were carried out. The separate grave it is understood, is the principal objection of Mr. de Festetics to the order.

Mr. De Festetics has been living apart from his wife about ten years. When their son died here in June, 1910, the wife started proceedings in the New Jersey Chancery Court to prevent her husband from burying the child, as he had planned, in a mausoleum in Hillside Cemetery. Through her action the burial was withheld pending the outcome of the court's decision. Meanwhile the body was placed in a receiving vault, where it will remain until the Court of Errors and Appeals hands down a decision. The mother wants the body buried either in a family plot at Rye, N. Y., or in Auburn, Mass.

"THE MAN OF THE HOUR" NEW YEAR'S DAY EVENT.

Very few plays of the present day live over one or two years. An exception to this rue is "The Man of the Hour," that great political drama written by George Broadhurst. That political graft exists in nearly all large American cities cannot be denied, it always has existed and always will. But the great play of "The Man of the Hour" has done more to lessen the graft than any other one thing.

Every city in the land has its "Boss" and grafting politicians who kneel at his beck and cull. Not only is "The Man of the Hour" a strong political play but the little love scenes between Alwin Bennett, the young Mayor and Dallus Wainwright, the niece of Charles Wainwright, the crooked millionaire and friend of Herrigan, "The Boss." There is no "star" in "The Man of the Hour" but a uniformly good company of well known actors and actresses. "The Man of the Hour" will be presented here at the Plainfield theatre Monday afternoon and evening.

Basketball at Y. M. C. A.

Two games of basketball are scheduled at the Y. M. C. A. for Monday afternoon. They are between the Sebring five, of Newark, and the Ajax, of the local association; the P. H. S. team and picked five from the alumni. The games will be played alternately and promise good sport and lots of excitement. A special program of motion pictures has also been secured for the regular performances on that day.

Funeral of Mrs. DeMolli.

The funeral service of Mrs. David DeMolli will be held at the late home on West Front street at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning and will be private. Father Sciolla, of St. Mary's church, will officiate. The burial will be in Calvary cemetery, New York.

CROSSES THE BAR

W. W. Winn Veteran Master of Sailing Vessel Passes Away.

HAD BEEN ILL SIX WEEKS.

Followed Sea All His Life and Had Many Thrilling Experiences—Wife and Three Daughters Survive.

Captain William Wallace Winn, of Grandview avenue, one of the fast disappearing old-school "skippers" or sailing masters, died at 5 o'clock last night at Muhlenberg Hospital. He was removed to the institution two weeks ago for an operation following an illness of several months and was making satisfactory progress until pneumonia developed which caused his death. He was 65 years of age and had been a resident of this city for the past four years, or since his retirement from the sea. His family has resided here for the past twenty years.

Most of Captain Winn's navigation was in the waters of the Pacific and Southern seas. The last vessel of which he was in command, the Tillie E. Starbuck, was wrecked and lost on a trip to the Solomon Islands from Honolulu. After suffering exposure for a number of days he was rescued with the rest of the crew and landed at San Francisco. By reason of his travel in many lands he was a most interesting conversationalist and his yarns were replete with first hand information. He was a member of Plainfield Lodge of Elks having demitted here from the Spokane, Wash., lodge, and also of the Masonic order, having joined that also in the West.

Surviving besides his widow and three daughters, Mrs. Edward Baker, Jr., of Duer street, Mrs. Fred. Zweifel, of Duer street, and Miss Henrietta Winn, at home, are his aged mother and a married sister living in Watertown, Mass. The funeral will be private.

MARRIED LAST JULY; ANNOUNCEMENT TODAY

Announcement was made today by the bride's family of the marriage of Miss Elizabeth Kirch, of 128 Duer street, and Samuel Haulbeeck, a former resident of Plainfield, now living in New York. Mrs. Haulbeeck is ill at the home of her parents at the Duer street address, but will join her husband in New York when she recovers.

Mrs. Haulbeeck is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Kirch. Mrs. Kirch said today that her daughter and Mr. Haulbeeck slipped away to New York to be married on July 23. She has known of the marriag.e she said, for three months.

The bridegroom was recently employed in the butcher store of Frank Neidig, Somerset street and Lincoln place. He is at present employed in Newark.

LARGE ATTENDANCE AT FORESTERS MEETING

The joint meeting of Courts Watchung and Plainfield, Independent Order of Foresters held last night proved to be a great success. The hall was taxed to its capacity by guests and representatives from courts in Newark, Somerville, Dunellen, Bloomfield, South Plainfield, Cranford and Elizabeth.

After the regular business had been transacted, the Union county uniformed team from the Cranford lodge conferred the degree on seventeen candidates. This was followed by a banquet at the Hotel Waldorf presided over by John J. Praed, of Court Watchung. Among those who responded to toasts were High Chief Ranger Arthur C. Wenzel, Past High Chief Ranger Fred Stormer, of Newark; Chief Ranger Dockery, of Cranford, and a number of others.

Letters of regret on inability to attend the celebration were read from Past High Chief Ranger James C. Calvert, Supreme Deputy Bingham, and High Secretary Mackenzie.

Lost, Found and Restored.

Again the powerful Daily Press want ad. Ida Bender lost a gold locket Thursday night. The same night Mrs. Terry, of 543 West Front street, found it. Next day The Daily Press ad. did its work, and locket and owner were reunited. Daily Press ads. work.

CRUSHED TO DEATH

James Q. Touzeau Drill Engine Fireman, Killed at Pond Works Switch.

BETWEEN ENGINE AND POST.

Victim a Veteran Railroader Who Had Run Into the Pond Switch Thousands of Times—Old Dunellenite.

While standing on the running board of a drill engine this morning, as it was entering the switch on the Pond Machine Tool Works trestle, James C. Touzeau, fireman of the engine, was caught between a post near the factory building and the locomotive cab and so badly crushed that he died in a few moments.

J. S. Eveland, the engineer, did not know that his fireman was on the footboard until he heard the victim's shout. He stopped the engine immediately. Mr. Touzeau was conscious when released, but expired within five minutes.

The body was brought to the North Avenue depot and removed to Cole's undertaking rooms, where it was viewed by County Physician Westcott, who granted the necessary burial permit. The dead man was a resident of Dunellen and lived there during the twenty-five years he has been employed as fireman on the engine that killed him.

During the time he has been in the employ of the Central railroad, he has entered the Pond switch thousands of times. He was a familiar figure to all commuters and many will remember him because he was one of the few railroad men to wear a full beard, in which he took much pride, although the colc. had faded from it years ago.

Mr. Touzeau was about 65 years old and besides his widow is survived by a daughter, Mrs. H. H. Williams, and a son Frederick Touzeau, both residing in Dunellen. He was a member of Jerusalem Lodge No. 26, F. and A. M., Dunellen Court of Foresters, No. 1123, and was an elder of the Dunellen Presbyterian church.

His death is a severe shock to his many friends in this city as well as Dunellen and the family are prostrated with grief. Announcement of the funeral will be made later.

SLATE FOR SOMERSET BOARD OF FREEHOLDERS

The Board of Freeholders of Somerset county will wind up the business of the year Monday morning and the new board will organize at noon. Frank W. Remsen, a Republican from Franklin Township, will be the only new member, but his installation will make the board consist of six Republicans and six Democrats.

It is expected that Thomas Douglass, a Republican, of Bernards Township, will be elected director, and William Kershaw, a Republican, of Neshanic, clerk. It is also believed that County Collector E. B. Allen, County Counsel John A. Frech, County Engineer Joshua Doughty Jr., all Democrats, will be re-elected.

Thomas E. Gibson, now director of the board, and a Democrat, is slated for road supervisor, and Dr. W. H. Long, a Republican, will probably be re-elected county physician.

Mayor Charles C. Kenyon, of Somerville, will retire from public office on Monday at noon after having served as chief executive of the borough since its organization two and a half years ago, and as a member and president of the old board of commissioners for three years previous. He will turn the office over to Mayor-elect William V. Steele. Mr. Steele is a Democrat, but was on both tickets at the November election.

The Mayor is the presiding officer of the Common Council, but the only new member to enter that body will be Elmer E. Richards, a Republican.

The new Mayor has in his hands the appointment of all the borough officers except the tax collector and assessor.

N. Y. AMUSEMENTS.

On Monday afternoon at Maxine Elliott's theatre, New York, Grace George and the Playhouse company will begin a brief engagement in "Just to Get Married," a satirical English comedy by Cicely Hamilton, which has been viewed with keen appreciation in the large cities outside New York during the preliminary tour of this actress. It had been the intention of William A. Brady, under whose management Miss George's career as a star has been promoted, that she should have an extended stay this season at his own theatre, which was built upon lines designed to fit the requirements of repertoire. The success of "Bought and Paid For" at this establishment however has been of such a cumulative character as to make it necessary that Miss George defer her appearance at the Playhouse until very late this winter or possibly well into next season. To have kept the actress out of New York under such indefinite conditions would have been an injustice to her natural desire to play here each year and a disappointment to the large number of amusement patrons who have become familiar with her artistry in "School For Scandal," "Divorcons," "Pretty Peggy," "A Woman's Way," and the other comedies with which she has been closely identified.

What promises to be the musical sensation of the season will be the Shuberts production of a new comic opera by Reginald DeKoven entitled "The Wedding Trip," which began its run Christmas Night at the Broadway theatre. The company will be the largest heard in New York, or America for that matter, in a musical play for many years, and will include Dorothy Jardon, Christine Nielsen, Dorothy Morton, Gwen Du-Bary, Grace Emmons, Edward Martindel, John McCloskey, Arthur Cunningham, Charles Angelo, Joseph Phillipps, George Madison, Charles Busbey and a chorus of over 65. The company has been selected by the composer himself, and is said to be the finest singing organization gathered together since the days of the original "Bostonians." DeKoven will be remembered for his delightful comic opera compositions such as "Robin Hood" and "Rob Roy," although in all he has written 32 pieces most of which have been produced.

Holiday crowds still fill the big New York Hippodrome twice daily. "Around the World," a series of gorgeous spectacles embracing every country on the face of the globe, provide delight for the eye and ear and make a specially fitting entertainment for this time of the year. There are seventeen special sets of scenery, 200 animals, 1200 people on the stage and more than 3000 costumes employed in the gigantic production. Tomorrow, Sunday evening, December 31, New Year's Eve, Mme. Emma Eames and Signor de Gorgoza will be heard at the Hippodrome in joint concert accompanied by the Russian Symphony Orchestra. This will be the only public concert given by Eames and Gorgoza in New York this season.

WILL VOID, CHURCHES WILL NOT GET MONEY.

Contrary to the expressed wishes of the testator, neither St. Paul's M. E. church of Ocean Grove, nor the First M. E. church of Asbury Park, will benefit under the will of Charles Herzog, late of Ocean Grove. To each of these churches Herzog in his will stpulated that $1,000 was to be held in trust, the principal to be invested and the interest to be paid annually "for the benefit of the poor and needy of the aforesaid churches."

The church authorities of the Grove and Park have just been notified that as the testator did not change his will after his second marriage, the instrument is rendered null and void. The will was executed on September 26, 1907. At that time Herzog was a resident of Ocean Grove, and operated the weighing scales on the North End Pavilion. Later he went to Jacksonville, Fla., where on August 18, 1908, he married a second time. He died on March 15, 1911. The widow claims that at the time of her husband's death he was a resident of Florida, and that any will made prior to her marriage is of no effect, in which contention she is upheld by the Florida law.

WOMEN ESCAPE TRIAL FOR $28,000 ROBBERY.

Bessie Roberts, of Chicago, and Mary Williams, of New York, will not have to stand trial for robbing Warner M. VanNorden, former banker, of $28,000 in cash while in a hallway of a building near the Waldorf-Astoria on the night of June 20, 1910. When their trial on an indictment charging grand larceny was called before Judge Rosalsky yesterday, Van Norden was not in court. The district attorney admitted that he had been unable to get Van Norden into court and stated that he had information that the former banker was now in China.

On motion of counsel for the defense the indictment was dismissed.

At the time of the arrest Van Norden swore that the women had enticed him into a hallway as he was going home, and while talking to him got his wallet and the money out of his inside vest pocket.

ROSELLE PARK HAS AN EPIDEMIC OF ROBBERIES.

The recent robberies throughout the county, particularly in the Roselle section, have spurred the local and county authorities to action. There have been at least fifteen "breaks" within the last month. The latest of these occurred early Thursday morning, when the homes of P. J. McGrath, Charles C. Hoffman and Charles Pawlik, of Westfield avenue, and Warren Crater, of Colonia road, Roselle, were entered and clothing and jewelry to the value of $40 taken.

The entire police force is at work, and Francis V. Lowden, one of the prosecutor's detectives, is also on the case. Mr. Lowden said yesterday that in each of the four houses entered the occupants had left the windows unlocked.

BURNS 175,000 POST CARDS.

Though the Post Office Department handled an unprecedented amount of holiday mail this year with little congestion or confusion, approximately 175,000 post cards bearing Christmas greetings were destroyed yesterday representing the wasted effort of the senders. Thousands of cards were thrown away because they bore mica or tinsel ornaments and were mailed in unsealed envelopes with penny stamps and with writing on them.

In addition to an average of 12,000 pieces of unmailable matter received daily by the Dead Letter Office, about 25,000 unclaimed post cards were confiscated.

SPORTS
News and Notes

FOOTBALL RULES SHOULD BE SIMPLIFIED.

That college football rules should be simplified in the reading, even if left unchanged in spirit, is the belief of all practical men in attendance at the sixth aanual meeting of the National Collegiate Athletic Association. This was made clear at last night's session when William S. Langford, of Trinity, who refereed both the Yale-Princeton and Yale-Harvard games last fall, was called upon. He said that the officials have to make an exceedingly careful study of the rules, and even then they find it difficult to interpret some of the passages. "The rules are understood only by a mere handful of men among the head coaches and officials," said Mr. Langford, "and as for the players, there is not a single player in the game who understands thoroughly the full playing code. The rules undoubtedly should be simplified." Glenn Warner, the coach of the Carlisle Indian team, also spoke for simplification of the rules.

"The Influence of College Athletics on Preparatory Schools," made it a brief against the proselytizing of schoolboy athletes by the colleges and college alumni associations. Dr. Scudder said that the alumni associations and the professional coach were the worst influences into which boys on the various school athletic teams were brought in contact. A resolution was passed and a committee was appointed to look into the subject presented by Dr. Scudder.

Barrow Signs Howell as Umpire.

Harry Howell, a former St. Louis pitcher, has been signed to umpire for the International League next season. It was learned yesterday afternoon that several of the International League teams have decided to do their spring training in the South. According to this information, the Newark Club will get in condition at Petersburg, Va.; Anniston, Ala., will be the scene of the Rochester team's early work; Toronto's club will work out at Macon, Ga., and Buffalo will train at Haddock, Ga.

Boxing Popular at Yale.

Yale University's boxing classes are growing bigger each year. Between 150 and 200 students will be enrolled after the holidays. At the present time there are more students taking up the manly art of self-defense at old Eli than at the corresponding time for many years.

Detroit Signs Sam Crawford.

Sam Crawford, right fielder, has signed a 1912 contract with the Detroit American League Baseball Club it was announced yesterday.

DAUGHTER MISSING, HAT RAISES MOTHER'S FEARS.

In fear that her daughter has met with foul play, or is held a prisoner somewhere, Mrs. Howard Sell, of 199 Howard street, Phillipsburg, yesterday asked the police of that place and of Easton, Pa., to search for the woman, Mrs. Catherine Shoemaker, twenty-six years old. She disappeared last Friday, when she left home about the same time William Oslin, of Phillipsburg, also disappeared. Oslin has not been seen since.

By the discovery of a woman's hat near the Northampton Silk Mill at Easton, identified by Mrs. Sell as having been worn by her daughter, the mother's fears have been aroused. Saturday night persons near the mill notified the Easton police that three men had been seen to carry a woman, apparently helpless, to the rear of the mill. By the time officers arrived the strangers had disappeared. A search of the premises revealed the woman's hat, which was taken to the station.

Mrs. Sell identified the hat when she visited the police station to ask aid in finding her daughter.

MATCH FALLS IN WASTE, WOMAN DIES OF BURNS.

Succumbing to burns received at her home in Elizabeth, Thursday afternoon, Mrs. Norah Burke, a widow, died in St. Elizabeth's Hospital, yesterday. Mrs. Burke lived on the top floor at 408 Madison avenue and was alone in the house at the time of the mishap. She had gone into the hall and had lighted a match which dropped into a box filled with waste paper.

Before she was aware of her danger the flames had ignited her dress. Her screams were heard by Detectives Daniel McCarthy and Harry Bunting, who were passing. They went to her assistance and endeavored to put out the fire, burning their hands severely. A physician was summoned who directed the victim's removal to the hospital.

Mrs. Burke was fifty-nine years old and came to Elizabeth five years ago from Worcester, Mass. Her husband was David Burke. She is survived by a nephew, Henry Murphy, a local merchant.

HUSBAND BURNED TO DEATH; WIFE VISITING.

Waretown, Dec. 30.—It was a sad homecoming Thursday for Mrs. Jesse Bunnell. During her absence at Rahway, where she went to visit her parents, her husband was burned to death in a fire which destroyed their home. His charred body was found on the second floor. It was one of the saddest tragedies that has occurred in Ocean county.

Mrs. Bunnell's father, S. S. Bareford, lives in Clinton street, Rahway, and Mrs. Bunnell had looked forward with a great deal of pleasure to the holiday visit. Her son, seven years old, was with her. Thursday Mrs. Bunnell received a telegram saying: "Your home burned Thursday night and Jesse was in it." She immediately started for home, being accompanied by her father and other members of the family.

It is believed that Mr. Bunnell upset a lighted lamp. No other explanation of the fire can be given.

FOUND STRANGLED TO DEATH IN WIRE FENCE.

When Lawrence Reilly, a farmer, of Flagtown, went out to feed his cows Thursday, he found the body of Alvah Wyckoff, with the head thrust through the close meshes of the wire "hog fence."

Wyckoff lived on Neshanic Mountain with his aged mother.

It is believed that he tried to cross Reilly's farm, ran into the "hog fence" and tried to force his way through it head first, when his neck became entangled in the wires in such a manner that he was strangled to death.

VALEDICTORY.

With this issue of The Daily Press, the writer's proprietorship of the paper ceases, and it passes into other hands.

As is but natural, a very genuine regret is mine in laying aside the work of a lifetime and retiring from active business, but that regret is tempered with the belief that the work has by no means been in vain; that the journal which my late brother, William L. Force, and I established a quarter of a century ago, and which I have been graciously permitted to maintain up to the present time, has before it a distinguished future, and that through the coming years it will prove more and more a potent factor for the public weal.

For over fifty years I have been engaged in the printing and publishing business in the city of Plainfield, and as one of the founders of The Constitutionalist in 1868, and of The Daily Press in 1887, I have stood guard throughout a wondrous series of changes in this community; a community which I love beyond words to express, and which holds everything nearest and dearest to me in this world.

During the two score and ten years of my active life I have seen the patriarchs of the little village of Plainfield gathered to their fathers; I have mourned as the comrades of my own generation, in ever quickening succession, have gone to their long home; and I have followed many a loved one of my own, as their dear forms have been tenderly laid away in God's Acre.

On the other hand, and in brighter view, I have seen those whom I knew as little children, grow into strong men and women, taking up the burdens laid upon them, and loyally performing their appointed tasks; I have seen Plainfield and North Plainfield emerge from straggling villages into great and thriving communities; I have seen the introduction of the railroad, the telegraph, the telephone, the gas, the electric light and the trolley systems into our busy life; I have seen the volunteer firemen with their little hand engines supplanted by our present well drilled and efficient fire departments; I have seen one lone sentry of the night give way to our thoroughly disciplined police force; I have seen one frame school house grow into our present incomparable school system, and best of all, where once I saw but a few small meeting houses, I now see, here, there and everywhere, stately temples devoted to the worship of the good God of us all.

And as I look back over the years that are gone, I am minded that they have left their imprint upon me, and that I must bow before their inexorable oncoming. What the future may hold, no man may say, but I hope that my friends and associates will say of me that I have earned my rest.

I wish, with all my heart, to thank those who have upheld me and my business in the busy times that are gone, and whose friendship for me I consider a prize beyond compare. To my own corps of assistants, from editor to office boy, I am glad to make public acknowledgement of appreciation. Without their co-operation and generous help, I could have done but little. My sincere wish is that the years ahead may hold much of joy and profit for them all.

For Mr. Morrow and Mr. Fort, into whose hands and management The Daily Press now passes, I bespeak your warm and loyal support. That their earnest purpose is to continue this paper as an exponent of all that is clean and fair; that the highest ideals in journalism will at all times inspire them, is my honest belief, and I therefore trust that rich success may be their portion.

In conclusion, let me wish each and all a happy and prosperous New Year; happy in chances for generous service, and prosperous in the rewards that come for work well done.

ALBERT L. FORCE.

Plainfield, N. J.,
December 30, 1911.

It is rather unfortunate that there should be any difference of opinion among the members of the Common Council as to the proper man to select for the city clerkship particularly when no one has questioned for one moment the high standard of efficiency maintained by James T. MacMurray during the many years he has occupied that office. The opposition to re-appointing the present incumbent is due, it seems, solely to the fact that he is not personally present at the city clerk's office during the day although it is admitted that he has a capable clerk there in his absence. Mr. MacMurray's services in his present capacity have been most valuable as any man at all familiar with the city's business will testify. Particularly are the councilmen, past and present, and all other municipal officials aware of his meritorious service. To dispense with such an experienced and splendidly qualified public servant would be a great mistake on the part of those entrusted with the duty of filling that office.

A Bit Premature.

Old Jake La Rue was a very crusty man, full of gouty aches, due to age and over-eating. He lost patience with his physician one day because the latter did not make enough fuss over the pain his patient suffered.

"Doctor," he thundered, "you do not seem to grasp the case! You talk as though there were nothing the matter with me, where as Iam suffering the torments of the lost!"

"What! Already?" queried the doctor, in apparent amazement."—Lippincott's.

THE FORUM.

Not For Salary Raise.

Editor, The Daily Press:

In your paper of Dec. 28 you have this to say: "We submit that Judge DeMeza is underpaid by his client, the City of Plainfield, and we believe that the taxpayers are of one mind in this matter."

Now as to whether or no the city judge is underpaid I am not competent to say, but one thing I do know, Judge DeMeza knew what the salary was; if not large enough why did he want the office? As for the taxpayers being of one mind that his salary should be increased to $1,600 a year, let me assure The Press that we are not. I am speaking for the small property-owner, the workingman, who have to work for anywhere from $1.50 to $2.00 per day and lose lots of time at that through inclemency of the weather or through sickness. In my own case taxes have increased over 50% in eight years and those who pretend to know assures me that the end is not yet.

How long at this rate before taxation in my case will spell next thing to confiscation? (A forced sale.) I think I voice the sentiments of quite a number of small home-owners when I say that, in the language of Mr. F. J. Shattle, it is about time for the City Fathers to "proceed along economical lines," and I hope the two incoming Democratic members will not let our money be voted away recklessly without protesting vigorously.

JAMES BORRUP.

December 29, 1911.

BLOUSE BEAUTY.

The high skirt cut "en Princesse" renders the blouse again possible, and there are many charming models to choose from. The Magyar blouse is still in favor, but is much improved, and no longer does one see the unsightly bagginess under the arm; groups of small tucks on the shoulder do away with the flat look at the top of arm that was neither becoming nor beautiful, and tucks or bands of embroidery are also used to simulate a box pleat down the front, and so obviate the wide, flat look so trying to most figures.

A chiffon blouse, in the new shaded effects, to tone with one's skirt is a very useful possession, and its charm is enhanced by the addition of a collar and cuffs of dull gold lace in which have been woven strands of silk of the same color as the chiffon or which have had inset small medallions of hand-painted silk.

A pretty notion for a guimpe, to relieve the sombreness of a dark cloth gown, is to have strips of point d'esprit and old, mellow-looking lace. The most popular shape for the guimpe is oblong, and the hard line of the dark cloth on the lace is softened by a tiny frill of the old lace. Round the base of the collar a narrow strip of black velvet, with a beautiful slide of quaint design, adds that little distinctive touch which makes a toilette, however simple, notable.

Scene From "The Man of the Hour" at Plainfield Theatre New Year's Day Matinee and Night.

SOLILOQUIES OF A BENEDICT

Most married people are living on a volcano that is apt to have an eruption at any time.

Most of us like to hear ourselves heard.

A new dress is food for an hour's conversation for a woman.

And they got married and scrapped ever afterward.

When a man share his success with his wife, both will succeed still more.

No, life is not an empty dream. It is filled with bill collectors, taxes, pain and troubles.

He Got Her.

A committee from the Legislature was visiting the State University. It was invited to take supper at the students' club, where most of the poor young fellows who had to work their way got board at cost. After supper the students called on the visitors for speeches.

One member from a remote county, who had made his reputation by "bein' a good talker," grew very eloquent in his encouragement to the boys to go on in spite of all difficulties.

"I know what it is, boys," he said, emphatically. "I had to dig my own education, but I shore got her."—Youth's Companion.

Tells Woman's Age.

We wonder what "punishment will fit the crime," perpetrated by a mere male modern scientist, who claims to have discovered a trick by which the age of any woman in normal health may be ascertained. The only nstrument required is an ordinary watch, and the wrist of the lady divulges the secret. It seems that in counting her pulse, if it registers sixty-nine beats a minute, her age is between 20 and 25 years old Another five years seventy-one beats go to the minute, and to the woman of 30 is permitted seventy beats.—Lady's Pictorial.

Dry Cleaning

like everything else, is cheapest when you get the best, for your garments are cleaned and pressed better—and therefore the work lasts longer and is better for your clothing or household furnishings.

Besides a saving, good cleaning is sanitary. Since this is so, get the best, for handwork in small tubs is sure to carry some dirt along from other clothing belonging to other people.

You don't experience anything of that nature in a first-class place.

Furs for New Year's

We offer to the people of Plainfield their greatest chance to buy furs at prices which no one can duplicate elsewhere. We give the people the advantage of low prices now, when cold weather is with us and their need of furs is greatest. Why should the people of Plainfield pay fancy prices for their furs when they can buy the same goods from the Charles Kurtzman Fur Store, each piece guaranteed and at prices far more satisfactory to them. When you are thinking of buying furs stop in here. Our prices are positively one-third cheaper than elsewhere. Quality the highest. Our being in town many years and having leased our store for many years to come prove that we mean every word we say.

AMONG OUR NEIGHBORS

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Steengraffe are entertaining Mr. and Mrs. Hays, of Oyster Bay, N. Y. Mrs. Hays is a sister of Mrs. Steengraffe.

William B. LaRue, of East Bound Brook, tax collector for Piscataway township, called on Constable William Reilly yesterday.

P. F. Kaine and William Hamilton will leave tonight for Wilkes-Barre, Pa., where they will spend New Year's with friends.

Vincent Santora, the local barber, and family expect to spend New Year's with friends in New York.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hogan leave today for Atlantic City, where they will spend New Year's.

Miss Nellie Pickering is entertaining friends from Scranton, Pa.

A Steengraffe spent yesterday with friends in New York.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS.

After its reputation for melodious charm had extended over all Europe and it was being sung in every music loving city of the continent with a record of two years' stay in Berlin, a year in Vienna and a year in St. Petersburg, "The Spring Maid" was brought to this country an assured success. The best proof that the saucy love tale has lost nothing of its piquancy in the translation into English is that New York theatregoers have demanded a second year of it and its many tuneful melodies in the metropolis. Criticisms have asserted the American adaptation by Harry B. and Robert S. Smith has brought a new sparkle to the quaint and unusual story. Werba & Luescher, the producers of "The Spring Maid," have selected the charming Russian prima donna, Gene Luneska, to create the role of the princess masquerading as a spring girl. "The Spring Maid" will be seen at the Plainfield theatre Monday night, January 8.

Supporting May Irwin in her new comedy, "She Knows Better Now," which will be seen in this city for the first time Thursdaly, night, January 5, will be found the following distinguished players: Arthur Byron, Hubert Wilkie, Henry Duggan, W. D. Corbett, Lionel Garriston, Hugh Jeffery, Muriel Hope, Mary K. Taylor and Florence Lindsey. This is perhaps the most able support May Irwin has ever assembled. Besides it is said that her comedy which was written by a young woman graduate of Radcliffe College, is built along more legitimate lines than other vehicles that have served her purposes in past seasons. Her managers, too, have supplies a beautiful setting which is in notably good taste. Irving Berlin who wrote "Alexander's Rag Time Band," has completed three new songs for the comedienne which will be sung here for the first time. The piece was produced under personal supervision of William Collier.

"The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary," in which Miss Helen Lowell will be seen at the Plainfield theatre, matinee and night, Friday, January 6, tells the story of an elderly New England spinster made young through the efforts of her scapegrace nephew and his friends in New York. It is one of the most delightfully amusing plays seen on the stage in years and Miss Lowell brings to it all the qualifications as a comedienne that made her famous as Miss Hazy in "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" and Lizzie in "The Lottery Man." She is supported by a Broadway company including Charles Compton, Eugene Savoyard, Robert Graham, W. N. Roberts, Joseph Wright, John Rodgers, Etta Bryan, Emily Lorraine, Phyllis Carrington, Katherine Belknap and others.

Powder Mill Precautions.

The one thing to guard against in a powder mill is a spark of fire. To avoid that the utmost precautions are taken. In the first place, the plant is located so far from a railroad track that a spark from a passing locomotive can never reach it. The grass and weeds are not permitted to grow high enough around it so that when they become dry a fire could reach the plant by that means. Strangers are kept off the grounds. Smoking is not permitted in or near the plant. The workmen are not permitted to carry matches. They are not allowed to wear shoes with pegs or nails in them. They wear "powder boots," made with soft soles that have no pegs or nails in them. An iron nail in a boot sole might strike a spark on the floor. Iron is not permitted to touch iron on the plant. This is one inflexible law of all powder mills. The hammers that are used are all of wood or brass or copper, which cannot strike a spark. The cogwheels that run together are of brass or copper for the same reason. The journals of the wheels are of copper or brass.—Kansas City Star.

Famous Snuff Takers.

The eighteenth century was the age of snuff taking par excellence. The custom was general among all classes of people. It was an act of politeness for well bred men to offer their snuffboxes to well bred women. Women themselves carried their own boxes and interchanged pinches with the gentlemen. At fashionable dinner parties after the cloth was removed snuffboxes were passed around. Pope and Bolingbroke, Swift and Congreve, Addison and Steele, all indulged in the pleasures of snuff. Dr. Johnson carried his snuff in the capacious pockets of his waistcoat and would convey it to his nose without stint. He could not abide the narrow confines of a box. Frederick the Great resembled him in this respect. Both Napoleon and Wellington were prodigious snuff takers, but Washington indulged only moderately. Jefferson was fond of snuff, as his waistcoat and frill often showed. Henry Clay was another famous snuff taker and often needed the stimulus of a pinch when making a speech.—Pearson's.

Nothing to Wear.

The fact is that women are uncomfortable if they are not fashionably dressed. No man understands the subtle and complex significance of the phrase "nothing to wear." Witness the distressed but utterly puzzled expression that overspreads a man's face at the words. He knows that his wife or his sister looks charming in "the blue one" or "the lace one" or "the one with the jet." She has looked charming in it often enough for him at last to identify it, and that, unless he is an exception to his sex, is very often. He is cheerfully getting into his evening coat for the fiftieth time. No wonder he does not realize that some frock which the first time it is worn made for triumph should the tenth time make for humiliation. But the most strong minded woman—the woman who will, if necessary, go to the opera on a gala night in a coat and skirt—at heart exonerates the woman who so foolishly, for the reason mentioned, stays at home.—Atlantic Monthly.

Time For Tact.

"I won $200 in that game last night," confided a friend.

"Good for you!" we cried. "I want to tell some folks about that—they"—

"Now, look here! You keep still about it. I wouldn't let my wife know about that game for anything."

"But you told me that your wife was a good fellow and let you play poker all you wanted to."

"She does. She never kicks about my sitting in a game, and even if I lose she cheers me up and"—

"Well, I thought so. Why shouldn't I tell her about this game?"

"Why, you chump! I won $200—that's why. And I need the money. If my wife asks where I was, tell her I was out losing $50 on a prizefight."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Seen on an Ostrich Farm.

It is no uncommon thing to see a male ostrich strutting about followed by three or four distinst broods, all of different sizes. When the incubating process is completed the cock bird leads his young ones off and if he meets another proud papa engages in a terrific combat with him. The vanquished bird retires without a single chick, while the other, surrounded by the two broods, walks away triumphantly.

Thought of the Kitty.

"John," said Mrs. Gayman, with a knowing twinkle in her eye, "you seem to be exceedingly kind to animals."

"Why—er—how do you mean?" asked her husband.

"In your sleep last night you said, 'Take out something for the kitty.'"—Exchange.

Bright Johnny.

Teacher (to class in geography)—Johnny, the Hudson river flows into New York bay. That is its mouth. Now, where is its source? Johnny (after careful deliberation)—At the other end, ma'am. — Cleveland Plain Dealer.

More Than Serious.

Eulalia (elderly heiress)—Do you think the baron regards me seriously? Rosa—Seriously? Why, my dear, every time I mention you he looks positively sad.—Fliegende Blatter.

Quarters and Dollars.

Jack—Why did you give up your bachelor quarters? Tom—Because I'm going to marry dollars.—Birmingham News.

OFFICIAL MINUTES OF THE BOARD OF FREEHOLDERS.

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the county of Union was held at the Courthouse, Elizabeth, N. J., on Thursday, December 7, 1911, at 2:30 p. m.

Members present—Director Cady and Freeholders Acken, Bourdon, Crane, Darby, Doane, Fay, Gruener, Hall, Hennessy, Jones, Krouse, Meisel, Perry, Pierson, Randolph, Smith, Swain, Teller.

Absent—Freeholder Wilbur.

The reading of the minutes of November 2, 1911, was on motion by Freeholder Smith dispensed with and they were approved as per printed copies on members' desks.

Communications.

Board of Chosen Freeholders, Courthouse, Elizabeth, N. J.:

Gentlemen—At a regular meeting of the Roselle Borough Council held on the third inst., a petition was presented to council asking for a bridge across the brook at Prosper avenue, going southerly through Baltimore avenue.

This being a natural waterway, council is referring the matter to your honorable body and trusts that the proper action will be taken to relieve conditions as they exist at present at that point.

Very truly yours,
J. F. OSTRANDER.

November 13, 1911.

On motion by Freeholder Smith this request was referred to the member of the board from Roselle to report on same at the next meeting of the board.

County Board of Freeholders, Elizabeth, N. J.:

Gentlemen—On behalf of the Township Committee and the inhabitants of the Township of New Providence, I beg to call your attention to a condition the relief of which it seems should come from you. You are removing dirt from the road which you are building leading to the Tuberculosis Sanatorium and the carters are placing the same on the banks of "Bonnie Burn," and the half dozen of more trucks used in conveying the dirt have cut Plainfield avenue from the point of the new road to the Fullerton bridge, all to pieces, and the same will soon become impassable. I do not know but what with others you have a perfect right to use the road for legitimate purposes, but the condition confronts us all:

First—The road is very narrow.

Second—The carters are spilling the dirt."

Third—We are able to raise only a trifle each year to keep our twenty odd miles of roads in repair, $800 being the total appropriation of the township for the year.

Fourth—It is the main artery from the Passaic Valley to Plainfield and is used extensively by automobiles, which we welcome.

Fifth—The automobile license money is passed over to the various counties, and I am informed that Union county received $8,000 this year.

Sixth—Your purchase of the sanatorium has taken away from us a large measure of ratables upon which we collect a tax of about $100 a year, which through your ownership has now been cut off.

Seventh—Plainfield avenue itself is lighted by electricity at the expense of the township. It is the desire of the people of the township that this road be made into a county road or a State aid road, whatever you are pleased to call it, at as early a date as possible believing that such a road will facilitate both your interests and the interests of the people and of those who pass through the township from Plainfield and elsewhere to the Passaic Valley. Any proposition, however, to build a road which will add anything to the taxes of our township will not be satisfactory to us.

I trust that your board will take up this matter for investigation and give it your attention or repair the damages which your workmen are now doing and oblige.

Yours very truly,
WILLIAM JEFFERY,
Chairman Township Committee,
New Providence Township.

November 21, 1911.

On motion by Freeholder Perry this communication was received and ordered placed on file.

Hon. James C. Calvert, Clerk, Union County, Elizabeth, N. J.:

Dea. Sir:—We desire to call your attention to Section 10, Chapter 201, Laws of New Jersey for 1911, which makes it obligatory upon all counties in the State to be represented by an official superintendent of weights and measures. The object, therefore, of this letter is to have you take the subject up with the proper authorities as early as possible.

As soon as the superintendent has been appointed you will forward his name, together with a certified copy of the result authorizing his appointment to this department for our files.

Trusting you will give this matter the attention and consideration it so heartily merits, and assuring you of our appreciation of your efforts, we beg to remain,

Very truly yours,
Department of Weights and Measures,
WM. L. WALDRON, Supt.

November 25, 1911.

On motion by Freeholder Krouse this communication was received and ordered placed on file.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union County:

Gentlemen — The Pennsylvania Railroad having secured proper municipal authority of the city of Rahway for the elevation of its railroad through that city, thereby eliminating the present grade crossings therein, which work necessitates moving the bridge over the Rahway River in Bridge street to a position somewhat eastward from its present location, hereby requests your permission so to do and the necessary action of your board to authorize the same.

The approximate new location of the bridge is shown on the blue print attached hereto. We have acquired the necessary property to relocate Bridge street, as shown on the map herto attached, and are authorized to do so by the city of Rahway, by ordinance of the Mayor and Common Council of said city, and by agreement entered into conforming to such ordinance, such agreement having been duly executed and filed with the city clerk of the city of Rahway.

The description of the relocation of Bridge street is embodied in paragraph twenty-three (23) in the agreement referred to, as shown in printed copy of the same herewith. The Pennsylvania Railroad Company agrees to pay all the necessary expense of the construction of the required masonry for the relocation of said bridge and the moving of the same, together with the paving approaching the relocated bridge as per paragraph number thirty-two (32) in the agreement with the city of Rahway.

Yours truly,
F. L. SHEPPARD,
General Superintendent.

December 6, 1911.

On motion by Freeholder Gruener this request was referred to a special committee of five to be appointed by the Director, the County Attorney and the County Engineer, with the request that they report back at the next meeting of the board. The Director appointed as said committee Freeholders Gruener, Randolph, Teller, Bourdon and Hennessy.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union County:

Gentlemen — The Pennsylvania Railroad Company having secured the proper municipal authority of the city of Rahway for the elevation of its railroad through that city, thereby eliminating the present grade crossings therein, which work necessities the changing of the crossing of St. George's avenue, a county road, hereby request your permission and necessary action of your board to make such changes, as shown on map herewith, eliminating the present grade crossing at that point by raising the tracks of the railroad about twenty-one (21) feet and constructing a concrete arch bridge of sixty (60) feet right angle span, paving the roadway with brick for a width of fifty (50) feet and providing sidewalk on the westerly grade thereof ten (10) feet in width, having a flagged or concrete surface four (4) feet in width and properly curbed, as per paragraph number fourteen (14) in agreement with the city of Rahway above referred to and to vacate such portion of St. George avenue as set forth, said paragraph 14 being a strip ten (10) feet in width each side of the present width of St. George avenue.

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company agrees to pay the expense of the changes proposed, the cost of the bridge, as well as the cost of the grading, paving, flagging and curbing, and to complete the work to your satisfaction and that of the County Engineer of Union county.

Yours truly,
F. L. SHEPPARD,
General Superintendent.

On motion by Freeholder Smith this report was received and ordered placed on file.

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders, Elizabeth, N. J.:

Gentlemen—Your Committee to whom was referred the question of appointment of county superintendent of weights and measures, under Chapter 201 of the Laws of 1911, beg to report that we have considered the matter and are of the opinion that, under the provisions of Section 10 of said act, which, among other things, reads as follows, "The governing bodies of the respective counties shall designate the county superintendent," it is incumbent upon this board to make such appointment.

Section 16 of the act above referred to provides that the jurisdiction of the county superintendent of weights and measures and his assistants, if any are appointed, shall extend throughout the county for which they are appointed, except there be appointed municipal superintendents, as provided, in which case the jurisdiction of the county superintendent will not extend to such municipalities, providing, however, that the county superintendent may, as directed by the State superintendent, make official inspections in any municipalities.

We are informed that one of the cities of this county, to wit, Elizabeth, has already provided a municipal superintendent; if this be so, the labors of the county superintendent of the county of Union would be somewhat reduced—that is, his labor would be less by reason thereof.

We would therefore recommend that this board adopt a resolution, in accordance with Section 11 of the act above referred to, to appoint a county superintendent of weights and measures for the county of Union at a salary not exceeding twelve hundred dollars per annum.

HENRY KROUSE,
PETER H. MEISEL,
J. LOGAN FAY,
W. R. HENNESSY.

On motion of Freeholder Doane this report was received and ordered placed on file and the recommendations contained therein were on roll call adopted unanimously.

J., would report that bids were received for the construction of the two bridges, and the work was awarded to Alexander Kerr & Son, at $877 for one bridge and $1,097 for the other bridge, being a total sum of $1,974.

There is also some further work to be done on certain other bridges on the same stream, in small repairs, which will cost probably about $250.

The original appropriation for the work was $1,750, and your committee would recommend that this appropriation be increased to the total appropriation of $2,225, being a sum of $475 more than has already been appropriated.

Signed by the committee,
HENRY KROUSE,
AARON D. CRANE,
J. LOGAN FAY.

This report was on motion by Freeholder Meisel received and ordered placed on file, and the recommendations contained therein were on roll call adopted unanimously.

Doan's Kidney Pills help the kidneys.
Here's proof that you can verify.

A. K. Mattis, 127 West Fourth street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "I gave Doan's Kidney Pills my endorsement five years ago after receiving a cure through their use and today I confirm all I then said in their praise. My cure has been permanent." (Statement given January 20, 1911).

On August 28, 1905, Mr. Mattis said: "I was troubled for years by a dull backache and pains in my head. I believe that my trouble was due in a great measure to a bad fall I had. Nothing seemed to help me and when I read of the good work Doan's Kidney Pills were doing in similar cases, I got a supply at Randolph's Drug Store. Their use drove away my aches and pains and my experience gave proof of their merits."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Golden Gate Fogs.

The fogs of the Pacific and especially those on the coast of California, Oregon and Washington present some characteristic features of their own. They are low lying, dense and of frequent and regular occurrence and have been the cause directly and indirectly of a large percentage of marine disasters in the vicinity of San Francisco. Owing to the general movement of the air from the sea toward the land and the climate of the great interior valley, fog is frequent and well marked. In summer the afternoon sea fog varies in depth from 100 to 1,700 feet, but it rarely reaches far inland. On some afternoons the velocity of the wind at San Francisco rises with almost clocklike regularity to about twenty-two miles an hour, and a solid wall of fog, averaging 1,500 feet in height, comes through the Golden Gate, causing a fall in temperature to about that of the sea—namely, 55 degrees F. The upper level of the fog can be plainly seen from the hills in the vicinity. Above the fog level the air is cloudless, and the afternoon temperature ranges from 80 degrees F. to 90 degrees F.—Chicago News.

Saved by Irving's Recital.

Sir Henry Irving, through the realistic portrayal of the sufferings of a haunted man by his recital of "Eugene Aram," caused one human being to be saved years of agony and suspense. A murder had been committed in a certain neighborhood, and a man had been seen in the vicinity where the crime was perpetrated. He himself knew that he was innocent, but feared to face or run the risk of a trial. Therefore, although cleverly disguised, he ventured out only at night. One night he went to the gallery of a theater where Henry Irving was playing and in listening to the recital of "Eugene Aram" lost sight of the fact that Eugene really did the murder. The great actor so vividly imparted the happy sense of relieved conscience which follows confession that the following day he gave himself up to the police. The evidence was not strong enough to convict, so he was able to bravely face the world instead of crawling about the earth the most miserable of all creatures, a haunted man. —London Sketch.

A Torrent of Meteors.

The great shower of stars which took place on Nov. 13, 1833, and was seen over the greater part of the United States extended over the north Atlantic and from the great lakes to the West Indies and Central America. An old paper of that time, describing the scene as it appeared at the falls of Niagara, says, "The awful roar of the cataract filled the mind of the spectator with an infinitely heightened sense of sublimity when its waters were lighted up by the glare of the meteoric torrent in the sky." In southern Indiana, where the display was fully as brilliant, many persons were badly frightened, believing the end of the world, so often predicted, was at hand. As the end of the world did not come, the thirteenth day of the month was thereafter for several years marked down as a lucky day in the calendar.—Indianapolis News.

The Fighting Turk.

The Turk is a great fighting man, perhaps the best in the world—that is, on land, for as a sailor he has never shone. He is a great fighter because he is physically a strong man. The Turkish peasantry, from whom the army is recruited, have to work hard for a bare living, and there is no room among them for weaklings. Therefore the Turkish soldier is capable of tremendous feats of endurance and can live on nothing or next door to it. Then he is accustomed to fighting almost from babyhood. On the frontiers and in the country districts of Turkey there is always trouble going on.

Death in battle has no terrors for him, for by his religion it assures him of paradise.—London Answers.

A Bishop's Stories.

Preaching at St. Paul's, Harringay, just outside London, one Sunday night, Dr. Ingram, the bishop of London, told two stories which attracted widespread attention. He said that in the congregation at a confirmation service he once conducted in Westminster abbey was a girl of thirteen. During the service she said to her mother, "Do you see them, mother?" "See what?" asked the mother, and the child replied, "Angels on each side of the bishop." "It is said," commented the bishop, "that the pure in heart shall see God, and is it not therefore possible that a child perfectly pure could see things that an adult could not see?"

The bishop also told a story of five girls whose father, feeling ill, went to lie down. The youngest child was sent to bed, but ran from her room, calling "Come out. There are two angels walking up the staircase!" Later the child called out again, "The angels are walking down the staircase, and father's walking between them!" All five girls, said the bishop, saw the same thing, and, going into their father's room, they found him dead.

Odd Schools.

"Freak" schools were the subject recently of an article in a provincial paper, and we are confident that few of our readers will have heard of some of these very odd educational establishments. It appears that in Belgium before qualifying for a post as sexton one must pass an examination in a school of gravediggers, while in Paris there is a school for judges, where make believe trials are carried out in detail before lawyers of repute.

Russia has a school for policemen, which it is, we believe, the pet ambition of the young and aspiring burglar to join. In an adjoining museum "the pupils make themselves familiar with jimmies, drills, chisels and other tools used by professional thieves."

Still more ambiguous are the merits of the course of instruction given in the casino at Monte Carlo. Here is evolved the professional croupier. Some six months' training is all that is needed to produce a finished specimen of these useful articles, which are turned out at the rate of nearly a hundred a year.—University Correspondent.

Work of the Heart.

The average human heart is a suction and force pump of remarkable capacity and durability. Each of its two chambers contains on an averge seventy-five cubic centimeters, or 4,575 cubic inches. The total contents of 150 centimeters, or 9.15 cubic inches, being discharged eighty-one times a minute, corresponding to a delivery of 12,150 cubic centimeters (12.15 liters), or 741 cubic inches per minute, 729 liters, or 25.73 cubic feet per hour. Expressed in the United States gallons, the average human heart pumps through it each hour 192.6 gallons; each day, 4,622.4 gallons; each year, 1,687,176 gallons, and in the adult life time of a man living to the age sung by the psalmist, 84,358,800 gallons. The pressure against which this fluid is pumped is equivalent to that of a water column two and a half meters, or, say, 8 feet 2.42 inches high; otherwise expressed, about 0.242 atmosphere or 3.55 pounds avoirdupois per square inch.—Schientific American.

Scallops.

How many people know anything about the toothsome scallop? The little round bits of white meat we see in the market are really the hearts of bivalves. In other words, the only edible part of a scallop is the muscular tissue that controls the opening and shutting of its shell. The name scallop is derived from the fluted shape of the creature's shell. These are very thin. In fact, the weight of the scallop is so near that of an equal volume of water that it floats by the very slight propulsive force given by the opening and closing of the shell; hence scallops have the reputation of a shellfish that swims. They are caught in scoop nets as they float along with the tide.—New York Tribune.

Perfectly Safe.

A tourist in a remote part of Ireland, having stayed the night at a wayside inn not usually frequented by visitors, informed the landlord in the morning that his boots, which had been placed outside his room door to be cleaned, had not been touched.

"Ah, sure," said the landlord, "and you moight put your watch and chain outside your room door in this house and they wouldn't be touched."—London Mail.

The Thrifty French.

Every little while the French farmer or peasant sends a few francs as savings to his banker in Paris or some other city. The banker holds the fund till there is enough to buy a bond or some other security, when it is shipped to the farmer or peasant and goes into the family collection. The French savings bank is the stocking, and it is stuffed with securities from all over the world.

Affinities.

"That gossipy Mrs. Gaddy has such a mean, sneaking little dog for a pet."

"I suppose she took him out of sympathy."

"How do you mean?"

"Why, isn't the dog a backbiter too?"—Baltimore American.

Ignorance.

Mrs. Kaller—Cooks are such ignorant things nowadays. Mrs. Justwed—Aren't they? They can't do the simplest things. I asked mine to make some sweetbreads the other day and she said she couldn't.—Washington Star.

Opposition inflames the enthusiast, never converts him.—Schiller.

THE HUMAN BRAIN.

Scientists Claim It Is Distributed All Over the Body.

Once it was believed that the gray matter of the brain was confined within the skull. Now physicians and other students of physiology tell us that this same "gray" matter is found in other parts of the body—for instance, in the tips of the fingers of the blind, where the thinking has been consciously much exercised. One physician tells us there is little brain in the throat, and it often seems to be an independent thinking organ. An operator on the throat must become a friend and confidant of that little brain or his operation will not be successful. The little brain has a memory, and if the operator's hand has slipped and misused that throat the brain in the head may consent to the operation and desire it, but that little throat brain will resist even if it be months after the mistake, and if the operator persists the patient may be thrown into convulsions, such is the memory of that little brain.

And what has been discovered in the throat and in the finger tips will yet be discovered throughout the whole body, because we will consciously think in every part. At present much of the thinking is involuntary, not with the co-operation of the eye or central consciousness, but self knowledge brings you where you co-operate with yourself, and there are harmony and unity in all the activities of the body because of confidence throughout in the master of it.

The cells of your body can be seen as little selves or people, forming a government over which you exercise good rule by becoming acquainted with your people, educating public sentiment in noble thinking, putting away internal strife, hatred and other forms of inharmony. Certain persons suffer because they have hatred and despised parts and functions of their bodies. Hatred withers, paralyzes and congests. No one can do his best under disapproval—seek out a way to think kindly, generously, truly of yourself.—Detroit Free Press.

MORBID BLUSHING.

A Terrible Affliction That May Be Helped by Convex Glasses.

The essential cause of morbid blushing is a morbid temperament, says Dr. H. Campbell, M. R. C. P., in the Practitioner. A normal person may blush, but he is not greatly disturbed by it. He may be disconcerted for the time; but, the storm over, he soon forgets all about it. The morbid blusher, on the other hand, suffers mental torture. The blush throws him into a state of panic such as in the normal person can only be excited by some desperate experience. The anguish is so great that he lives in constant dread of being exposed to the conditions which excite it. This dread colors his entire life. He wakes up with it; he falls asleep with it. It haunts his dreams.

Morbid blushing is, in truth, a terrible affliction. In its severe forms, Dr. Campbell says, it always calls up thoughts of suicide and not infrequently actually prompts it.

The female sex is more apt to blush than the male sex, although more men than women seek medical help for morbid blushing. Those who suffer from the complaint may gain some confidence by using strong convex glasses. The artificial myopia thus induced by blurring the surroundings tends to diminish self consciousness."

In other words, distort the faces of people by means of spectacles and it will not matter to you how they look at you, for you will not notice them.

Russia's Parquetry Floors.

Most flooring put down in Russia is parquetry, and it is generally oak. Even in the unpretentious houses and flat buildings this parquetry is to be found. In some cases, of course, the finish is not so fine as in others, and in ordinary buildings the designs are not so elaborate. One of the most noticeable features of a Russian house is that rugs and carpets are used for wall decorations instead of floor coverings. Floor polishing by professionals, who come regularly once every week or ten days, is considered a part of the regular routine of running a house.—Detroit Free Press.

Churchyard Yew Trees.

One reason given why very old yew trees are so often found in country churchyards is that originally these trees were planted to supply the peasants with wood for their bows, for in lawless times it was soon discovered that the only place where trees would be safe from nightly marauders was the churchyard, where the most hardened thief dared not venture between darkness and dawn.—London Mail.

A Philosopher.

"My! You wanted fried potatoes, didn't you?" said the careless waitress as the customer in the restaurant finished his meal and rose to leave.

"That's all right," answered the patient man. "I've wanted so many things all my life that I didn't get I'm used to it."—Newark News.

Social Parasite.

"You needn't brag about your social connections if you do belong to an aristocratic family. Don't you work for a living?"

"I work! How do I work?"

"Everybody you can." — Baltimore American.

An Exception.

"They say that lightning never strikes twice in the same place."

"Doesn't it? I know a woman who's been married for her money three times."—Detroit Free Press.

Your Playing The Event of the Evening

IF you were to play a selection at home this evening on the Virtuolo, for a few music loving friends, you would deserve all the praise they would surely give you.

On the Virtuolo Player-Piano all the fine effects you can produce are a credit to yourself. Speaking strictly and without exaggeration, you put all the life and expression into the music yourself. You are not merely operating an automatic music machine.

The VIRTUOLO

is a new type of player-piano. It is constructed so that you can have the pleasure and satisfaction of a skilled pianist who plays on the keyboard. It does not rob you of the real joy of piano playing.

In the Virtuolo there are eighty-eight "air muscle fingers." They are sensitive; they respond. They reflect your ideas and moods, so that the music comes from you. The new Acsolo buttons allow you to emphasize any part of the music as you come to it, just as quickly as the inspiration seizes you.

When you hear the Virtuolo's music it seems scarcely possible. You scarcely realize that the tone, touch and accent effects are all your own, because you are playing instinctively, and the air muscles which work the fingers are only reflecting your wishes.

No other player-piano is made on the Virtuolo principle.

No other player-piano permits instinctive playing.

Call at the store and see the Virtuolo. Play it yourself and realize the marvelous truth of what we've been telling you. Or let us send a Virtuolo to your home for you to try, without any purchase obligation.
